PROVIDE MANAGEMENT AS WELL AS PROPERTY

Many an intelligent man makes a will and then congratulates himself upon having done his whole duty by his family. He has done well, to be sure, but not well enough. Multitudes of inexperienced beneficiaries under a will have been seriously burdened and handicapped by the sudden acquisition of property the care of which they do not understand. AIRMAN DROPS NOTE ON BERLIN

French Aviator Crosses Germany in Greatest Flight of the War.

ENGLISH WIN AT SEA

Running Fight Between Destroyers in North Sea—German Boats Were Hit Repeatedly, But Reached Belguim Coast.

Paris, July 24.—A French army aviator has flown across Germany, dropping a proclamation on the city of Berlin. News of this world-astonishing flight was given out officially today. The airman, Sub-Lieutenant A. Marchal, was compelled to land within 60 miles of the Russian lines near Cholm, in Poland, where he was made a prisoner by the Austrians. In the course of his long flight, the official announcement says Aviator Marchal covered about 1,300 kilometers or approximately 780 miles in a straight line.

Weather Stays the French.

Bad weather hindered operations on that section of the Somme front south of Harecourt, where the French armies are operating. The War Office in its communique today stated that the night was calm. During the past ten days the French on the Verdun front have captured 800 prisoners. Artillery duels continue at various points along the line.

British Win Running Fight.

London, July 24.—British naval forces were victorious in a running fight with German destroyers in the North Sea west of the coast of Holland. The scene of the naval engagement was off Schouwen Bank, about 40 miles northwest of Zeebrugge.

The statement follows:

"At midnight Saturday, near North Hinderlight, some of our light forces sighted three enemy destroyers which retired before any damage was inflicted upon them. Subsequently off Schouwen Bank six enemy destroyers were engaged in a running fight, were repeatedly hit but succeeded in reaching the Belgian coast. One of our vessells was hit once. An officer and man were slightly wounded. There was no other damage or casualty."

Forced Back 12 Miles.

A despatch from Petrograd says that the Germans have been forced back 12 miles at one point on the Riga front. Gains for the Russians are claimed on a front running from the Gulf of Riga to Uxkull, a distance of more than 30 miles, the biggest advance being made along the coast line.

British Still Gain Ground.

Further ground has been gained by the British in High Wood and at Guillemont on the Somme front, the War Office announced today. The greater part of Pozieres, which was entered by the Austrians on Suday, is now in possession of the British. Sixty prisoners and two guns were captured.

Report a Submarine Battle.

The Hague, July 24.—British trawlers arriving at Ymuiden today brought word of a fight between two German submarines and armed patrol boats in the North Sea off the coast of Scotland. The submarines fired upon the patrol boats but the latter responded, driving the under water craft away.

English Answer Ineffective.

Washington, July 24.—The informal memorandum from the British Foreign Office replying to certain specific cases taken up in the recent American protest on mail seizures has been received by Acting Secretary of State Polk. State Department officials regard the memorandum as ineffective and say that it does not meet the charges brought forth in the two cases under review.

COLQUITT IS LEADING IN TEXAS PRIMARY

Dallas, Tex., July 24.—Former Governor O. B. Colquitt is leading the race for Senator in the count of the 450,000 votes cast in Saturday's Democratic primary. Dr. S. P. Brooks is slightly ahead of Senator C. A. Culberson, seeking re-election. A constitutional prohibition amendment proposal had a lead of about 5,000.

MRS. MARY WILLIAMS.

Mrs. Mary Williams, a colored domestic, whose home had been in Westfield, died yesterday in Muhlenberg Hospital, where she had been undergoing medical treatment. She was about sixty years of age and leaves no local relatives. As far as can be ascertained she is survived by a sister, Eva Mead, whose whereabouts are unknown. The body was removed to the morgue, where it is awaiting identification.

$50 FINE IS IMPOSED.

On the complaint of Chief Marshal George Weiss, of North Plainfield, Leon M. Livingston, of Grove street, was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand this morning and fined $50 for permitting gambling at his home. No other arests were made. The fine was paid.

IT'S A GIRL.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin Lawrence, of Jackson avenue, the borough, are parents of a little girl that arrived at their home Sunday morning.

CASE WILL GO BEFORE ENTIRE SUPREME COURT

Justice Minturn Consents to Counsel's Request in Madison Ave. Widening.

Justice Minturn, before whom argument was heard recently in the case of former Councilman Fred Endress against the city on a rule to show cause why he should not be permitted to review the proceedings in the Madison avenue widening matter, has, upon request of G. W. V. Moy, of counsel for Mr. Endress, consented to have the matter presented to the entire Supreme Court in November.

Following the recent hearing before Justice Minturn the latter denied Mr. Moy's application for a writ to review the proceedings. The latter believes that if the case is allowed to go before the entire court he will be given a favorable decision. In the meantime the city is preparing to widen Madison avenue, as Mr. Moy's latest action does not act as a stay in the proceedings.

MEN OR BORDER ASK FOR A PHONOGRAPH

Also Want Records and Some Illustrated Magazines.

(Special to the Press)

Douglas, Arizona, July 18.—The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. building needs music. Already it is the most popular spot in all the camp of 4,500 men, but a phonograph and some good records would mean much to the New Jersey militiamen on duty here.

George McGrew, speaking for the building, told a Press representative that copies of The Press and of other daily papers were going the round of the camps daily, and that no more are needed. Magazines, not too ancient, will be appreciated by the men and illustrated papers are always popular. Mr. McGrew also suggested that good colored lithographs of artistic and interesting subjects be sent to decorate the Plainfield building.

Mr. McGrew has arranged for the use of a piano and as there are several in the regiment who are accomplished musicians and who can sing there is usually a concert at the building. However the men want a phonograph and some good records and they are appealing through the columns of the Press. They ask that any records sent be prepaid, as the salary of a soldier does not permit of indulgence in such luxuries.

FAVORS ACKERMAN FOR U. S. SENATOR

"Preparedness" in New York Sun Believes Plainfielder An Ideal Candidate.

Recently, there has been considerable comment regarding the possibility of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, becoming a candidate for United States Senator on the Republican ticket this fall. Thus far Mr. Ackerman has been no-committal on the subject, preferring not to discuss his re-entry into politics as a candidate. Under the caption "The Jersey Senator," a writer who signed himself "Preparedness," had the following to say in The Sun of yesterday:

"To the Editor of the Sun—Sir: A news paragraph from Trenton appeared in The Sun suggesting that in the interest of Republican success next November the various Republican candidates for United States Senator retire; that the party in New Jersey unite on one candidate for that great and powerful office.

"The idea appears to be a good one and should it be carried out an excellent man for the place would be Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield. All factions could unite on Mr. Ackerman, because his personality is of that character which does not cause political bitterness.

"This, however, does not imply that he is not a strong man, but, on the contrary, it is the greatest evidence of power. The proof of his strength as a legislator lies in the splendid constructive and progressive record which Mr. Ackerman made during his term of six years in the Senate of New Jersey, and if he is sent by the people of New Jersey to the United States Senate the State and country will have reason to be proud of that fact.

"PREPAREDNESS.

"Plainfield, N. J., July 22."

BOROUGH COURT CASES.

Charles Herley, an habitual offender, was arrested by Chief Weiss Saturday, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. When arraigned in court this morning he was ordered out of the borough.

On complaint of Health Officer Louis Oliff, Mrs. Rose Terry, of 30 Race street, and Mrs. Trolen, of Grove street, were arraigned in court this morning. They were charged with not conforming to the health regulations and were fined $5 each.

CLARK J. MARTIN DIES ON BORDER

First Plainfielder to Give Life in Service of His Country.

VICTIM OF SUNSTROKE

Pneumonia Made His Attack Critical—Sister Notified at Lake Hopatcong—Funeral Services to Be Held in New York.

A telegram from McAllen Texas, received last night by Miss Missouri Martin, at Lake Hopatcong, where she had been for the past two weeks, conveyed the information that her brother, Mounted Orderly Clark G. Martin, formerly of Plainfield, died Saturday afternoon at the First Field Hospital of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, of New York, at McAllen, Texas. Martin came to Mission with Company D, of the Sixty-ninth, last Tuesday, suffering intensely from sunstroke and lobular pneumonia, and was removed the next day to the hospital. Each day his condition became more critical and his temperature hovered around 108 degrees the greater part of his illness. For three days he had been unconscious and all that medical science could afford was done in an effort to save the life of the young man. His case was under the especial attention of Chief Medical Officer, Captain Charles Duseith, of the field hospital, and two enlisted medical students acted as nurses in watching him. During the entire time Martin made a nervy fight. He could not be fed and even water was injected intravenously in an effont to save his life.

The body was taken to a McAllen undertaking establishment and will be shipped to the Sixty-ninth Regimental Armory in New York, tomorrow. It will arrive here about Friday or Saturday and funeral arrangements will be made later.

Mr. Martin was 25 years of age and one of the most popular summer members of Thomas M. Muir's camp at Halsey Island, Lake Hopatcong, where he stayed each year. He was well known in Plainfield and lived here until several months ago, when he moved to New York. Prior to his enlistment he was employed in the firm of Gimbel Brothers.

Beside his sister, Miss Missouri Martin, who lives at 20 Sycomore avenue, he is survived by another sister and brother. These are Mrs. Lawrence Higgons, of Portchester, N. Y., and Walter Martin, of New York city.

A few weeks before his enlistment Mr. Martin was married, and his widow survives him.

FUNERAL OF FRANK CASEY.

The funeral of Frank Casey, of 468 East 189th street, the Bronx, was held from his home at 8:30 and from Our Lady of Grace church, Marion avenue, at 8:45 this morning. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul, by his uncle, Rev. James T. Casey, S. J., of Loyola College, Baltimore. Rev. Fathers Lyons and Benson were deacon and sub-deacon. The pallbearers were members of the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Grace parish. Mr. Casey, who was a nephew of the late Patrick Casey, of this city, was killed in a trolley accident Friday.

A SECOND CASE IN PLAINFIELD

Child From Newark Stricken With Infantile Paralysis While Here.

MISS CLARK IS DEAD

21 Year Old Girl of Scotch Plains Victim in Few Hours—Two Fined in Police Court Today for Failure to Obey Health Board Orders.

A second case of infantile paralysis was discovered in Plainfield Saturday, but the patient was sent back to Newark immediately and is now confined in the isolation hospital there. The home of his grandfather, Jacob Steinberg, 401 Plainfield avenue, where the boy was staying, is now under strict quarantine.

A case close to Plainfield was that of Miss Catharine Clark, aged 21 years, of Scotch Plains, who died this morning in the isolation hospital at Elizabeth. Miss Clark was taken from her home on Bartle avenue, Scotch Plains. This case also originated in Newark.

Chief Kiely and Judge DeMeza are co-operating fully with Health Officer Chandler in safeguarding the health of Plainfield and two fines of $10 each were assessed in police court this morning for failure to obey the orders of the health board.

Sidney Mager, aged three years, of Newark, was the case discovered Saturday. With his mother, Mrs. Bertha Mager, he was visiting at the Steinberg home. They came here a week ago last Wednesday. The child grew ill Saturday morning and Dr. Campus was called Saturday afternoon. He at once pronounced it a case of infantile paralysis and ordered the house quarantined. Sunday afternoon local health authorities made arrangements for the return of the child to Newark, where he was sent to Solo Hospital, the Essex county isolation building. Mrs. Mager and a younger child, also William Waldman, aged seven years, all of Newark, were also sent back to that city and other occupants of the Steinberg house last week are being restrained under quarantine. The house has been fumigated against disease.

The case of Miss Clark, of Scotch Plains, is unusual because of her age. The young lady was not stricken until 10:30 last night, and she died early this morning. Dr. Sinclair was called late Sunday night and he pronounced the case one of infantile paralysis, ordering Miss Clark sent to the Newark isolation hospital at once. Miss Clark had been feeling bad for a few days, but thought her illness was mere indisposition. She had recently visited in Newark, and it is believed that she was exposed to the disease there.

Miss Clark was one of the most popular of the younger set of Scotch Plains. She was the daughter of John E. Clark, of Bartle avenue, and was active in the Epworth League and other work of the Methodist church there.

City Judge William G. DeMeza is helping all he can to better health conditions throughout the city, and making an example of every case that comes before him. A Polish family that came here from the infected section of Brooklyn several days ago and was staying at 1221 West Third street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning for roaming about the streets after the Board of Health had warned them to stay at home. The father, whose name was Samuel Srzytinshi, was fined $10 and ordered to keep his youngsters off the street.

Morris Levine, of 540 West Third street, was arraigned for allowing his place to be in an unclean and unsanitary condition. In fining him $10 the Judge said that if necessary he would put some of the Third street merchants out of business to clean that section up. Abe Deutsch, a Jewish butcher, of 513 West Third street, was remanded for sentence until Wednesday morning after the Board of Health had made a complaint against him for allowing his shop and grounds to become filthy.

Hereafter in cases that are brought before Judge DeMeza where landlords have neglected to notify the Board of Health when they have rented a house to a family from an infected district the owner of the house will be severely dealt with, warned the Judge.

MEETING POSTPONED.

On account of the weather and the wet ground the open-air service planned for yesterday by the German Reformed church has been postponed until next Sunday, providing it is clear. A social time will be held at the meeting of the Young People's Society of the German Reformed church tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The fire department was called out shortly before noon today to extinguish a chimney fire at 145 East Fifth street. The blaze started in some soot in a crevice, and was put out by chemicals without damage.

G. A. R. MMETING.

SECOND REGIMENT GETS ORDERS FOR TWENTY-FOUR HOUR OUTING BEGINNING LATE THIS AFTERNOON

THREATENING WEATHER YESTERDAY MORNING GAVE WAY TO SUN AND A BIG CROWD LATER IN THE DAY TO WITNESS BIG PARADE.

CAMP ROUTINE BEGAN IN EARNEST TODAY

All of the Plainfielders Pitch in With a Will and Have Been Doing Some Hard Work Since Arrival Here—Many Transfers Announced in Second Regiment—Thirty-two Horses Available, Many of Which Had Been Turned Down by Troop D Inspectors.

(By Telegraph From Staff Correspondent)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 23.—By the time the men of the Second Regiment, of which Company K of Plainfield is a member, who arrived in camp here late on Saturday, turn into their shelter tents "somewhere in Monmouth county" late tonight, they will have completed about as strenuous a day as has ever been arranged for a National Guard organization at Sea Girt. At least that was the prediction made this morning by Colonel Horace G. Reading. And what is more, he says that every day is going to be just as busy and strenuous.

The day's program of drills, parade and other ordinary military duties is only to be a beginning of the work that has been laid out, and officially promulgated in the orders. Before the men get through they are to find that this camp is to be as much like regular army life as it is possible to be. After dress parade, which may be pushed forward an hour or two, the men will return to the company streets, pack up a light marching equipment, and start for the rural districts to spend the night. Where they will go only the Colonel knows, but that they are going he is sure.

After a comparatively easy time of it yesterday the khaki-colored boys were turned out at 5:30 this morning, and spent from then until 7:40 getting the camp in shape, eating breakfast, reporting at the hospital if any happened to feel under the weather, and preparing for the day's work. Two companies of the Second Battalion of Trenton went to the rifle range, and the other two as well as the men of the First and Third Battalions had company drills.

The camp this year is being conducted at State expense, as all the government funds allotted to New Jersey for the National Guard have been expended in getting the commands off to the Arizona front. Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Colonel David S. Hill, of the Quartermaster's Staff, and other officers decided that by careful handling of the appropriations which have been made by the Legislature, it would be possible to bring the Second and Third Regiments into camp, in spite of the fact that the Federal authorities cannot assist in financing the plan. They have been told by the Federal authorities that if there is any money left for New Jersey troops left back home, after the mobilization expense has all been checked up, the State will surely get it, but from past experience the New Jersey authorities took no chances, and took a careful account of funds before going ahead with the plans for the encampment. The arrival of the Second Regiment on Saturday shows that they found the money. While here the troops are paid at the rate of $1.50 a day for enlisted men, for six days, and their food is paid for from the time they arrived Saturday until they leave next week, and part of this would have been paid out of the State funds anyway, as the government only allows fifty cents a day a man. It was not generally known until Saturday that this condition existed, and the officers who have engineered the plan are being praised on all sides for not laying down, and letting the two commands not called to the

ESTATE OF WM. RUNKLE NOW TOTALS $2,201,191

Newark, July 24.—The Fidelity Trust Company, as administrator pendente lite, has filed its report with Surrogate Stickel of the estate of William Runkle, the wealthy iron merchant, who died in his home in Orange about two years ago. The will has been the subject of litigation since. The accounting shows the principal to have increased to $1,976,999.93 and the income balance $224,181.11.

Judge Martin has signed an order directing that the estate be turned over to William E. R. Smith, of East Orange, who was named as executor by the Court of Errors and Appeals in place of Randolph Rodman. Mr. Smith, who is a stock broker with a business in New York, set forth that he could handle to better advantage the investment securities of the estate than the executor pendente lite.

FINES PAID, HOLY JUMPERS RELEASED

G. W. V. Moy Secures Freedom of Clients, Reserving All Rights to Appeal.

Laura Wilson and Lavinia Leach, members of the Pillar of Fire, who are serving a sentence of seventeen days in the county jail, following their conviction of a violation of the city ordinance in that they attempted to hold a street meeting here without a permit, will be given their freedom today after serving ten days. G. W. V. Moy, their counsel, will pay the fines of $20 each, under protest, reserving all rights for appeal to a higher court.

Upon application of Mr. Moy, Judge James C. Connolly on Friday last granted a writ to the former permitting him to review the police court proceedings in the case. The return day for the writ was made tomorrow, but Mr. Moy and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., agreed to a postponement of the hearing to a later date, Judge Connolly to fix the same, allowing counsel more time to prepare for the hearing.

It is Mr. Moy's intention to test the constitutionality of the city's action in preventing the Pillar of Fire from holding street meetings in Plainfield.

NEW JERSEY MEN FEAR THEY ARE IN FOR A LONG STAY WITHOUT A CHANCE FOR ACTION

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 19.—News here of the contemplated action on the part of prominent business men back in New Jersey who are said to be planning a demand to Congress for the immediate return of the New Jersey troops to their home stations unless there is more imparative need for their services here than is shown in their present duties, has created a flurry in the camp of the New Jersey militiamen. It was only the fact that the officers realize that an open endorsement of the scheme might be construed as a criticism of their superior officers that restrained them voicing their approval of the scheme. Now that there was a Statewide move of that nature being contemplated, was received in the Fifth Regiment and spread rapidly through the rank and file of the Jerseymen.

Officers of high rank, who are not past the opinion that the Jerseymen will yet see active service before they return, worked to minimize the open feeling against the program under which more than 5,000 men of New Jersey are being detained here for an apparently indefinite period of time and under circumstances that on the surface do not warrant their presence here. The men have been advised to withhold criticism at any rate, until the situation is clarified, and some conclusion is reached in the international squabble. The officers are as eager to quit the cacti dotted desert as the lowliest private, but for the most part they realize that their stay here is probably a large influence in keeping down to the minimum the danger of bandit raids and other hostile demonstrations, finding their origin on the south side of the Mexican border line.

The prospect of a long drawn out stay on the border is discouraging to the men unless it can be shown that there is an opportunity coming for a bit of the actual service for which every man longs and which was the greatest factor in enthusing the men for the trip down here and bolstering up the recruiting of fresh men to bring the organization up to war strength.

None Have Yellow Streak.

What line of action the attempt which is to be made back home will follow has not been disclosed to those who heard the scheme today, but it is believed that demands may be made upon Congress for a clear statement as to its proposed course in the Mexican situation. If there is no need for the troops on the border they should be returned home. If there is need for them they should be permitted to know the possibilities at once or should be put into the action without delay. That is the way the men size the situation up here. Not one of them can be blamed with having a yellow streak but they all are anxious to return to their families and their fields of labor, high and low, if the nation has no need of them here.

Aside from the screening in of the officers' quarters, the construction of shower baths in various parts of the camp and a few such minor details together with the building of company mess halls and kitchens for every unit, the work of making camp has almost been accomplished and the men are turning more generally daily to the daily drills that are gradually bending them and shaping them to the conformity of real soldiers. There seems no indication of an early return to New Jersey and the men and officers are entrenching themselves for a long siege of border duty. The frame buildings with sides boarded up four feet from the ground and completely covered with a screen wire and surmounted by canvas flies and sides, are not the most uncomfortable abodes imaginable. They are being built by the officers in almost every outfit, and are proving their value in keeping out flies and other desert insects and in providing cool quarters for those fortunate enough to possess them.

Food and Drink Guarded.

Efforts to guard the health of the men today led to the condemnation and return to the source of purchase of many cases of Coca-cola. The Coca-cola had been bottled at the ittle Mexican village of Pirtleville, close by the camp, and the discovery that Pirtleville was not the healthiest of resorts at the present time. The entire supply was ordered removed from camp and the canteens were prohibited selling it to the soldiers. Cake and pies from a downtown bakery that had been supplying the Fifth Regiment canteen and other exchange points in the camp with pastry for sale, were also put under the official ban, and unless such goods is prepared for the public in a sanitary and healthful manner and composed of pure ingredients the soldiers of New Jersey are not going to feast on them.

This is only one of the many ways in which the health of the men is being safeguarded by the medical department under the command of Major Joseph M. Rector, the camp surgeon. The food, sleeping quarters, adjacent surroundings and the supervision of the modes of living by the men are a few of the methods being employed to accomplish the maintenance of a big force of healthy men. The water here, although it is very alkeline in taste, is not unhealthful and up to date few bad effects have been noted considering the fact that there are in the neighborhood of 4,000 soldiers here.

Work on the rifle ranges will commence for the New Jersey boys on August 1. The First Regiment, ranking in seniority, will go out first and will spend two weeks in rifle practice. They are to be followed by the Fifth Regiment. After the Fifth Regiment has shot for two weeks the Montana Regiment is to be given the benefit of the ranges and the Fourth New Jersey will not get a chance at them until September.

Expect a Long Stay.

The schedule which has been adopted leads further to the belief that the New Jersey men are slated for a long tour of duty here. There have been many developments in the past few days to warrant the belief. Chief among them are the facts that they have ordered the construction of permanent mess halls and kitchens for every company, and they are mapping out a plan for joint manoeuvres between the guardsmen and the regulars late in the fall. All new orders coming from the Department of the South indicate that the plan of the War Department is to hold the men here. There is, on the other hand, an abundance of things that point to the probability of early participation in active service and when these things are made known to the men they become eager for the game and watch developments closely.

New spirit is creeping into the personel of the outfits here from dear old Jersey. No man is permitted to leave camp during the day unless on official business, and then only when accompanied by a noncommissioned officer. At night, however, large sections of the men are given their freedom until 10 o'clock, and the highways leading into the city of Douglas are a-swarm with the Jerseymen going to and fro from camp and town. The last few nights the men have been jolly and gay, and singing heard on every hand. Occasionally the strain of a mouth organ is heard.

Brigadier-General Edwin W. Hiine, commanding the New Jersey troops, takes delight in the new happiness of the men. His staff feared that the singing might interfere with his sleep, as he is in the habit of retiring very early at night. When he was asked about it, he said:

"Let them sing. I am glad to hear they are feeling better," and his eyes lit up with the pleasure he found in the fact that his men were getting over the moroseness and taking a brighter view of their life in this end of the country. The men are actually finding the life here less trying than at first. The extreme heat has given way to quite comfortable living conditions. The rain which falls almost every day now has aided in making the evenings cooler and in laying the dust throughout camp. Wind storms are less frequent than at first and the drainage of the camp and other steps which have been taken to make the camp site more fully suitable for its present use are having their effect on the spirit of the men.

It is needless to say that the appearance in camp today of the paymaster loaded down with funds for the Jersey troops was responsible for some of the higher spirit of the men noticeable tonight. He started with brigade headquarters and paid off the commander and his staff officers. Then he went right through as far as possible before the night shades fell and every rustle echoed with Mexican bandits and every twitter was that of a lizard. Then he went back to town and will return tomorrow morning with more money. Altogether it will take about three days to make the rounds of the camp. Good progress was attained today. The artillery, medical departments and the First Regiment got theirs today and the work of paying the Fifth will commence tomorrow.

Will Demand a Vote..

Reports current here that Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, of New Jersey, had handed down a decision which would keep the New Jerseymen from voting at the coming elections, lead to a storm of protest. It was branded in every outfit as a political move, the spokesmen declaring it to be their opinion that the Democrats fearing the guardsmen would vote against them because of the situation on the border, had sought a way to prevent them voting. The guardsmen are not going to capitulate without a fight and plans for securing the passage of a law by Congress, if one is needed, are already under way, as one of the initial steps toward establishing a right of franchise, even though they are down here and away from their State.

Brigadier-General Edwin W. Hiine today made a complete inspection of the tented city of New Jerseymen. Upon his return to his headquarters he told the newspaper men that he was greatly pleased with the perfection of the camp and said that he was looking after the needs of the men as much as possible.

An order was issued directing commanding officers to requisition at once for all supplies and equipment needed to bring the outfits up to field service conditions. At brigade headquarters Major Alexander F. Gray, the adjutant-general, said that there was no significance in the order, it having been the idea to make the requisitions at once to as great an extent as possible. Many draught horses are needed in the camp and harness equipment is also low. General Hine said that he was happy to say that the wants of the men were becoming fewer each day and that before long he hoped they would be comfortably and fully equipped.

Practice hikes were started by the Fifth Regiment yesterday. The first battalion, under command of Major William I. Lord, marched five miles out into the country, where they took a lesson in individual cooking and studied various manoeuvre movements and tactical ideas.

Examinations for promotions were held today by an examining board consisting of Colonel Albert A. Vanvelraven, of the Fifth; Lieutenant George A. Buttle, of the First; Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Lohmann, Jr., of the Fourth, and Major William A. Bryant, commanding the first squadron cavalry. Four men were examined from the Fifth Regiment and one from the First and two from the Fourth.

INSPECT LOCAL SITE FOR STATE BUILDINGS

Tract of 500 Acres at South Stirling Favored for Auxiliary to Insane Hospital.

The State commission named by Governor Fielder to select a suitable group of buildings to be an auxiliary to the State Hospital at Morris Plains, has been inspecting a 500-acre tract at South Stirling, owned by Stanley Brown, and it is said it is quite favorable to the purchase of this property, because of its high altitude, climatic conditions and being easily accessible to Newark and other important centers. It is said that the tract can be purchased for $125 an acre.

It is the purpose to erect a group of buildings on the cottage plan, where patients suffering from a milder form of insanity may be cared for. The present overcrowded condition at Morris Plains makes this move imperative. The commission is scheduled to hold a meeting on Wednesday, when further consideration to the project will be given.

The erection of such a group of buildings near Stirling, it is believed, would be of advantage to Plainfield, for most of the material could be purchased here, and it would mean the expenditure of a large sum of money.

The tract proposed is almost directly on the line of the Lackawanna Railroad, and it is only a short trip from that point to nearby cities, as well as Morristown.

THROCKMORTON PLAYS IN JUNIOR SINGLES

Elizabeth Champion and Elliot Binzen Advance to Final Round.

Exhibition matches in which R. Lindley Murray, Frederick E. Alexander, Abraham Bassford, Jr., and E. Shaw figured, and many close contests in the junior and boys' tournaments were features of the day on the courts of the Gedney Farms Country Club, White Plains, yesterday afternoon. In the junior singles Harold A. Throckmorton, of Elizabeth, the national interscholastic champion, and Elliot Binzen, the Fordham captain, advanced to the final round, which will be played today.

Alexander, the veteran Davis Cup player, gave a brilliant exhibition in the first set against Murray, winning it 6-3. The internationalist was serving in great form, the erratic break on his twist delivery puzzling the national indoor champion and tending to make him uncertain in other departments also. In the second set the Californian became more aggressive, rushing to forecourt in his characteristic way, and he hammered out victory at 6-4. There was no third set.

LECTURE ON "MINSTRY OF CHRIST" AT HOPE CHAPEL

Continuing his series of lectures on "The Life of Christ," the Rev. D. W. Skellinger gave a very interesting talk on the lawn of Hope chapel last night on "The Ministry of Christ." An excellent musical program was rendered. Several selections were sung by a chorus choir. John Emery played on the cornet and Thomas Jones on the piano.

The lectures will continue next Wednesday night and the last one will be given on September 1. Beginning with next Sunday one of the features of each lecture will be several Gospel songs illustrated by stereopticon views.

KENNEL CLUB NEWS

With nearly 500 actual dogs, making a total of more than 1,000 entries, the first A. K. C. Show of the Hudson County Kennel Club, which takes place at Schuetzen Park, Union Hills, N. J., on July 26, is assured of success. Heretofore this organization confined its efforts to giving open match shows, but the support accorded them by fanciers led the committee to attempt a show under the rules of the American Kennel Club. By dint of hard work and a liberal donation of special prizes the big entry resulted.

"Normanton Tipit, one of the very best Airedale terriers in England, is said to be destined for this country. The name of the purchaser of this dog has not been made known, but it is certain that in a few weeks the dog will be in a Long Island kennel. This dog is by the famous Champion Tintern Tip Top and has been a good winner on the other side."—New York Sun.

There will be a meeting of the Bench Show Committee of the Plainfield Kennel Club in the Queen City Hotel this evening.

MARTINE MAY WIN LIFE FOR CASEMENT

Senators Get Behind His Move to Officially Ask Clemency of England.

Washington, July 24.—Senators Vardaman, of Mississippi, and Phelan of California, have joined with Senator Martine, of New Jersey, in his effort to save the life of Sir Roger Casement, under sentence of death in London for his part in the Irish rebellion. There is now every indication that the movement started by Senator Martine will result in an official request being sent to England for clemency in the Casement case.

The purpose now is to obtain a majority vote for a motion to relieve the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations from further consideration of Senator Martine's resolution directly asking a mitigation of sentence of death imposed on Sir Roger, and Senator Phelan today gave notice that he would offer another resolution intended to receive the support of al who believed that Great Britain could afford to stay her hand from shedding more blood, especially where the offense was a political one in which clemency more often had been shown.

The resolution proposed by Senator Phelan is as follows:

"Resolved, That the President of the United States be and hereby is requested to ask the British Government to exercise clemency in the treatment for Irish political prisoners."

Senator Stone, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, asked that both the Martine motion and the Phelan resolution lie over until Monday. He explained that the State Department had transmitted to the British Government a request on behalf of the sister of Sir Roger Casement that clemency be shown to him. He also said that this Government had ben able to save from summary execution the life of two Americans, Sullivan and Dellabere. The Missouri Senator said that he could assure the Senate that the British Government would not take with complaisance any request from this Government in Sir Roger Casement's interest. He believed that the British Government would itself show clemency to him, and that any efforts undertaken through the Government of the United States would do Sir Roger more harm than good.

UNCLE SAM TELLS OF PARALYSIS

Health Department Issues Study of Infantile Disease.

WHAT THE EXPERTS LEARN

Represents Many Years of Study by Physician Who Is Considered Best Authority In the Country—Disease Is Widespread, and Epidemics Are Likely to Occur at Any Place.

Authoritative summary of what the United States has been able to learn about the cause and transmission of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) was given out by the treasury department, under which the public health service operates.

This "study" of the disease, published at this time because of the extensive epidemic in New York, has been prepared by Wade H. Frost, past assistant surgeon of the public health service, who is considered the best authority on the disease in this country and who has been sent to New York to take charge of the federal bureau activities. It represents many years of personal observation in several epidemics and an extensive review of all literature obtainable upon the subject. It gives the last word, as the federal health authorities get it, about this disease. A summary on these findings is given as follows:

"Reviewing briefly the data and considerations which have been discussed, poliomyelitis is due to a specific infective agent, of which the only demonstrated natural sources are infected human beings, who may be divided into the following groups: The recognized sick, convalescents, the sick not recognizable as poliomyelitis cases and passive virus carriers apparently in good health.

"The infective agent is known to be discharged from these sources in the excretions of the respiratory and digestive tracts. It is known to be fairly resistant to the destructive agencies encountered in nature outside of the human body. Perhaps the most significant fact in regard to the experimental transmission of poliomyelitis to monkeys is that they may be infected by rubbing the virus on the nasal mucous membrane. Infection through the digestive tract or through the agency of biting insects has been found more difficult and less constant.

"The disease is in nature of widespread though rare sporadic or endemic occurrence. In epidemics it has occurred in recent years over a large part of the world, the outbreak being sometimes discreet, at other times spreading rapidly but irregularly over wide areas.

Run a Rapid Course.

"Such epidemics characteristically run a rather rapid course in a given community, declining after a few months or less after having attacked so far as is evident only a small proportion of the total inhabitants, usually not more than one in a thousand, and do not recur in the same locality for a period of at least two years. In epidemic foci children under five are attacked much more often than are older persons, the whole adult population remaining virtually immune in some epidemics.

"The rapid spread of epidemics over wide areas, their spontaneous decline after only a small proportion of the inhabitants have been attacked and above all the preponderating incidence in young children have not been satisfactorily explained by any hypothesis other than that the infective agent during epidemics is widespread, reaching a large proportion of the population, but only occasionally finding a susceptible individual, usually a young person, in whom it produces characteristic morbid effects. Assuming this rare susceptibility, the well established facts collected by epidemiologic studies are compatible with the evidence of laboratory experiments that the disease is directly transmissible from person to person.

"As to what constitutes susceptibility or the converse—immunity—practically nothing can be deduced except that age is obviously a factor of importance, susceptibility being generally greatest in the first half decade of life, thereafter progressively diminishing until in adult life there is a very general immunity to natural infection. The reason for this is at present a matter of speculation. Conceivably the greater immunity of adults may be due to a nonspecific resistance, developing naturally with maturity without reference to previous exposure to or infection with the specific virus of poliomyelitis. On the other hand, there are certain facts which suggest that the very general immunity of adults may be specific, acquired from previous unrecognized infection."

URGES SUPPORT FOR PROHIBITION TICKET

Dr. Harry Vaughan, Gubernatorial Candidate, Visits Here on State Tour.

Dr. Harry Vaughan, of Morristown, the Phohibition candidate for Governor, accompanied by several workers in the party, visited Plainfield Saturday night for the purpose of holding a street meeting. Owing to the heavy shower the meeting had to be postponed, but Dr. Vaughan, while here, had an opportunity to present his claims for support of his candidacy.

Dr. Vaughan informally discussed the temperance question from a State viewpoint, showing the great need for prohibition throughout New Jersey.

"There are several things I could do for you as Governor," said Dr. Vaughan. "First, set all the people a good example by banishing private liquors from sideboard and banquets at the capitol; second, appoint the most efficient temperance men as judges and prosecutors; third, enforce all existing laws and abolish the liquor traffic therein as far as possible; fourth, send the militia to close road houses, speak-easies and other license places which sell liquor on the Sabbath, at our mountain, lake and seaside resorts," Dr. Vaughan makes an urgent plea for the co-operation and support of men of all parties to bring about State-wide prohibition.

CARNIVAL OF SPORTS AT WAYSIDE PARK

Benefit for International Motor Band Proves Success Despite Weather.

The inclement weather of Saturday put a damper on the carnival of sports, held at Wayside Park, Dunellen, for the benefit of the International Motor Company. However, about five hundred people attended the affair, a baseball game between the married and single men attracting considerable attion. The single men won the game, but the scorer forgot to supply the details of the match.

Track athletics held a prominent part in the day's events, the one hundred yard dash being won by C. Blair, with Eddie Stranahan a close second. The one mile, handicap, went to Packey McDonough, the Notre Dame sprinter. Marty McDonough was second, with W. Stranahan third. The running broad jump was won by K. Dealaman, with Marty McDonough second. In the boys' race, first prize was annexed by J. Doyle, with A. Mathews second.

The Westfield Band furnished music for the concert, which was held in the evening. Dancing was also enjoyed until a late hour. The committee in charge of the affair deserve commendation for the able way in which they conducted the affair. The following local business men contributed prizes: Harry Dreier, Philip Mechanik, Leo Zeisel, Leo Slonim, Peter Delger, Schwed Brothers, Reliable Jewelry Shop, The Outlet and George Finger.

The International Motor Company's band, for which this benefit was held, will be an organization of forty-eight pieces. The members are now holding regular rehearsals.

UNION COUNTY SENDS ESSEX DRUG FOR MOSQUITO WAR USE

Another illustration of how it pays to advertise has been furnished by the Essex County Mosquito Extermination Commission, which is today the richer through the gift of a half-pound f potassium cyanide, donated by the Union county board, which read of its Essex brothers' lack of the drug.

"We heard," stated the message which accompanied the donation, "that you were out of cyanide, and as we have more than enough for our immediate needs are glad to share it with you."

Next time you hear a mosquito making night hideous above your bed, consider that he has probably heard of the Union board's gift and is singing a funeral dirge over the slaughter of his tribe.

REV. J. Y. BROEK PREACHES AT WEEKLY UNION SERVICE

The union service was held at the First Baptist church last night, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, the pastor, being in charge. Rev. J. Y. MASS MEETING OF ZIONISTS HELD Memorial Service for Dr. Herzl is Also Conducted at the Temple Sholem.

FUND TOTALS $1,800

George W. Bird and Others Pay Tribute to Dead Zionist Patroit in Stirring Addresses—Henry Rosenbaum Presides.

A mass meeting arranged by the Plainfield branch of the Jewish War Relief Committee was held in Temple Sholem yesterday afternoon for the purpose of arousing and strengthening the interest of the members who have pledged themselves to pay weekly subscriptions for the war suffers of Poland and Galicia. The meeting was also in the form of a memorial to the death of Dr. Herzel.

In an interesting and forcible address, Baruck Buckerman, secretary of the Relief Committee of New York, described in vivid terms the sufferings of the Jews in the war stricken district of Poland and Galicia. He said in part that authentic reports of instances where whole families were suffering intensely had reached the Committee and added that rarely were children under eight or ten years of age seen because privations and suffering had caused them all to die.

Samuel Seidel, secretary of the Plainfield branch of the Relief Committee, read a report concerning the $1,800 that has been collected by the committee from among the Jewish people of the city. It includes mostly small weekly contributions and is seprate from the amount collected on the day set aside by President Wilson.

The memorial meeting to commemorate the death of the great Zionist leader, Dr. Herzel, was held following the mass meeting and was opened by George W. Bird, who paid tribute in a short address to the dead Jew. In speaking of the Zionist movement, of which Dr. Herzel was one of the pioneers, Mr. Bird said that it was no longer a dream because the present struggle will see the realization of the Jews to become a nation, as was foretold by prophets.

Dr. Bluestone, a noted New York Zionist worker, gave a short sketch of the life of Dr. Herzel. Dr. Bluestone said he knew him personally and was often impressed by his simple greatness. The Rev. Dr. Fredlander, the newly elected rabbi of Temple Sholem, also spoke for a few minutes on the impressions he had gaine of Dr. Herzel after he had answered the Zionist's call for help in his work. Prayers were offered in memory of him.

Henry Rosenbaum, president of the local Relief Committee, presided at the meeting, and plans were made for an even more active campaign than before. Another meeting will be held in the near future.

Aladdin's Lamp Not In It With the Camera

Here Is a Trio of "Movie Girls" In "The Birth of a Nation" Whose Combined Salaries Run Up to Considerably Over $100,000 a Year and None Is Out of Her Teens.

BEFORE the moving pictures made the Arabian nights look tame this might have seemed a fairy story. At present it is just a reporter's notebook sketch of actual events, and there is a sordid sound of money in it.

Think of three girls still in their teens who are piling up annual incomes of over $100,000 in the aggregate. The girls are Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper, who play the feminine leads in D. W. Griffith's epoch making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation."

Griffith understands the force of contrast in art as well as every other detail of this fascinating form of expression which he has made famous. In the three youthful stars of his masterpiece he has the satisfaction of seeing his work carried out triumphantly by three girls who have been trained under his guiding direction. Mae Marsh has that elfin and elusive quality which her Irish ancestry bestowed upon her. Griffith brings it out in striking effectiveness in his world famous work. Miss Marsh is red headed and clever far beyond the reach of her eighteen years.

Lillian Gish is pronounced the finest type of blond on the motion picture screen in America. She has been in the movies now for several years, beginning under Griffith's direction when a mere schoolgirl. She has played a world of parts and is known as well as Miss Marsh, who is beloved of millions as the Maude Adams of the motion pictures.

These two girls between them earn over $1,500 a week and have contracts with the big producing firms in filmland, which means they earn these salaries for fifty-two weeks in every year.

Miriam Cooper is the newest member of the trio and has only been in pictures about a year now. She has come forward steadily, and her work in "The Birth of a Nation" has enhanced her earning capacity. Miss Cooper is the southern type. She is willowy and languid and a pronounced brunette, making a complete contrast to the brilliant shock of Mae Marsh's red hair and the golden blonde of Lillian Gish.

SAYS HOT WATER EACH DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out the poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone prosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

SOUTH HIT HARD BY THREE STORMS

Damage Done Within Month Near $100,000,000 Says Traveler.

The South is today suffering under the hardest blow it has known since the Civil War. A member of the Press staff returned last night from a visit to his home in Tennessee, and while on his vacation he visited other States which have been stricken within the past month. The damage done by three separate storms within a month will be near $100,000,000. Much of it was to property, which is purely local, but the heavy damage done to crops will be felt in all parts of the country within a short time.

Louisiana, parts of Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi were hit first. This was by the tropical storm of almost a month ago and the havoc wrought by wind and rain in these sections included the destroying of homes, the ruining of crops and the stopping of transportation. One week later Tennessee, Virginia, North Georgia, North Alabama and parts of Arkansas and Mississippi were visited by a rain storm that the natives called a "young flood." Rain fell for more than a week in some sections without ceasing for even a minute, and as a result all rivers and creeks were soon out of banks, flooding the best land just as the crops of corn and cotton were ripening. Corn, cotton, tomatoes, melons and many other crops were heavily damaged. The green corn, or "roasting-ear" crop is a failure, as the water stood long enough on the low lands to sour the corn. The third blow, which came last week, was in the shape of a hurricane and rain storm that swept over North and South Carolina. It caused millions of dollars worth of damage, and practically all crops in these States were ruined.

The Southern farmer has accepted this condition with much of the same spirit that imbued his father in the days of the reconstruction, and many are planning new crops and new industries. However, the shortage of foodstuffs will result in high prices and much suffering among the poorer classes.

Jack Pollard got first in the same event for boys under 100 pounds. The greatest number of points for the day was registered by Jack Squires.

"SUFF" ORGANIZATIONS DECIDE ON MERGER

Woman's Political Union Unites With the New Jersey Association.

At the monthly executive board meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, held at the Young Women's Christian Association building in Newark, action was taken upon an application from the New Jersey Women's Political Union to be admitted to membership in the older organization. The board voted unanimously to take the Women's Political Union branches into its membership, their standing to be exactly the same as that of the two hundred local branches of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association.

At the close of the meeting a joint committee of women representing both organizations met and arranged the details of the merger. The Women's Political Union will go out of existence as a State organization, but those of its local branches which wish to use the name Women's Political Union for their own work will be at liberty to do so. In counties where there are branches of both organizations, county meetings will be held and the county board will be reorganized so as to include every local suffrage league. The Essex county branch will take over the present Women's Political Union State headquarters at 79 Halsey street, Newark, and continue them as the Essex County Suffrage headquarters. The outgoing State board of the Women's Political Union will appoint twenty-one members to serve on the State board of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association until the next annual convention, when the State board will be reorganized.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

Seen and Heard in the Tented City

Shortly after arrival at camp Corporal Myrton Glover, of Company K, was appointed mess sergeant by Captain Peterson and took immediate charge of his new duties. Glover served his first mess, consisting of hamburger and onions, boiled potatoes, boiled tomatoes, bread and butter and coffee, Saturday night, and inasmuch as some of the boys had not eaten since morning the menu was a particularly appetizing one as a starter. The "rookies" declare that as long as Glover continues to judge others' appetites by his own everything will be all right as far as the "eats" are concerned.

Battalion Adjutant A. I. Littell, of Plainfield, is nursing a sore toe, at least he's got an idea it's sore. "Bert" was inspecting a new ice box which Company K men had taken possession of Saturday afternoon, when a thoughtless "rookie" let one end fall on the "adj's" left foot. He wants the folks to know he's "well on the road to recovery."

Some one sneaked two pairs of boxing gloves into camp. Privates Van Arsdale and Bowe gave the first exhibition of fistic preparedness in a bout Saturday afternoon, the decision being awarded by the company to Referee Miller at the tap of the last gong. It appeared as though Miller got more of the "milling" than either of the two gloved participants. Kiederling and Smith tried out the gloves next but they had previously arrived at a mutual agreement regarding the force of blows and the engagement was a tame one.

Mess Sergeant Glover has received orders from the Central Railroad office in Jersey City, where he is employed, to report for work Wednesday morning. This means that Company K will be without his services for the remainder of the week.

—Privates Van Arsdale, Milliken and Conover introduced a baseball to the camp over the week-end. They are all good players except that they can't throw straight or catch.

Compan K managed to collect some of the best kitchen equipment in camp when the supply car was opened. An ice box that had never been uncrated, a new stove, new cooking and preparing utensils and some fine kitchen furniture were lugged over from the car by a detail of keen eyed soldiers.

A number of Plainfielders took advantage of the leave privilege Saturday night and went to Manasquan, Belmar, Asbury Park and other nearby places. The same was true yesterday and the men occupied considerable of their time sending home postal cards, letters, etc.

Some of the Plainfielders are already beginning to fear the effects of the Federal examinations. There are certain to be some rejections and the men just about know who these unfortunate individuals are going to be. However, the tests will not be given before Tuesday or Wednesday and all the campers are safe until that time.

One youth, who has been a member of the company for three years, is particularly downhearted. He is one and three-quarters inches under height and twelve pounds under weight. He surely will be rejected.

Privates Winzel and Walig got their first real taste of hard work Saturday night. They were put to work digging an incinerator just before mess time and took their own good time doing the job until warned by the sergeant that they could not eat until they had it finished. The work was completed in short order after this promise but not until it was done over several times to suit the commanding officer.

Musician Leslie Sharp is making a general nuisance out of himself rehearsing on the bugle. "Les" doesn't feel just right unless he is tooting the horn and disturbing everybody else's peace.

Company M, of Somerville, has a big representation of Elks enlisted. On all hands are heard the salute "Hello, Bill!" and the B. P. O. E. delegation went to Manasquan in a group Saturday night to view the white lights.

The number of the Somerville lodge of Elks is 1068, and that happened to be the number of the coach in which the Somerset county boys traveled to Sea Girt.

Captain Peterson is carrying a valet. "Ted" Trotter, a North Plainfield youth, is doing chores for the company head.

Rain that fell incessantly all Saturday night and yesterday cast a gloom over the boys. Many had expected visitors yesterday but the deluge kept the majority away. However, a number of persons ventured to the camp grounds and were entertained under shelters by the soldiers.

Despite the heavy downpour the camp site remained in unusually fine shape. The street between the Plainfield and New Brunswick companies is particularly wide and although the grass was a little high, the boys managed to keep dry.

National Guard officers are holding reunions on every side. Many have not met in the last two years.

The officers have already located one "customer" for the guard house. He is Private Scullthrope, of Company D, New Brunswick, and came into camp carrying a load that prevented him from obeying orders. He has been thawing out over the week-end and probably will be in condition for heavy shovel and pick work this afternoon.

Not even a cold is complained of among the Plainfielders. Some were a little sore after the first afternoon's workout, but they were given plenty of opportunity to loll around in tents yesterday and are in fine shape this afternoon.

According to some of the superior officers the Second Regiment is due to leave Sea Girt for a hike into the country this afternoon, and will return tomorrow evening. The men will carry their "pup" tents and cooking outfit.

All of the "K" men are beginning to realize that they are under orders which must be lived up to to the letter. Several of the rookies balked at some hard labor allotted them in the first few hours at Sea Girt, but were given to understand that they must do what they are told to do and have acepted their lot for better or for worse.

Cook Horton came within an ace of losing his life on Saturday night. He was caught in the act of putting two teaspoonfuls of coffee in a sixteen-quart kettle, barely enough "chicory" to color the water. If Horton had served such a drink up to the men he would never have gotten away from Sea Girt alive.

A number of Company K men as yet have not received their equipment. Four or five are camping in civilian clothes while others are wearing condemned clothing and have no rifles or belts. It is understood that these are being procured, however, and will be available in a day or so.

Although their stay at camp has been short, the boys are already beginning to look for the mailman.

Speaking of mailmen, Company K has four in its ranks, Lieutenant Conklin, Musician Sharp, Sergeant Pearson, Sergeant Apgar.

Louis Clark has been appointed acting supply sergeant, and is already performing his new duties.

There's only one mascot in camp and that is the cherished property of the Trenton battalion. It will eat anything from tin cans to beesteak and is a champion noise maker. The men are training the animal to perform the duties of a bugler. On its collar is this inscription: "To the boys of the Second Battalion, Second Regiment. Don't let the greasers get you. Winfield St. Claire."

front lose their summer work in the field.

Yesterday there was the usual big crowd on hand in the afternoon, but visitors were mighty scarce in the morning because of the heavy rain. As soon as the sun came out they flocked to Sea Girt on every trolley car, train, and in automobiles from miles around. The soldier boys were given more freedom than they will be for the rest of the week, and many went to nearby resorts, all returning for the first evening parade of the enacmpment, which was called for 5:30. Probably 5,000 people witnessed this, which was participated in by more men than ever appeared on the Sea Girt ground before under peace conditions. In fact Colonel Reading found it necessary to form a machine gun company as he had 834 enlisted men in camp, and only about 780 are called for in the peace strength requirements. The regiment made a fine showing as the various companies swung down the field and the applause was liberal. Governor Fielder and members of his staff were among the interested spectators.

In the morning the usual church service was held, but it was impossible to have it on the lawn adjoining the Governor's cottage. Instead Chaplain John Handley preached to the men in the mess hall, which was crowded. The band furnished music, and there was singing of three familiar hymns.

Second Lieutenant Dugan, who in private life is an employe of Adjutant General Sadler's office, is acting as regimental quartermaster in place of Captain Stephen H. Barlow, who left today for Douglas, Arizona, where he will act as property officer for the State in completing the transfer of property to the government.

Sunday was almost entirely free from military duty. There was the evening parade, which started at 5:30 tonight, and which was witnessed by thousands of visitors, and a guard mount followed this. Then some of the men had to do guard duty, but the vast majority were given about as much freedom as they wanted, and not a few uniforms were to be seen on the boardwalks at nearby resorts, both during the day, and in the evening.

When the command arrived yesterday they brought no horses with them, and the officials here had provided thirty-two steeds, although it takes thirty-seven to mount every officer. Many of the steeds acted as if their previous experience had been with a wild west show, and more than one rider was unmounted in an unceremonial manner, but no one was hurt. At first Colonel Reading thought that it might be best to have an unmounted parade, as was done by the regiments here for mobilization three weeks ago, but later he decided that in time of war the officers would have to ride whatever was given them, and he and his staff tackled the review on the wild steeds. Everything considered, the parade was a success in spite of this drawback, and as company after company marched down the field with full ranks and in splendid step there was applause from thousands of hands, and a great racket from the sirens on the automobiles lined up along the parade ground. Occasionally a mounted officer showed that from the way his brute was acting he would have been just as happy were he able to walk and keep in his place, but the vast majority of the horses behaved themselves well.

Tonight there was a band concert by Chief Musician Leonard Plant and his organization in front of Colonel Reading's tent. The men grouped on the grass around the musicians, and liberal applause was accorded the numbers.

"Those fellows down in Arizona had no harder time of it making camp than we did," was the sentiment expressed by all of the men this morning, when the sun finally did put in appearance. They were referring to the torrential rains which greeted several of the New Jersey commands when they arrived on the border, and they were about right, for if it can rain any steadier or harder than it did early yesterday morning, and until nearly noon it would be "some rain." Coupled with this there was a heavy fog all yesterday afternoon and evening, which swept across the field in great clouds and penetrated into the tents, and into the clothes of everyone who had to be out in it. At times it was so thick that one could not see from one end of a battalion camp to the other. Fortunately for the men, the tents were all pitched before this blew in from the sea, and except when they had to go out for meals the vast majority were able to keep out of it.

The plans for the morning church service on the lawn adjoining the Governor's cottage, always one of the picturesque features of Sunday in camp had to be changed, and they were held in the mess hall, with Captain John Handley, the regimental chaplain, in charge. Music by the band, the singing of "Come Thou Almighty King," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and "My Country 'tis of Thee," with the sermon by the chaplain made up the service, which was attended by a crowd of the khaki-clad boys that filled the allotted space.

The quartermaster's department is fully as much on the job as it was when the First Brigade was here preparatory to leaving for the border. The men are having good food, and plenty of it, and not a complaint has been heard, even if it was necessary to dodge raindrops while eating some of the meals. Each company has its own screen enclosed kitchen, with enlisted cooks, and a big tent fly covers two long tables for every sixty-five men. The officers mess is in one of the big mess-hall, which once upon a time was used to feed the whole regiment.

The program which has been laid out calls for pretty steady work for every man in camp from first call at 5:30 a. m. until 6 in the evening. Taps are sounded at 10:30, after which every man must be in bed. In addition to drills the men will get their annual practice on the rifle range while they are here this week, two companies shooting at a time.

The daily schedule as posted on the bulletin boards in the company streets is as follows:

First call, 5:30 a. m.; reveille, 5:40 a. m.; assembly, 5:50 a. m.; fatigue, 6:00 a. m.; mess, 6:30 a. m.; sick call, 7:00 a. m.; first sergeant's call, 7:15 a. m.; drill—first call, 7:40 a. m.; assembly, 7:50 a. m.; recall, 12:00 m.; mess, 12:30 a. m.

Colonel Reading yesterday afternoon ordered the transfer of the following enlisted men: To Company F, from Company I, Privates Joseph E. Cannon, Samuel Dixon, Joseph Gurk, John A. VanHart, Roy W. Lawler, Philip C. Young, William Kufall, Oliver Myros, James Witesall, LeRoy Miller, Walter H. Mannin and William R. Murphy; from Company H to Company F, Privates Herbert Van Nuis, John Slanini and Theodore Lockmuipe; to Company D from Company A. Privates Samuel Kahn, Walter Smith, John Wood, William F. Collins and John A. Morgan; from Company E to Company D, Privates Ferris Coburn and John Wallade; from Company L to Company G, Privates Samuel Knetzler, Edward Cole, Samuel Denison, John Gash, William Johnson, Leland Rogers, Elmer Tabler, Rayond Watts, Raymond Smith, William Whitlow; from Company C to Company G, Private Benjamin Jacob; from Company M to Company G, Privates Frank Dapka, James Sarack, James Roaney, Stephen Rusnek, Walter Godlaski, Thomas Accdrino, Alna Hunter, Joseph Patrik, Samuel Uiverotta and Frank Demars.

Captain Handley took for his text part of the first and third verses of second Timothy second chapter, "Be strong and endure hardness as a good soldier." He first showed that Paul himself made the soldier his ideal man and for that reason he uses military terms more than any other ideal in the Bible. "When he advised Timothy to endure hardness and be strong," said Captain Handley, "he was in a Roman prison with his feet in the stocks expecting at any moment to be executed for his conscience sake and in Corinthian he proves that he was a soldier willing to suffer as he tells us he suffered strikes above measure, was frequently imprisoned, five times received forty stripes, was thrice stoned, suffered shipwreck and was in perils of sea and land constantly. But he declared none of these things moved him. So that he felt he was a loyal soldier of the Saviour.

"We are taught in the Word of God and in our churches that the earthly church is a militant church, opposing the principalities of evil in high places and throughout the world. Paul teaches in his Christian armory equipment that there is no place for the deserter or the coward as their is no part of the Christian armor that fits onto back. The back is exposed and he who dies falling on the field with a wound in his back disgraces himself and the church as he did not die with his face to the foe, but was running away from it. Our nation is a militant nation. She stands like a lighthouse exposed to storm from land and sea and sky and she must always have the elements of strength and resistance to sustain her in her patriotic struggle and preserve the principles that our forefathers have bequeathed to us. Like the Pilgrim and Puritan the sword and the Bible must go together for the redemption of the world from political and religious oppression as they defended the principles of religious and personal liberty in their day, declaring that they were willing to back up their convictions with life and property and fortune. The world will always be in a militant condition as long as the principle of selfishness prevails over the principle of love and the business man has to recognize the fact that commercialism and materialism lead to avariciousness and ill humanity and until every man has a fair chance and square deal there will always be the spirit of revolt in the victim and the spirit of defense for these sufferers in the hearts of men like Lincoln, Wendel Phillips, Wilburforce and Lord Chassbury So that war will be a necessary evil for the crushing out by force of the elements of malevolence and all the other evils that impede the progress of the highest civilization and where persuasion fails to remedy, force becomes an absolute necessity.

"The militarism of American in contradiction to that of Europe has always been a humane, generous and for the alleviation of the woes of the weak. We have never fought a battle for territorial aggrandizement for commercial profit or consciously for the benefit of any particular individual but for the good of our citizens and the civilizing and Christianizing of our neighbor. The Men of America are as willing to sacrifice their lives for the principles of liberty and equality and for the preservation of our representative government as our forefathers were. As we went to Cuba and to Porto Rico to give to those people a better civilization so we are not unwilling to sacrifice our own personal interests if it be necessary to benefit the Mexican people."

FARM YIELDS GROW

Prof. G. I. Christie, superintendent of agricultural extension work, Purdue University, and one of the leading men in agricultural work today.

"Agriculture is the great business and industry of our country and our farms must be brought to a high state of productivity to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing population. A few years ago the yields of wheat in Germany and England were lower than in the United States, but through fertilization and a better crop system they have gradually increased their yields until they now average about 86 bushels per acre as compared with 14.8 bushels per acre in this country," said Prof. G. I. Christie, of Purdue University, at the National Fertilizer Association convention at Hot Springs, Va. "On the farm of Purdue University, where conditions are similar to those of a large area of wheat lands, we get twice as much as the average through a good rotation of crops and proper fertilization."

Professor Christie told how 238 farmers in Indiana grew five acres of corn each last year that produced an average yield of 72.4 bushels per acre—twice as much as the average yield in Indiana. With the higher yields, the cost per bushel decreased making a greater profit per bushel and a much larger profit per acre. He pointed out that it is a problem of industrial efficiency as well as social co-operation to bring about comfortable homes, the best of schools, community churches, community centers, good roads and a more permanent and satisfying social life. Today there is but little new farming territory and the necessity is that greater yields be obtained from land now under cultivation.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 24, 1916.

GOOD ROADS AND AUTOMOBILES.

The President has signed the bill that provides for the expenditure of $85,000,000 in five years by the Federal Government on State highways where the commonwealth expends amounts similar to the government's allotment. This measure calls attention to the remarkable increase in the number of motor cars in the United States and the percentage of cost of road construction and maintenance that is paid by owners through the medium of the license fee. In 1915, $18,245,713 was collected in the States for owners', drivers' and dealers' licenses. There were 2,445,664 motor vehicles registered. Of the amount of money collected $16,213,387 was expended on building and maintaining highways. When one considers that in 1900 there were but 48,000 cars registered throughout the United States, some idea is gained of the remarkable growth in popularity of the automobile. In that year the license fees paid less than three-tenths of one per cent. of the total cost of road construction and upkeep and last year they defrayed nearly seven per cent. of the cost while the total road mileage had increased tremendously. There is a wide divergence between the fees charged in the different States and also in the methods of registration. For example, in Vermont the total fees per car will reach $18.10 and in Minnesota only 50 cents. There will likely be more uniform methods adopted, for each State will endeavor to raise as much as possible on car taxation in an effort to secure a larger proportion of the Federal appropriation.

TERROR STORIES DON'T AGREE.

The terror stories that are being spread touching the conditions the world must face after the international bloodletting in Europe, are so far apart that it is surprising the makers of them have not seen their own disharmony.

One is that Europe, and Germany in particular, is exhausted now and will be gasping feebly for breath at the end of the war. Poverty, private and public, will be the common condition and an uphill fight for existence inevitable. Germany and other European nations are, according to these stories, almost within the grasp of starvation now, and cannot escape a worse fate later.

The opposing story, designed also to cast terror into the world-mind, runs to just the other extreme. It is that Germany is hard at work now piling up mountainous stores of manufactured products with which she will flood the world, America in particular, as soon as peace is declared. Germany is preparing to swamp the universe with her products at the lowest prices, throwing ordinary domestic business into the scrap pile.

How Germany can have all her men and women engaged in warfare or the making of the war supplies, as told in one story, and harder at work storing up colossal piles of manufactured products to flood the world at the same time, apparently doesn't occur to the fiction makers.

SOME IMPORTANT INFORMATION.

Data of sufficient importance to warrant either a shakeup in methods or supervision in the local Board of Health has been obtained by the police department in the course of a house-to-house canvass. Although Chief Kiely is non-committal on the subject and the police officers entrusted with the task of accumulating the material have been warned to keep a stiff upper lip, it is known that investigations have brought out evidence that nuisances which should have been cleaned up by the health authorities long before this time are prevalent throughout the city. The house-to-house visits of patrolmen have unearthed conditions that are a menace to public health and when presented through the proper channels the information should prove an eye opener to some parties. The complaints have been tabulated and are ready for presentation. It is understood that the police officials are willing to co-operate in every way with the health authorities in keeping the sanitation of the city up to par, but there has been a noticeable desire on the part of the Health Board of late to enlist the aid of the police court in the settlement of trivial matters which, if properly attended to in their early stages, could be eradiated along with the entire list of nuisances the police department now has to offer as evidence that some public officials are not doing their duty.

The Vacation Trip.

The folders that the mail has brought, we've read with visions of delight.
We've sat about the study lamp and taken long trips every night.
We've traveled mentally, by sea and on the road of anthracite,

We've journeyed with the idle rich to the resorts of Switzerland.
The storied spas of Germany, we have enjoyed to beat the band,
And we have lolled in deep content upon Atlantic City's sand.

In pictured fancy we have roamed about the famous Yellowstone.
And in our minds we've heard the guide declaiming through his megaphone,
And all that we have had to do is just stand waiting to be shown. shown.

We've done all this at no expense whatever, since the first of May.
And, when it comes to traveling, that seems to be our only way.
When our vacation comes, we'll sit on our front porch for one whole day.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Anna Pavlowa inaugurates a three days' engagement in "The Dumb Girl of Portici" today at Proctors' and is supported by a cast of talented and famous stage and screen stars, including Rupert Julian, Douglas Gerrard, Wadsworth Harris, Edna Maison, Betty Schade, Wm. Wilbert, John Holt, Hart Hoxie and Laura Oakley. "The Dumb Girl of Portici" was adapted to the screen by Lois Weber, who also produced this wonderful spectacle, from the opera "Masaniello," as it was given all over the world a generation ago, but there all similarity ends. The wildest imagination of one who recalls the primitive operatic production will not conceive even the faintest idea of what genius in filmcraft, and a woman at that, has accomplished within the confines of a modern picture plant. "The Black Crook" was the title of the spectacle presented in our theatres at the time "Masaniello" was the rage. Neither "The Black Crook" nor "Masaniello" would do today. The only reason why Pavlowa chose "Manasiello" as a vehicle was because of the remarkable character of "Fenella" and because the Russian celebrity is the only woman in the world who could portray the role which has frightened more singers and caused more of a furore in its day than any mind of an author has ever conceived. It is as Fenella that Pavlowa will electrify the patrons of Proctors'. This subject stands out from all others produced in which fancy dancing is a part, in that in this the dancing appears natural and with perfect rhythm. Mlle. Palowa is introduced first as the dancer, and gives several of her most popular dances. Other beautiful scenes are those in which Mlle. Pavlowa's Russian ballet takes part, these being staged in the palace and make new standards for producers of future subjects. Wonderful sets of great magnitude and elaborate furnishings are used in the court and village street scenes. In the latter are broad thoroughfares and market places of the width of an American street, and the scenes enacted in these for the wedding festivities are indeed beautiful.

NOT BROKE BUT BADLY BENT

Plainfield Theatre.

Among all film actors playing historical characters in "The Birth of a Nation" spectacle to be seen at the Plainfield Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp have received the most compliments on the faithfulness of their work, the one as General Robert E. Lee and the other as General U. S. Grant. The picture shows General Lee surrendering at Appomattox Court House, Va., on April 9, 1865.

It is well known that many supporters of the defeated Confederacy wished to prolong the struggle by means of a guerilla warfare, similar to that used by the Boers towards the close of the Anglo-Boer war. In fact John Wilkes Booth supposed that in killing President Lincoln he would have the support of the South in a new struggle. But General Lee was of a different temper. He realized that the South had been beaten in a fair struggle on the fields of battle and that prolonging the fighting would merely add to the horrors and miseries endured by his people. Afterwards and effort was made to arrest and indict Lee for treason, but Grant, who knew Lee's nobility of character and how he had fulfilled to the letter all surrender obligations, prevented any such disgraceful sequel to the great event. Seats for the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" are now on sale at the box office. Daily matinees will be given.

Census Bureau's Summary of Manufacturers in New Jersey.

CONSISTENT INCREASE

Capital Invested Aggregates Over $1,352,382,000, a Gain of 38.4 Per Cent. Over 1909—Marked Advance in All Departments.

Washington, D. C., July 24.—A preliminary statement of the general results of the census of manufactures for New Jersey has been issued by Director Sam L. Rogers, of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. It consists of a summary comparing the figures for 1909 and 1914, by totals, prepared under the direction of William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures.

The figures are preliminary and subject to such change and correction as may be found necessary from a further examination of the original reports.

The census of 1914, like that of 1909, with reference to manufactures, excluded the hand trades, the building trades, and the neighborhood industries, and took account only of establishments conducted under the factory system. In the last census, also, as in that for 1909, statistics were not collected for establishments having products for the census year valued at less than $500, except that reports were taken for establishments idle during a portion of the census that year, or which began operation during that year, and whose products for such reason were valued at less than $500.

The word "establishment" as used in the census reports may mean more than one mill or plant, provided they are owned or controlled and operated by a single individual, partnership, corporation, or other owner or operator, and are located in the same town or city.

The reports were taken for the calendar year ending December 31, 1914, wherever the system of bookkeeping permitted figures for that period to be secured, but when the fiscal year of an establishment differed from the calendar year a report was obtained for the operations of that establishment for its fiscal year falling most largely within the calendar year 1914.

The population of New Jersey at the census of 1910 was 2,537,167, and it is estimated that it was 2,816,000 on July 1, 1914.

The summary shows a consistent increase at the census of 1914, as compared with that for 1909. In the order of their importance, from a percentage standpoint, the increases for the several items rank as follows: Salaries, 44.5 per cent.; capital, 38.4 per cent; salaried employes, 33.2 per cent.; horsepower, 29.5 per cent.; wages, 24.4 per cent.; value added by manufacture, 23 per cent.; value of products, 22.8 per cent.; materials, 22.7 per cent.; wage earners, 14.5 per cent.; number of establishments, 10.5 per cent.; and proprietors and firm members, 1.7 per cent.

The capital invested, as reported in 1914, was $1,352,382,000, a gain of $375,210,000, or 38.4 per cent., over $977,172,000 in 1909. The average capital per establishment was approximately $139,000 in 1914 and $111,000 in 1909. In this connection it should be stated that the inquiry contained in the census schedule calls for the total amount of capital, both owned and borrowed, invested in the business, but excludes the value of rented property, plant, or equipment which was employed in the conduct of the manufacturing enterprises. In the final bulletins and reports the rental paid for such property will be shown separately.

The cost of materials used was $883,465,000 in 1914, as against $720,033,000 in 1909, an increase of $163,432,000, or 22.7 per cent. The average cost of materials per establishment was approximately $91,000 in 1914, and $82,000 in 1909. In addition to the component materials which enter into the products of the establishment for the census year there are included the cost of fuel, mill supplies, and rent of power and heat. The cost of materials, however, does not include unused materials and supplies bought either for speculation or for use during a subsequent period.

The census inquiry does not include amounts paid for miscellaneous expenses such as rent of offices, royalties, insurance, ordinary repairs, advertising, traveling expenses, or allowance for depreciation.

The value of products was $1,406,633,000 in 1914 and $1,145,529,000 in 1909, the increase being $261,104,000, or 22.8 per cent. The average per establishment was approximately $144,000 in 1914 and $130,000 in 1909.

The value of products represents their selling value or price at the plants as actually turned out by the factories during the census year and does not necessarily have any relation to the amount of sales for that year. The values under this head also include amounts received for work done on materials furnished by others.

The value added by manufacture represents the difference between the cost of materials used and the value of the products manufactured from them. The value added by manufacture was $523,168,000 in 1914 and $425,496,000 in 1909, the increase being $97,672,000, or 23 per cent. The value added by manufacture formed 37.2 per cent. of the total value of products in 1914, and 37.1 per cent. in 1909.

The salaries and wages amounted to $280,984,000 in 1914 and to $218,046,000 in 1909, the increase being $62,938,000, or 28.9 per cent.

The number of salaried employes was 49,056 in 1914, as compared with 36,838 in 1909, making an increase of 12,218, or 33.2 per cent.

The average number of wage earners was 373,605 in 1914, and 326,223 in 1909, the increase being 47,382, or 14.5 per cent.

The maximum number of wage earners, 383,836, for 1914 were employed during April, while the maximum number, 343,389, for 1909 were employed during December. The minimum number of wage earners, 356,057, reported that for 1914 were employed during December and the minimum number, 313,158, for 1900 were employed during January.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— How Some People Judged A Witch.

She Heard the Rustle of Swans.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN Jack and Evelyn clapped for a story daddy began: "Everybody, even her husband, the king, believed evil of a young queen, Elise, because she went one midnight to get nettles in a churchyard to crush into flax for coats that could break her brothers' spell. This spell turned them into swans each daybreak, you see, and a good fairy had taught Elise that if she wove eleven coats without speaking a word she could save her brothers.

"But because she went at night to get nettles to finish the last coat the people doomed her to death. They led her from her beautiful rooms to a damp, dark dungeon, where the wind whistled through a grated window. Instead of a silk pillow they gave her the bundle of nettles she had gathered to lay her head on. They also gave her the ten nettle coats to lie on, but they could have given her nothing more precious."

"Goody!" cried Jack.

"Even in her dungeon Elise set to work on the eleventh and last coat. Outside street boys whistled and sang horrid songs about her, and in all the kingdom not a soul spoke a word of comfort to her.

"Just as the sun was about to go down, the time her brothers always changed from swans to princes, you see, she heard the rustle of swan's wings outside her dungeon window. It was her youngest brother, who loved her very dearly and had at last found her. He sobbed aloud with joy, although he knew that the coming night might be her last. But her work was almost done for her brothers, and they were there right near her."

Both children clapped.

"Now, the old archbishop, who had started all this trouble about Elise being a witch, came to spend the last hours with her, as he had promised the king. Elise shook her head at him, not daring still to speak lest she ruin all her labor of weaving coats and so destroy them. She gestured the old archbishop to leave her in peace. She had only this night left to finish the last coat or else all her tears and pain and love would be in vain. The old archbishop left her with bitter words, but poor Elise knew she was innocent of witchcraft and went bravely on with her work," daddy finished the bedtime story.

"Oh, daddy, will she finish the coats in time?" asked Jack.

Then daddy gave the children two big hugs.

And the children raced up the stairs.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph's Mother Pays Him a Visit and Learns for the First Time the Gravity of the Situation.

"Why, mother, where did you drop from?" asked Ralph in surprise as he opened the door one evening in answer to a ring.

"I imagined that things were not going as they should and I thought I would come and see for myself. Where is Ethel?" she asked, looking around the empty room. Ralph shrugged his shoulders and made a gesture with his hands, indicating that he did not know.

His mother took him by the shoulders and turned him around to the light. "Tell me what this means," she said gravely.

"It means that two weeks ago I came home to dinner and found a note announcing that my wife had decided to leave," was the laconic answer.

"Sit down and tell me what had happened." Mrs. Gordon laid her wraps on a chair and sat down in front of her son.

Ralph dropped into a chair and taking his mother's hands in his began chafing them in his own, for they were cold. She waited for him to reply, but instead of answering her question he said:

"My, it is good to see you, mother; I need mothering."

She leaned forward and kissed him, saying briefly, "Go on."

"There is not much to tell. Everything turned out as you said it would. Ethel shrinks all responsibility; spends every cent she can get her hands on and the evening of the first of this month I brought home a bill from a firm in Kansas City, where she had bought a suit and had it charged; a suit that she did not need. She paid sixty dollars for it."

"How did she happen to have credit in Kansas City?" asked Mrs. Gordon.

"Oh, she ran across some friends who are well off, and gave them as references."

"But you surely knew she bought the suit?" Mrs. Gordon was feeling her way through the fragments of evidence, trying to get a clue to the situation.

"She gave me to understand that her mother gave her the suit. She says she did not say that, but she ingeniously inferred it and intended to deceive me and I can see no difference between that and downright lying. A lie is a deliberate attempt to deceive. It is one of those contemptible crawl-outs that men despise and——"

"Remember her training, Ralph. She was brought up to have everything she wanted and to charge what she could not pay for," interrupted his mother.

"I know all that, mother, but I had very patiently explained to her that we could not do that way and she had promised not to run in debt." Ralph's tone indicated that he thought his skirts were clear of all responsibility in the matter.

"You say she promised not to run in debt and then went and bought this suit?" asked the mother.

"Well, no. She had already bought the suit, but she should have told me that she had this debt hanging over her," grumbled Ralph.

"Are you sure your attitude invited confidence?" Mrs. Gordon smiled. "Was it not like saying, 'Confess and be killed?'" Ralph looked sullen and did not reply.

"I want a cup of tea. We will talk about this matter later." Mrs. Gordon rose. Ralph took her wraps and hung them up; then they went to the kitchen together, his arm encircling her waist.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

WHY PRICE OF MEAT SOARS.

That between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 cattle have died of disease and exposure in the United States each year since 1900 is the assertion made in an exhaustive report on the meat situation, in the preparation of which specialists of the department of agriculture have been engaged for several months. The report also asserts that annual losses of sheep in the sixteen years since 1900 have been even greater, while the yearly loss of hogs from disease and other causes has varied from 2,200,000 in 1904 to 7,000,000 in 1914.

The investigation of which this report is the outcome was undertaken in the effort to determine the cause of the rapidly advancing cost of meat. The specialists report it has been found the principal cause for constantly advancing prices of all kinds of meat is the fact that production has not kept pace with demand due to world increases of population and that increased prices have not affected the United States alone, but have been felt in every part of the world.

"This country," the report says, "is participating in a worldwide movement, and it is not expected the situation will undergo any radical change in the immediate future. On the other hand, it is believed there will be a gradual growth and expansion in the world's production of beef, mutton and pork which may or may not equal the rate of increase of the meat eating population.

"In America this gradual expansion appears to have begun already. Between 1907 and 1913 there was a marked decline in the number of cattle in the country, but in the last two years this has not only stopped, but has given way to a perceptible increase. The estimated number on farms and ranges Jan. 1, 1916, 61,441,000, is, however, still much below the corresponding figure for 1907, 72,534,000. With the exception of temporary checks due to losses from hog cholera there has been in recent years a persistent increase in the production of swine. Jan. 1, 1916, the number in the country was estimated at 68,000,000 as compared with 58,200,000 in April, 1910. On the other hand, the number of sheep declined during this period from 52,500,000 in 1910 to 49,200,000 in 1916. As the decrease, however, is not sufficient to offset the increase in cattle and swine, it may be said that the total production of meat in the United States is increasing, but that this increase is not yet proportionate to the growth in population."

BUREAU'S SUCCESS.

Growth of the employment service is shown in the statement today that the department in May placed 11,453 persons in employment, as against 7,653 the month before. More than 17,500 persons applied for work in May. The employment service bureau has found work for more than 75,000 persons since it was organized a year ago.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

Exports for the fiscal year just ended with June amounted to $4,345,000,000 and the imports were valued at $2,180,000,000, making a total foreign trade for the year of over six and a half billion dollars, which is much larger than any previous total in the history of American commerce. These figures were announced today by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, of the department of commerce, with the explanation that the figures included for June are an estimate based on the final May statistics.

It was in 1872 that our foreign trade first exceeded a billion dollars. By 1900 it had crossed the $2,000,000,000 mark, by 1907 it had exceeded three billion and by 1913 had risen above four billion, remaining around that level until the year just ended, when the six billion mark was exceeded. Imports first exceeded a billion dollars in value in 1903 and are now a little more than twice as much as at that time. Exports first rose above a billion dollars in value in 1892 and are four times as much as in that year.

Thirteen great classes of exported articles yield a total estimated at 3,024 million dollars for 1916, as against 1,321 million for all other articles. The following table shows the remarkable increases which have occurred in exports of this group during the last two years:

The Wanamaker August Sale of Furniture

Will Be Preceded By

Days of Courtesy, Beginning Tuesday, July 25

This is Fore-notice

—to regular Wanamaker patrons both within and without New York City;

—to hotel men, boarding-house proprietors, outfitters of institutions, yachts, public places;

—and to general home furnishers within reaching distance of the Store;

—that the very important twice-a-year opportunity to replenish and refurnish is at hand.

This August event is much more than a sale and this Store is much more than a store.

The August Sale of Furniture, originating here, has become an institution with its fixed place in the plans of thousands of homemakers. Yes, with tens of thousands of homes and probably hundreds of thousands of homes, no serious refurnishing takes place without reckoning with the August or February Sale of Furniture.

And why should anyone make a selection of furniture at this time of year without seeing what this Sale has to offer?

For here is the largest stock of furniture at retail in New York City, including all grades from the very finest to the very moderate in price, and this huge stock, every piece of it is offered at a substantial lowering from the regular fixed Wanamaker price.

Included with our regular stocks are certain purchases made in the open market especially for this Sale—but not sale furniture.

Certain manufacturers without high standards do make up furniture in a cheap way for the very purpose of being sold in August sales. We allow none of this to enter the store. We do plan ahead, wherever possible, and with the co-operation of manufacturers have furniture made to our order, but it is made over Wanamaker specifications with the high standards of sound wood, careful cabinet work, proper finish and in designs that are most in favor at the time. By placing orders ahead and in large quantities we thus secure considerable reduction in the cost. In addition we do make special purchases from our regular manufacturers of over-lots, samples or discontinued styles which grade-up with the Wanamaker standard and these, also, we secure at a discount.

But a very large part of the August Sale is made up of regular Wanamaker furniture lowered in price for this event.

Reductions in price range from ten to fifty per cent., the average being more than twenty-eight per cent.

The Big Fact

of the Wanamaker August Sale of Furniture is this:

There are other stores in New York City which sell as fine furniture as we do;

There are other August sales held every Summer in New York City;

BUT—no store selling as much fine furniture as we do holds an August sale; and no August sale offers anything like the variety or shows the same genuine economies as are offered in this Wanamaker Sale.

Why Do We Hold these Days of Courtesy Preceding the August Sale of Furniture?

Several years ago our Furniture Chief sought the Founder of this business to confer on the half-yearly furniture sale shortly to be held.

After the merchandise and the service and the announcing of the sale had been gone over in detail, the Founder said—

"What do you think of getting your stocks in readiness on the floors on the morning of the day preceding the opening of the sale, with your sales force in their best clothes, and of inviting the public to come and leisurely look over the stocks so that they may decide on the things they require unhampered by the great rush of the first day of the sale?"

The Furniture Chief agreed it would be an excellent move.

"I remember," he said, "that on the first day of the last sale a number of visitors seemed to be upset by the rapid selling, and a number failed to get the things they liked most because others who liked them, too, made up their minds more promptly."

"Let us do it, then," said the Founder. "It may be a little improvement in service which the public will appreciate. And now, how shall we announce it? What shall we call the day? A day of display? . . . . No. Of selection? . . . . No. Of Courtesy? . . . . Why not? It is done as a matter of courtesy."

And as a Day of Courtesy it was announced; the first time the act had been done, the term had been used, in the history of retail storekeeping.

The people liked it. Visitors from out-of-town thanked us. Several said—"We are leaving New York tomorrow, and wouldn't have been able to avail ourselves of the opportunities of the sale had it not been for this day of courtesy. And we have found in it just what we wanted, at a wonderfully little price."

For these people we reserved what they selected, making the sales on the first day of the Sale month.

Later we heard from others who said they would be in New York until two and three days before the next sale opened. Would we extend the days of courtesy, they asked. And so we got our stocks ready earlier and announced two, three, four, five days of courtesy in the sales that followed, according to the day of the week on which the sale was scheduled to begin.

Netherwoods vs. Hopes.
Dunellen vs. Farmers.

Jupiter Pluvius was kind enough to allow the scheduled matches to be played Saturday, although he threatened to interfere on several occasions. However, he mastered his inclination and the games were played without difficulty. The Netherwoods were able to annex another victory and parade unmolested up to Pennantville. The ambitious Tabs were unable to do anything of note in Dunellen, while the Hopes, of course, suffered a reverse at the hands of the East End clan. The Baptists took an overtime tussle from the lowly Farmers and, thereby, settled the cellar dispute between these two clubs. The game was fast and interesting, going eleven innings, with the verdict in doubt right up to the fatal finish.

The matches were played on diamonds that were a little soggy, but, nevertheless, errors were no more numerous than usual. In fact, the Farmers made less errors in their game with the Baptists than they have made in any of their more recent contests. The Netherwood team, although minus the services of two of its stars, had little trouble with the Hope outfit. While the score of the Tab-Dunellen conflict would indicate that the Tabs were easily defeated such was not the case, as the battle raged evenly until the last few frames.

The umpiring was in general good, although one or two players had cause to complain. Henry Winters made his bow as an "ump" and did well under the conditions.

BAPTISTS BOMBARD STAHL AND WIN

Nevertheless It Took the Patterson Clan Eleven Innings to do Stunt.

The "big battle" for the championship of the City League cellar was waged on West End Field Saturday, the Farmers earning the right to stay at the bottom, by virtue of an eleven-inning defeat at the hands of the Baptists. Lest we forget, the score was 5 to 4.

The Farmers, with Stahl on the mound, were not the Farmers of old. They were much better fielders, base runners and hitters, although in this last department they did not do as much as they might have done. Fred Mills adorned the mound for the Baptists and that was all that was necessary. The losers could not touch the elongated Baptist, getting only three hits off him in the regulation nine inning contsst. After the ninth frame however, they reached him for two more bingles, making a total of five hits. Not one of these three clouts should have resulted in the scoring. Errors and daring base work by Burns were responsible for the four tallies gathered in by the victims.

Stahl was no puzzle, although he worked hard and successfully in the pinches. He was reached for thirteen wallops, Dan Randolph getting three of these. Compton, Patterson and Mehaffe accounted for two other hits apiece and made their tallies, in turn, account for a little action. In the eleventh frame Joe Morely derricked Stahl, going on the mound himself. Burns, who was having a grand time during the entire contest, and who fully demonstrated that he is a baseball player, went in to catch. Ford, the regular catcher, had his finger split earlier in the game. A passed ball by Burns allowed the winning run to be scored.

The work of Mehaffe deserves special mention. He has been out of the game for a number of years, but was induced to come out and practice and eventually, to agree to play. His work in Saturday's contest was first-class. He figured in everything that amounted to anything, hit the ball and ran the bags in clever style. Manager Patterson is glad he has signed Mehaffe. Townley, also, performed well, playing the difficult station in the clever fashion that made him famous as a scholastic artist.

NETHERWOOD BATTERS HOPE DEFENSIVE

Top Notch Team Takes Firmer Grasp on City League Lead.

The Netherwood baseball team, at present the top-notch outfit of the City League, defeated the Hope Chapel club in an interesting exhibition at Netherwood Saturday, the score of the contest being 8 to 6. The East End clan di not have an easy time winning, inasmuch as the Hopes had one big inaing, the fifth, in which they scored four runs. The winning aggregation tallied first, pushing two runs over the plate in the second inning.

The Hopes visited Netherwood, determined to win. Dick Schott was in fine form and did not prove easy for the league-leaders. However, Russ Stewart hurled the brand of ball that has made him famous, and was reached for only six hits, which he managed to keep scattered. Two-base hits were common, the Hope batters registering four and the East End clan accounting for three. Stewart, in addition to pitching a wonderful game, was "there" with the stick, clouting out a triple.

Jimmy Montross, the umpire who resigned his job to play with the Hopes, had an "off" day, making three errors. A few "kicks" were registered against the decisions as handed down by Hansen, but everything was satisfactorily adjusted. The score:

CRIPPLED ABSTAINERS LOSE TO DUNELLEN

Unsettled Weather Conditions Kept Two Tab Stars Away From Fray.

The Tabs, aspirants to the City League pennant, suffered a set-back Saturday afternoon when they were defeated by Tommy Apgar's aggregation by the score of 8-4.

The Tabs went down to defeat, however, with a crippled team, two of their best players, Rosenson and DeNitzio, failing to show up on account of the unsettled weather. Arrayed against them was the strong Dunellen team. Tommy Apgar, the zealous little Dunellen marshal, succeeded in mustering all of his men for the fray. Among these was Jimmy Emery, who left the team a month or so ago to play semi-professional ball. Emery played at third base in place of Moulton who will play at first from now on, as "Box" Apgar leaves the team to take a position at Bethlehem, Pa.

Taking these facs into consideration the game was a much better contest than the goodly number of fans who braved the threatening clouds expected to see when the respective lineups were made known, the outcome of the pastime being in doubt until the eighth when Dunellen scored three runs and obtained a lead of four runs. The Tabs in fact were two runs ahead at one time. Although the Dunellens regained the lead in their half of this session the Tabs, who were only one run to the bad, retained their fighting spirit and kept the game on edge by threatening several times to penetrate the Dunellen defense.

Dunellen scored its runs in this inning in the following manner: "Box" Apgar struck out. Dixon reached first on Tone Denny's error and was sacrificed to second by Gunzelman. Brown waited patiently and strolled to first. George Trust, hit to left center for his second two-bagger of the game, Dixon scoring and Brown taking third. On a cleverly executed double steel, Brown scored and Trust took third from whence he stole home, tallying easily when Denny made a wild pitch in hurrying his delivery to catch the Southern flier.

Jimmy Emery celebrated his return to the City League by tripling to deep left center in the first and scoring Trusst, who had walked. In his four other trips to the plate Emery struck out once, went out pitcher to first, twice, and flied to right field.

F. W. WALLACE WINS SWEEPSTAKES AT P. C. C.

The only event at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday was the weekly sweepstakes. Owing to the disagreeable weather there was a small field and only a few scores were returned. The event was won by F. W. Wallace with a net score of 71. These cards were posted:

F. W. Wallace, 98,27-71; Paul V. Wells, 94,18-76; Rex Schoonmaker, 86,9-77; Henry D. Hibbard, 93, 14-79.

There was the usual weekly dinner dance at the clubhouse in the evening, a number of members taking advantage of the cool spot to enjoy a good dinner and a dance afterward.

In the absence of the "much-heralded" Garwood Y. M. C. A., the Netherwood All Stars played the T. A. B. S. on Avon Oval yesterday, losing the engagement 8 to 1. "Mickey" McFadden opposed Matty Coughlan on the mound, both twirlers performing admirably. The score:

WEEQUAHIC RACES DELAYED BY RAIN

But Local Horses Get Chance to Demonstrate Ability Today and Tomorrow.

If duck racing, instead of horse racing, had been carded by the Junior League of Amaeur Driving Clubs as the attraction as Weequahic Park, Saturday afternoon the program might have been carried out.

But as it was there was nothing doing, because ducks only, or other equally amphibious creatures, would have been able to negotiate the going on the half-mile circuit.

The downpour of rain in the early part of the day was too much for the already soggy track and by noon it had been turned into a quigmire, the mud in spots being fetlock deep.

Owing to the conditions no sane horse owner would risk sending a good horse around the treacherous turns and no sane race committee would expect them to, consequently it was decided to postpone the day's sport until this afternoon.

The disappointment, though clearly unavoidable, was a bitter one, not only to the persons who had journeyed to the track to witness the events, but the horse owners as well. Most of the latter had made preparation to be on their way to new fields of action by sunset, but old Prob decided otherwise and they were forced to remain with us a little longer.

SHARK CAPTURED BY A LOCAL FISHERMAN

While fishing off Perth Amboy, Charles Drake, of this city, felt a terrific tug at his line and, realizing that something unusual was about to happen, shouted to other members of his party. The "tug" proved to be that of a man-eating shark, weighing close to two hundred pounds and said to measure five feet, seven inches.

The shark was captured by means of a line and was entirely subdued when landed. It was shipped to this city yesterday and lies in a local ice plant, where it is being viewed by hundreds of local people.

PROVIDE MANAGEMENT AS WELL AS PROPERTY

Many an intelligent man makes a will and then congratulates himself upon having done his whole duty by his family. He has done well, to be sure, but not well enough. Multitudes of inexperienced beneficiaries under a will have been seriously burdened and handicapped by the sudden acquisition of property the care of which they do not understand. This difficulty may be obviated by appointing The Plainfield Trust Company as

EMERGENCY FUND OF $1,000 NEEDED

Volunteers' Auxiliary Wants Everyone to Contribute to Patriotic Cause.

EVERY PENNY HELPS

Prominent Citizens Lend Aid to Movement by Giving Over $300—Send Your Money to E. F. Feickert, State Trust Company

The Volunteers' Auxiliary of Plainfield and North Plainfield want every man, woman and child in the two communities to contribute something to this organization, whose duty it is to comfort and help care for any of the families of the men of any Plainfield organization who are now serving their country at the border. Money is also needed to buy various delicacies for the men in order to vary the monotony of army ration of meat, beans, hardtack, bread and coffee. Also such things as magazines, rubber boots, shoes, phonographs, etc., are needed.

This is an appeal to patriotic Plainfielders—not to charitable Plainfielders. One thousand dollars is needed to tide over the work for the next two or three months. At present the Volunteers' Auxiliary has assumed set expenses of nearly $300 a month, and in case Company K should be ordered to the border the expenses would naturally amount to a great deal more. Therefore, it is necessary to establish a fund for any emergency. This is a matter of community patriotism and it is hoped that as many people as possible will see their way clear to send in some contribution whether it be large or small. Every penny helps and every person who contributes any money at all immediately bevomes a member of the Volunteers' Auxiliary. All contributions should be sent to E. F. Feickert, care of State Trust Company.

The persons sending the money will be thanked through the columns of the newspapers, and his or her name will be published, but no mention made of the amount given. At the present time the following persons have contributed: Mayor Leighton Calkins, Ernest R. Ackerman, B. O. Bowers, Roger F. Murray, E. F. Feickert, Mrs. S. B. Joost, Mrs. Caroline T. Lincoln.

A total amount of of $310 has already been sent in but the financial committee in charge of raising the money wants to impress on Plainfielders that it is the large number of small contributions of $1, $2, $5 or $10 that they desire rather than only a few large ones.

The committee in charge feels confident that they will not have to ask many times for the $1,000 that is so urgently needed at once.

ORDER OF MOOSE PRESENT PEN TO JOHN J. CARROLL

A number of applications for enrollment on the open charter of Plainfield Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, were received at the meeting of the order held last night and they will be acted on at the meeting next Monday night, when there will be a class initiation. Following the meeting there will be a supper prepared by he members of the welfare committee.

At last night's meeting a gold fountain pen was presented to John J. Carroll, the new city clerk, as a mark of appreciation of the work he has done in the local lodge. The vacancy of treasurer of the lodge was filled by the electing of Andrew Boldack to that office.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 75 degrees; 11 a. m., 74 degrees; 1 p. m., 76 degrees.

Insure Against Disappointment, Give Standing Order Now for the Plainfield Daily Press

Owing to the shortage of news print paper throughout the United States, the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS will become non-returnable after July 31st. This means that no unsold copies of the DAILY PRESS will be accepted from newsdealers. Naturally newsdealers will order only sufficient copies of the DAILY PRESS to supply REGULAR CUSTOMERS.

If you have been in the habit of buying your copy of the Daily Press from a newsboy or newsdealer, or have been buying a copy three or four times a week, let us urge you to GIVE A STANDING ORDER NOW to have a copy of the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS delivered to your home or laid aside each night. By so doing you will make sure of securing the PRESS when you wish it.

Newspapers throughout the country have been putting this same rule into effect for months, but we have held off taking action hoping that conditions would improve. Such has not been the case, however. Not only has the price of news stock been advanced, but the paper mills are sending out notices to the effect that the supply may have to be curtailed at any time by the cutting in half of orders received from newspapers. We are therefore taking the above mentioned step in order to conserve our supplies.

'PHONE CO.'S RIGHT WILL BE TESTED

S. W. Rushmore Protests Against Stretching Cable Over Property.

NO RELIEF PROMISED

Company Turns a Deaf Ear to Petitioner's Pleading for Removal of of Wires—Matter Will Be Taken Into Court.

The right of the New York Telephone Company to stretch a large and unsightly cable directly over one's property, thereby destroying its general attractive appearance, is going to be tested in the courts by S. W. Rushmore, of Belvidere avenue. Within the past week this cable has been stretched along the above thoroughfare and now hangs over the beautiful driveway and sidewalk the entire width of Mr. Rushmore's property.

During the past few days, Mr. Rushmore says that he has been mildly protesting to the company against the hanging of the cable on Belvidere avenue in front of many fine properties, but to no purpose, and today he says he was informed by a representative of the company that he was very sorry, but the company could not promise any relief.

The cable is hung on electric light poles which Mr. Rushmore believes as a layman the telephone company has no right to do even if it gets the consent of the Public Service Corporation, but at any rate he proposes to test the matter out and get a legal opinion from the courts as to whether a corporation has the right to mar the appearance of a resident's property without his consent.

Mr. Rushmore has been building one of the most attractive homes in the city on Belvidere avenue, and when completed will represent an expenditure of at least $125,000. He has spent a great deal of labor and money in the laying out of his grounds and driveway, and is particularly incensed that its attractiveness should now be spoiled by the hanging of a telephone cable. C. W. McCutchen from whom Mr. Rushmore purchased the tract, says that he did not give the telephone company any right to stretch a cable there.

MISS CLARK'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

The funeral of Miss Catherine Clark, aged 21 years, daughter of John E. Clark, of Bartle avenue, Scotch Plains, whose death occurred in the isolation hospital at Elizabeth, yesterday morning, will be this afternoon at 5 o'clock, in the Scotch Plains cemetery. Because of the fact that death was caused by infantile paralysis, the body will not be taken to the home, at all, but direct to the cemetery.

VITAPHONE CO. DONATES TWO MACHINES FOR TROOPERS

As a result of the appeads made in the columns of The Daily Press last night for phonographs and records for the militiamen at Douglas, Ariz., the Plainfield boys of Troop D are sure of getting two new machines for the "Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Building." The Vitaphone Company, of this city, has generously donated one $18 and one $25 machiine to the troop, and will jack same and ship them off for the border today.

Record contributions are needed and persons wishing to donate them are requested to send good discs and not worn-out music. All parcels for the troop should be prepaid.

Miss May Utzinger, of Jackson avenue, the borough, is visiting relatives at Mount Vernon, N. Y.

BRITISH TAKE MANY GERMANS

Report 26,223 Prisoners in Month of Fighting on the Somme.

GUNS ALSO CAPTURED

French Continue to Advance in This Section, According to Paris Report—Speyer Wins Right to Sit in Privy Council.

London, July 25.—Since the battle of the Somme opened on the first of July, 26,226 Germans have been captured by the allies. These figures are contained in an official summary on the results of the fighting issued today. In addition to the prisoners the allies have taken 140 guns, about 40 trench mortars and 700 machine guns. In its report on the latest operations north of the Somme the British War Office announced today that the Germans after being reinforced attacked the right flank and also delivered two assaults against the British center. These attacks were stopped. Further ground has been gained at Pozieres, where the Germans have been fighting desperately to hold part of the village. The prisoners taken by the British include two battalion commanders and the booty included two machine guns.

Speyer Wins His Appeal.

A decision has been handed down in the Court of Appeals sustaining the right of Sir Edgar Speyer to membership of the privy council. A movement was started not long after the war began to oust Sir Edgar from the council because of his German name.

Italians Take a Town.

A despatch from Rome says that the War Office announced today that Italian troops had captured Monte Cimone from the Austrians.

French Make New Progress.

Paris, July 25.—Renewing their pressure south of the Somme river the French by means of powerful attacks preluded with violent bombardment have thrown back the Germans at some points and made new progress. The gains of the French were reported in today's statement issued by the War Office. In the Verdun sector there were strong artillery actions last night on the right bank of the Meuse. German forces in Alsace attacked French positions but all of these asaults were repulsed.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS CLAIMS TWO VICTIMS

Grandnephews of Miss Mary Brown Succumb to Dread Disease in So. Orange.

Infantile paralysis claimed two victims in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac L. Brown, of 73 Rowland avenue, South Orange, the only two children—Wesley, aged 5 and Warren, aged 8 years, dying within forty-eight hours' difference of each others. The boys were grandchildren of Frank W. Brown, of Brooklyn, who is at present residing with his sister, Miss Mary Brown, of 2 Washington avenue, and are the latter's grand-nephews.

Both children were stricken last Saturday afternoon and Warren was immediately taken to the isolation hospital, and two hours after his removal from the home of his parents, Wesley died. Warren died yesterday afternoon. Just how the children acquired the desease is a matter of conjecture, inasmuch as the Brown family reside on a high mountain and away from the city.

JOHN REINHART SECRETARY TO MAJOR H. D. CORBUSIER

According to the last letter received in this city from John Reinhart, one of the Plainfield boys on the Mexican border, he is now back at his old job as stenographer. As soon as Major Harold Corbusier, of Park avenue, who is head of the Field Hospital Corps at Douglas, Arizona, heard that the former local police court stenographer was stationed in the same town as a member of Troop C, he had him transferred temporarily, so as to become his private secretary.

CALKINS URGES PEOPLE TO HELP

Almost 1,000 Health Violations Reported by the Police.

DANGER IS NOT GREAT

Proper Precaution on Part of General Public Will Insure Plainfield Against Infantile Paralysis, Says Official.

Almost 1,000 violations of health laws in the city of Plainfield have been reported by the local police department in the investigation that started a few weeks ago, according to a statement issued by Mayor Leighton Calkins this morning, and he urges greater co-operation on the part of the public in preventing the spread of infantile paralysis to this city.

The Mayor's statement follows:

"Supplementing what was said last week concerning the precautions which we are taking in Plainfield to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis, I wish again to call attention to the necessity of maintaining sanitary conditions. The police department was directed to make a thorough inspection, and up to July 25 had reported 268 garbage violations, 158 rubbish violations, 91 manure violations, 20 toilet violations, 19 cesspool violations, and a very large number of less serious offences, bringing the total up to 938.

"The most serious violations as reported are at once investigated by the Board of Health, the nuisances are ordered abated immediately, and if this is not done prosecutions follow. The police are very efficiently co-operating with the health inspectors, and Judge DeMeza can be depended upon to see that persistent violators of the law are punished.

"There is of course considerable hysteria and unnecessary alarm over a situation which, at least so far as our own community is concerned, is in no sense serious. This follows naturally from the fact that the disease is one which to some extent has baffled the medical profession; and it follows also from its greater prevalence at near-by places and from the prominence given to it in the news columns. While the public has a right to be kept informed in such a matter, it has an equal right to be safeguarded against panic and exaggeration. More young children will die this summer from other diseases, perhaps even from so-called summer complaints, than from infantile paralysis. We have an epidemic near us of course. But it has not reached the stage of a plague. People seem to have lost their heads, when we find some towns stationing men with red flags on the highways to prevent the approach of travelers from any direction.

"But reasonable, common sense precautions must be taken. We have therefore, for the time being, and I hope it may not be for very long, suspended certain activities. We have also adopted a Health Emergency Order requiring our citizens to report out-of-town arrivals to the Board of Health. But we have not built up a wall about the city to shut out the rest of the world.

"It is in regard to general sanitary conditions that we have the most effective means of preventing a spread of the disease in Plainfield, now that one or two cases have appeared here. It is for this reason that the results of the police inspection should be known, because public sentiment must be behind any clean-up campaign if it is to be made effective. The investigation reveals conditions in some sections of the city which would be a menace to the public health at any time, and which therefore are not to be lightly regarded in the present circumstances. Property owners who ignore the orders of the police and Board of Health will learn that there is still the city court, a department which is as interested as any other, not only in regard for what is fair and reasonable to the individual, but also in safeguarding the public health.

"By having public sentiment behind this clean-up, I mean that property-owners must wake up and not only put their own premises in order, but help the authorities by reporting bad conditions which come to their notice. As stated last week, such reports will be held confidential by the Board of Health. But the public itself must lend a hand, and insist that disease breeding conditions be eliminated."

AN ECHO FROM DOUGLAS.

Captain Albert G. Borden, of Troop D, and his officers had as guests at dinner Sunday night, Captain William O'G. Quinby, squadron surgeon, and Captain Wilbur Kyle, of Troop C. Captain Borden said that he wanted to prove that brothers-in-law could get along without scrapping. He and Kyle bear that relationship, but Major William A. Bryant thinks Captain Quinby was carried along to render "first aid" if necessary.

CRAWFORD WILL PROBATED TODAY

Former Plainfielder Remembers Local Institution in Distribution of Estate.

MANY SMALL BEQUESTS

Proceeds from Residue Goes to Muhlenberg Hospital and Tapestries and Pictures Are Given to Public Library.

After making a large number of bequests to relatives and friends, Charles Gorham Crawford, formerly of Plainfield, who died at his home in New York, July 11 last, directs that the rest of the estate shall go to the executors, the widow and Edward J. Patterson, of Plainfield, friend and family attorney, to be sold and the proceeds given to Muhlenberg Hospital, of Plainfield. The will was filed today in the surrogate's court for probate.

Mr. Crawford directed that if his widow did not survive him the estate was to be distributed as set forth in the will, which it is understood will be done by Mrs. Crawford.

Among the bequests to Plainfield are included the following: Edward J. Patterson, $5,000; Mrs. B. O. Bowers, $1,000, and the marquis diamond pin bequeathed to him by his wife; Delephine Bowers O'Donnell, $1,000 and the smallest one-stone diamond ring bequeathed to him by his wife. All pictures including the tapestry of the "Last Supper" now at the home of Mrs. Bowers are to remain there as long as she wants them, and then they are to be given to the Plainfield Public Library. Mrs. Raymond Treat Sullivan, of Riverside, Cal., receives all heirlooms of china and bedding now in the home of Mrs. Bowers.

Mr. Crawford at one time resided on East Fifth street, Plainfield. He was the son of the late Rev. and Mrs. John Crawford. He was buried in the family plot, Hillside cemetery, Plainfield.

WEAVERS AT JERSEY SILK MILLS STRIKE

Fifty Employes Walk Out Because Four Are Discharged by the Company.

Because the management of the Jersey Silk Mills, on Chatham street, North Plainfield, discharged four weavers and refused to re-employ them when requested to do so, fifty weavers went on a strike yesterday and they are still out. The mills have not shut down, however, as there is now a force of about eighty men and women still at work.

A committee from the strikers called at the mill to intercede for the discharged employees, but it was met with a declaration that the four men would not be taken back. The strikers say that under no conditions will they return to work except the re-employment of the discharged men.

Otto Lang, superintendent of the mill, when interviewed by a reporter for The Daily Press today, said that the company decided that they did not want the four employees who were let go, and that is all there is to the argument.

He said that the company reserved the right to employ and discharge men according to its own judgment and that action was taken in this case. Mr. Lang said that the mills were still running with a force of about eighty employees, and while not so much silk is being weaved, he does not expect to be inconvenienced to any extent by the strike. If the strikers want to return they can do so, but the four men let go will not be taken back.

MIDWEEK SERVICE TO BE OF UNUSUAL INTEREST

The midweek service tomorrow at the First Baptist church promises to be one of unusual interest. The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the close of this service which will be the last of its kind before the pastor's vacation. Rev. Dr. Philip Strong will preach next Sunday morning as usual, and also will preach at the union services at the First Mehodist church in the evening. He leaves early Monday morning for a five weeks' absence, part of which will be spent in Vermont and other portions of his vacation in Massachusetts and northern and central New York.

WEARY PLAINFIEDERS RETURN TO CAMP FIELDER AFTER NIGHT SPENT IN GENUINE ARMY STYLE

FIRST BATTALION, INCLUDING COMPANY K AND THREE ELIZABETH COMPANIES, FIRST TO PARTICIPATE IN HIKE FEATURE.

FIVE LOCAL GUARDSMEN REJECTED IN TESTS

Three Privates Delegated to the Machine Gun Corps—Men Who Are Accepted By Inspectors Will Be Ready to Go to the Front at a Moment's Notice—Regimental Goat Attracting Considerable Attention.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 25.—Company drills occupied the time of the men of two battalions of the Second Regiment in camp here this morning, while the rest of the command returned from the practice hike on which they started yesterday afternoon. Two companies, A and B, of Trenton, went to the rifle range for their annual target practice, and the drills by the men of the Third battalion, Companies H, of New Brunswick; L, of Princeton; M, of Somerville, and G, of Freehold, took the form of advance guard work and patrolling.

A little weary, but ready for anything that their officers suggested, the men of the First battalion, under command of Major Conrad Hall, returned before noon. They had left here late yesterday, carrying light marching equipment, and reached the camp, about four and a half miles out of Sea Girt, in time for an early dinner. Second Lieutenant Francis V. Lowden, battalion quarter master, was in charge of the commissary, and his work in providing for dinner and breakfast seemed to meet with the approval of the men. Baggage wagons were taken to carry absolutely necessary supplies, but no army stoves were taken along, the hot food being prepared over rough grates. The Battalion is made up of Companies C, F and I, of Elizabeth, and K, of Plainfield.

Wednesday night, the Third Battalion, under command of Major Walter A. Morton, will take a practice march similar to that which the Second returned from this morning, and the First, or Trenton Battalion will go out on Thursday night, on the return Friday acting as an attacking force on the two other battalions, as a big manoeuvre is arranged for the entire command on Friday. Friday afternoon Governor Fielder will hold his annual review of the command, with the exception of two companies of the Third Battalion, who will be on the rifle range.

Yesterday afternoon there was the usual evening parade, with eight regular companies and the machine gun company participating. Colonel Reading and his officers had spent most of the early part of the day getting familiar with their horses or having grooms to do it for them, so that there was not so much difficulty with mounts as was experienced in the first parade of Sunday.

In the evening there was a band concert at the Governor's Cottage, the executive having a number of personal friends as guests, and a large number of summer visitors grouping on the lawn surrounding the knoll which the musicians occupied. Governor Fielder went to Trenton to attend to State business today, but he does not expect to leave here again

LOCAL YOUTHS ARE FREED OF CHARGE

Justice Kaine Dismisses Case Upon Motion of Detective John Pelletier.

Frank and Louis Malanga, Joseph McCarty and Alfred Marsh, Jr., were acquitted of the charge of robbing Stephen Devensky, of 927 South Second street, when arraigned before Justice P. F. Kaine, of South Plainfield yesterday afternoon. The motion to dismiss the case was made by County Detective John Pelletier, representing the prosecutor's office. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the firm of Reed & Hetfield, represented the defendants.

The testimony tended to show that the complaint grew out of a fight after a picnic, which it appears was started by Devensky, and the four defendants, through their counsel, were able to show that they did not take the complainant's money, and Justice Kaine in dismissing the case absolved the young men from all blame in the matter.

CATHERINE E. SMALLEY TO ENTER BABY PARADE

Catherine Elizabeth Smalley the 9-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilbur Smalley, of 26 Westervelt avenue, is the one Plainfield child to be enrolled thus far in the coming Baby Parade at Asbury Park. Entries are coming in fast, and while the number is not quite up to that of the same date last year, carnival officers declare that the outlook is for final entry list that will compare favorably with any other year. Applications for entry blanks are received at the Asbury Park boardwalk office of the Carnival Association at the fishing pier every day, and inquiries concerning the baby pageant are numerous. Fourteen cities are represented in the entrants to date, Newark leading with eleven youngsters.

MARY SOUZZO.

Mary Souzzo, the two and one-half-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Souzzo, of McCrea place, died yesterday after a brief illness. The funeral was held from the late home this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

TROOPERS APPRECIATE ASSOCIATION BUILDING

Resolution Expressing Sincere Vote of Thanks to Plainfielders Received Here.

William D. Murray, of this city, a member of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., received a letter yesterday from Captain Albert G. Borden, of Troop D, now at Douglas, Ariz., asking the former to communicate to the donors of the Y. M. C. A. building recently opened for the use of Troop D and others, a copy of a resolution which was offered by General E. W. Hine, which was unanimously adopted the day the building was opened.

This building was put up with the $2,000 which was raised by Plainfield people within a week, and the soldiers greatly appreciate their interest and help. It is understood that money is still needed and will be needed for the maintenance of the camp, and subscriptions for this purpose will be gladly received by Mr. Murray, 205 West Ninth street, this city. The resolutions adopted at Troop D headquarters, Douglas, a copy of which has been sent to Mr. Murray, are as follows.

"Resolved, That we express to the citizens of Plainfield, through whose generous gifts has been made possible the erection of the Y. M. C. A. building for the use and comfort of the officers and men of the First Brigade of New Jersey, our sincere vote of thanks."

Captain Borden added, "I beg to assure you that the building is a great boon to the camp and that those who contributed to the fund can take great satisfaction from having invested their money in a most valuable enterprise."

OLEAVA M. ROSS.

Oleava M. Ross daughter of William H. and Oleava M. Ross, of Chatham street, the borough, died last night following a short illness. She was in her third year. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home, and the service will be in charge of Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring. The interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

PREPARATORY SERVICE.

A preparatory service at the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, and the celebration of the Lord's Supper will be held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

THE VALUE OF FIRST AID TRAINING.

The importance of first aid knowledge is being recognized more fully with every accident that occurs, and the prevention of serious consequences by the prompt application of simple treatment urges the growth of the work. The New York Telephone Company has been active in giving this instruction to its employees, and as a result of a recently inaugurated special course of lectures on safety first and first aid, an incident has come to light which speaks more for the policy than do pages of statistics. We find it in The Telephone Review, N. Y., told in the words of the employee himself. The Telephone Review introduces it thus:

That this educational movement is of value to the men, not only as employees, but as husbands and fathers, is strikingly demonstrated by the following story told by an employee who heard, heeded, and remembered the instructions given by the lecturer.

The story as told by Mr. Smith in a letter to our representative is as follows:

"A short time prior to March 1, 1916, I attended the Safety First and First Aid lecture given by the New York Telephone Company's First Aid lecturer at Middleport, N. Y., and, a day or so later, at Medina, N. Y. The value of this form of instruction appealed to me very strongly and I tried to memorize it thoroughly, not realizing, at that time, of what vital importance it was destined to be to me and mine.

"The night of March 1, 1916, was a very stormy one, snow fell and drifted into almost impassable drifts, the wind blew a gale. Our family retired early that night, and at about 11.45 P. M., I was hastily awakened by my wife, who, though badly frightened, managed to tell me that our little one, a child only two and one-half years old, was dangerously ill with convulsions. I sprang out of bed and ran to the child, to find it lying motionless, apparently lifeless, its eyes rolled back and set, its teeth tightly closed, jaws set, and black in the face. I remembered the instructions I had so recently heard and immediately looked to see how its pulse and respiration were.

I found no trace of pulse and no evidence of breathing. I at once picked the baby up, had my wife place a woolen blanket on the floor, laid the baby face downward, drew the blanket about the child for warmth, and began to apply artificial respiration. In the meantime I instructed my wife to saturate cloths in hot water and to call Dr. Brodie on the telephone. I forced the child's mouth open with my thumb and had my son hold it open with a spoon. My wife brought hot cloths and applied them to the baby's throat and chest and back, under my instructions, while I continued the artificial respiration. I worked steadily for a period of about fifteen minutes before the child began to breathe naturally. You can easily imagine, if you have any children, that it seemed like fifteen hours, but you can never imagine, unless you have gone through a similar experience, the prayer of thanks to God that arose from my heart when I saw the first signs of returning life and consciousness in my baby. And you can only guess at the extent of my gratitude to the Company that sent a man to teach me the means of saving my own child's life.

"Dr. Brodie promptly started for my house as soon as he received my wife's message, but the snowdrifts were so deep and the night so stormy that he could drive neither team nor automobile through and was obliged to wade through the drifts on foot. He came as fast as any man could come, but did not arrive at the house until 12.45 a. m., an hour afterward, and three-quarters of an hour after I had succeeded in bringing the child back to consciousness.

"When the doctor arrived he found the child breathing almost normally, though still weak and pale. He stated that the danger was past, and that I had done as well as many a doctor could have done. It was not necessary for Dr. Brodie to come again, as the child was entirely recovered before the doctor would leave, though, of course, quite weak.

"No one can measure the gratitude which Mrs. Smith and I feel toward the New York Telephone Company, whose interest in its employees' welfare has made it possible for me to learn the things which helped me save my own baby's life." (Signed)

TO GIVE STERETT FUND IN PRIZES

Money Raised for Battleship Will Go to Naval Gun Crews.

USE ONLY INTEREST

Secretary Daniels Approves of Plan —More That 200,000 Helped to Contribute—Fund Now Exceeds $24,000.

The Marjorie Sterrett battleship money is to become a fund for the giving of annual prizes for battle efficiency in the United States navy.

This plan, which was suggested by Sergeant Sterret, father of the Brooklyn school girl, whose letter started the movement, has been approved by the New York Tribune, which fathered the raising of the fund, by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and by many of the newspapers over the country that aided in securing contributions, including the Plainfield Press.

There is in the Marjorie Sterret fund $24,000. This will bring an annual interest of approximately $1,500. The interest will provide handsome cash prizes for the gun crews making the best records each year and will help to encourage efficiency in the navy. It will be remembered that no contributions larger than ten cents were received.

The number of contributors to the fund throughout the country is now nearly 200,000 and some money continues to come in, although the active campaign was stopped some months ago.

Secretary Daniels opposed from the first the raising of money for a battleship by public subscription and the Tribune has satisfied itself that the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Bennett, directing him to receive the fund, cannot be forced through the naval committee. This destroys the hopes of presenting to the government any kind of warship or of turning over the fund to it for naval construction purposes. There is no red tape connected with a prize, however.

In the following letter Secretary Daniels tells how the money will be awarded each year:

"Referring to your letter of June 29, 1916, in regard to the Marjorie Sterret Battleship Fund:

"It is understood that this fund wil amount to approximately $1,500.00 per annum, and it is considered advisable that this fund be awarded annually to:

"(1) The crew of the turret making the highest final merit at short range practice $300.00

"(2) The crew of the broadside gun mounted on battleship, destroyer cruiser, or gunboat making the highest final merit at the short range battle practice.....$200.00

"(3) The crew of the submarine making the highest final merit with torpedoes for the year.....$400.00

"This will give each winning crew approximately $12.00 per man.

"In case the fund amounts to another sum, it is suggested that proportions be approximately the same as given above.

"The award will be made by the final records and determined by the Director of Gunnery Exercises and Engineering Competition, and the prizes will be isued with appropriate ceremony on board ship by the commanding officers.

"Sincerely yours,
"JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
"Secretary of the Navy."

Tactless Salesman.

The motorcar salesman's lack of judgment cost him a sale. He was trying to sell a professional man a machine, but he handed out the wrong kind of talk and "queered" the deal. His prospective customer had been in two or three serious motorcar accidents while out riding with friends and really was just a bit timid about riding in a machine, although to please his family he had just about made up his mind to buy one. The motorcar man, with much glibness and effectiveness, presented the various virtues of his car. "Just look at the axle," he said. "When you get in a smashup that axle, unlike many others, will not break, but will bend and so can be repaired without much expense."

This unfortunate argument spoiled the sale. It aroused the sense of fear which the professional man had when riding in a machine, and he told the salesman that he guessed he would not place his order for a machine at that time.—Columbus Dispatch.

National Political Conventions.

In Democratic national conventions every state votes as a unit, the will of the majority determining the choice of the state delegation, the vote of two thirds of the delegates being required to nominate. It has never been determined whether two-thirds of all the delegates to the convention or two thirds of those present is requisite. In the convention of 1884 the opposition to Cleveland made strong efforts to break the unit rule.

In Republican national conventions every delegate votes as an individual merely, and a majority vote is sufficient to nominate. The only real attempt to introduce the unit rule, or vote by states, was made in 1880 in the interest of Grant's nomination for a third term (his second term expired in 1877), but it failed. These rules have been adopted by convention after convention, although their adoption by any subsequent convention is in no way assured.

Company K. News Notes

(By Staff Correspondent to the Daily Press)

Private "Hub" Reynolds, of Company K, is the dwarf of the camp. His 5 feet 2 inches fall three inches short of the next smallest soldier's height.

Corporal Carman has been detailed to tame Corporal Clark. Too much meat is assigned as the cause for Clark's wildness since coming into camp, and Carman has made a lasso and set about on the job of breaking in the wild one.

Miller and Van Arsdale are taking lessons from each other in the pugilistic art. Inasmuch as neither knows much about the game they are absorbing their lessons in great shape.

According to Private Willard he is doing more work than any other guardsman in the camp. That's his own idea, some of his comrades' opinions differ considerably.

The "K" men are feeding up well today in anticipation of a change in diet tomorrow, when Mess Sergeant Myrton Glover quits camp to go back to work. Glover has been providing menus with plenty of "seconds" and a number of "thirds," and the boys are fearful lest they won't be able to break his successor in along the same line.

Under the direction of Lieutenant-Adjutant Mitchell, the Y. M. C. A. tent was moved up to a point opposite the Company K headquarters yesterday. This proves a great convenience to both officers and men, particularly the former, as they will not be called upon to issue passes in the future for a trip a half mile down the road to buy a postal.

Just to show how important Company K is at Sea Girt, Captain Peterson was appointed officer of the day the very first day after arrival. The boys from Plainfield were on guard from 5 o'clock Sunday morning until 7:30 at night, and they were a tired bunch when the last detail was relieved.

Private Smith has gained the reputation of being the freshest rookie in camp. According to one of his superiors he is destined to get enough work to take some of the freshness out of him between now and Saturday.

Privates Percy Clark, Eugene Hebding and John Perrine, of Company K, have been detailed to the machine gun corps under First Sergeant Darlington.

Considerable rivalry has been awakened in the building of incinerators, each company endeavoring to outdo the other in constructing these necessities. Company I, of Elizabeth, occupying the tract next to Company K, has built a mound around its incinerator and on it arranged white shells with this inscription: "Company I, N. G. N. J."

Lieutenant-Colonel Martin, formerly of Plainfield, is filling the office of judge-advocate in the summary court.

Private Hort, formerly a lieutenant in Company K, having served two enlistments, has been assisting First Sergeant Apgar in discharging his duties. Private Hort rejoined Company K just before the outfit left Plainfield, and will probably not receive a commission during the present encampment.

"Shorty" Reynolds is serving as first butcher for Company K. This appointment came from Mess Sergeant Glover, and Reynolds is getting away with the job in great shape.

Musician "Les" Sharp is living on graham crackers these days. At least the biggest part of his menu consists of these dainty morsels.

Colonel Reading stopped at the Company K kitchen yesterday morning and congratulated those in charge of the kitchen work.

Corporal Van Arsdale (hailing Sergeant Pearson with a view to proving something to Sergeant Apgar)—"Say, Pearson, wasn't I all right when I came home last night"

Pearson—"You were in the best humor I ever saw you in."

Apgar—"There, now, that proves what I said."

Company I, with quarters directly next to K, is stamped as the noisiest delegation in camp. Outbursts of noise are forthcoming from the "I" quarters at any time of the night.

A number of militiamen took a dip in the ocean yesterday. All were looking for sharks but none was sighted.

SPEND NIGHT IN ARMY STYLE

The regimental goat is attracting more attention than any other single feature of camp life. It was presented to one of the Trenton companies by an actress playing in stock there, and the men brought it along for a mascot. It has also helped to keep Company B street clean, for it has the usual procilivities of the animal to clean up waste paper, tin cans and other thempting morsels of the kind. The men of the company take it with them wherever they go, and "Mr. William Goat" is one object that cannot be missed.

If the Second Regiment should be called to the Mexican border there would be no delay because of the medical inspection, such as caused so much trouble during mobilization here late in June. The regimental surgeons, all of whom were sworn into the Federal service as members of the medical corps or field hospital units, are taking two companies a day, and giving the men a thorough physical test. As these men now possess all the powers of the regular army surgeons, their decisions will be final, and the men who are accepted this week will be ready to go to the front on short notice. Five Plainfield men were rejected yesterday. Surgeon-General Schauffler, who is a member of Governor Fielder's staff, is personally supervising the work.

Announcement was made yesterday that Captain Bodine, of Company E, Trenton, has been appointed surveying officer for the encampment. Lieutenant-Colonel William B. Martin, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Elizabeth, is sitting as judge-advocate of the summary court. Three members of Comapny K were yesterday detailed by Captain Peterson for service in the newly formed machine gun corps, under First Lieutenant Darlington. They are Privates Percy Clark, Eugene Hebding and John Perrine. They were immediately transferred to the new corps, which has established headquarters at the head of the camp street. Eight men of Company M, Somerville, will be assigned to the outfit, but their names as yet have not been announced.

MRS. HARTFELDER RECEIVES $500 FROM MOTHER'S ESTATE

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 25.—An appraisal of the estate left by Mrs. Sarah West, mother of Mrs. Georgianna Hartfelder, of 38 Summit avenue, North Plainfield, which was filed in the surrogate's court today, shows that when she died here on February 19 last, she left $5,705.22, consisting of property and money. The bulk of the estate goes to the four children, Mrs. Hartfelder receiving $500, her brother, Arthur West, a like amount, and the balance in equal shares between Clara and Anna West, who are named executrices.

NIGHT TENNIS TOURNEY ON COUNTRY CLUB COURT

In the doubles night tennis tournament at the Plainfield Country Club last night, Phil and Ludlow Van Devented defeated H. Man, Jr., and T. M. Day, Jr., 7-5, 5-7, 6-4; S. H. Soushell and S. C. Baggs defeated S. T. Carter, Jr., and Rex Carter, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

A gallery of from 200 to 300 people watched the play. The finals will be played tomorrow evening and not this evening, as was originally scheduled.

MRS. CATHERINE SMITH LEAVES $16,802.59 ESTATE

New York, July 25.—Mrs. Catherine H. B. Smith, sister-in-law of Diana H. Brower, of Plainfield, when she died on March 16 last, left an estate valued at $16,802.59, comprising cash, personal effects, mortgages, etc. Clothing, jewelry and other articles valued at about $713.12 is equally divided between Diana H. Brower and Sarah L. Brower, the latter of Orange, as well as two nieces who reside with their mothers. The rest of the estate goes to William Leverich Brower, a brother, of New York. Judson B. Wilds, of New York, is the executor, serving without bonds.

One Way to Crack Nuts.

No tree in Chile is more popular with the hardy youngsters than the Palma chilena, or Chilean palm, which produces large bushes of a species of nuts with a soft outer covering of green. When this is cut away a hard shell is revealed, resembling a miniature cocoanut. The flavor is strikingly similar to the cocoanut. In railway carriages the schoolboy, with a reckless disregard for the conventions as well as for property, finds an instrument ready at hand for breaking open the hard nuts. Without ado he proceeds to utilize the window frame, which must be brought down with considerable force to accomplish the desired results. Consequently broken panes are not uncommon. Besides, as one writer puts it, "the railways and the glass belong to the state, the natural protector of youth."

Famous Curfew Tower.

Chertsey, Surrey, can vie with Banbury in curfew memories, though it is only in recent years that the old custom of tolling at sundown has been revived there. The original curfew bell, which hung in Chertsey abbey, tolled for the funeral of Henry VI., murdered in the Tower of London and hurried to Chertsey for burial, "without priest, clerk, torch or taper, singing or saying." The village was also the scene of the legend—first put into story form and dramatized by Albert Smith—which relates how Blanche Heriot, to save the life of her lover, Neville, condemned to die at sundown, climbed the curfew tower and held the clapper of the great bell, determined that "curfew shall not ring tonight."—London Chronicle.

Get Up on Your Toes.

Have you ever seen a champion run?
He gets set at his mark.
Every muscle is tense.
He's away at the crack of the starter's gun.
He doesn't try to beat the gun.
He holds his head up.

His arms swing in perfect rhythm.
He runs on his toes.
He gives all he has.
He breaks the tape running full force.

As They Do In Denmark.

In Denmark the bread is home baked. The women spin woolen yarn which the village weaver makes into cloth or which they knit into stockings. The women make their own dresses. Often they make clothes for their husbands and sons. The men make wooden shoes for the family and house furniture and farming implements. And the efficient Danes set Europe an example of intensive farming.—Atlanta Journal.

BREAK WITH ENGLAND DISCUSSED BY CABINET

Washington, July 25.—It was officially stated today that the State Department may have an announcement to make concerning the British blacklist within twenty-four hours. Officials would go no further than this. At today's cabinet meeting the discussion was given over to the diplomatic controversies between United States and Great Britain almost exclusively. The mails issue is also acute.

PLAINFIELD NOT AFFECTED BY PRUDENTIAL STRIKE

Although two thousand collecting agents of the Prudential Insurance Company went on strike today, after dismissal of sixty of their associates, the walkout does not include Plainfield, and inquiries at the local office this morning brought the information that none of their men were connected in any way with the trouble.

The men dismissed represent districts in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. The company says the men were dismissed because of disloyalty. The strikers contend the only reason for the agents' dismissal is that they were active members of the newly organized International Insurance Agents' Union. Agents have already turned in their books in Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne, of this State.

FANWOOD HAS FIRST CASE OF PARALYSIS

Another Suspected Case is Found Today on West Third Street, This City.

Two new cases of infantile paralysis, one of which has not yet been fully determined, raising the total in this section to five, with three in this city, were reported today, one being Ida Finn, the eight-year-old daughter of Frank Finn, of 681 West Third street, and the other Norma Palcanis, the three-year-old daughter of George Palcanis, of Russell road, Fanwood.

Dr. Ellis Campus discovered a suspected case of paralysis at the Finn home this morning and immediately isolated the child and put a strict quarantine on the house and members of the family. The child had not been away from home nor been playing with other children. Dr. Campus found the case in its early stages and has hopes of saving the child. So far he has had all three cases in Plainfield, they being in one section of the city.

It was decided yesterday afternoon by Drs. F. W. Westcott and Robert Sinclair that the Palcanis girl had infantile paralysis. She is now in a critical condition and her recovery is doubtful. The house and members of the family have been put under quarantine and the Fanwood health authorities have hopes that it will be their only case of the disease.

The younger son of Mr. Palcanis was first taken sick, although Dr. Sinclair said that it was not paralysis, and as he was recovering the little girl was taken ill on Sunday. The children had not been away from home in some time and it is thought that it must have been carried to the house.

MRS. A. S. JEFFREY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Arthur S. Jeffrey, whose death occurred last Saturday, following a long illness, was held this afternoon at two o'clock from her late residence, 308 Grant avenue. The service which was in charge of Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was attended by many relatives and friends. The flowers sent by the latter were unusually numerous and handsome, there being a number of set pieces, including one from Lydia Chapter, Order Eastern Star Lodge. The interment took place in Samptown.

C., Sunday night, will arrive in Plainfield tomorrow afternoon, and will be taken to the home of Mrs. Catherine Lynch, of 683 West Fourth street. OWYHAMAG AND BARON WIN NEWARK PRIZES

Horses Owned by Dr. H. E. Winter Make Good Showing.

Trotters and pacers owned by lovers of the light harness horse in New Jersey and handled by amateur drivers of the same State are superior to their rivals in New York, Massachusetts and Deleware, according to performances recorded last Thursday, Friday and yesteray at the interclub matinees at Weequahic Park, in Newark. In the three days of racing the Jersey horse scored with such frequency that they rolled up a total of 37 points and carried off the cup offered to the club whose representatives won the most ribbons. As all the Jersey owners are members of the Roard Horse Association of New Jersey, the emblem of supremacy went to that organization.

The "Baron" and "Owyhomac," both owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, made good showings.

The "Baron" finished first in the first division (trotting), "Tom Minton" being second, with "Miss Zombro," third. "Lyndon" was fourth and "Bingerloch" last. The time was 2:18, 2:18¼. "Fannie Guy" won first in the second division with "Montbert" second. In the final heats for winners of each division "Baron" beat "Fanny Guy." The tiem was 2:18½, 2:14.

"Owyhomac" finished second in the 2:13 class (pacing).

HUDSON COUNTY SHOW ATTRACTS MANY ENTRIES

Many of the aristocrats of the canine world will greet the judges at the first annual dog show of the Hudson County Kennel Club tomorrow at Union Hill. Many out of town entries have been made. Over five hundred dogs will be benched. Jitney busses will run from all the ferries direct to the park for the convenience of exhibitors and guests.

Among the exhibitors from New York are Mrs. Roy A. Rainey, Jacob Ruppert, John G. Bates, Mrs. F. Burke-Roche, Mrs. Carl Ehlermann, Mrs. George Ehret, Jr., and Mrs. E. K. Lincoln. Others are Louis Lee Haggin, of Lexington, Ky.; Mrs. M. E. Harby, Mrs. Leo F. F. Wanner, Hamilton Fish Webster, Willard D. Straight, Francis G. Lloyd and B. G. Work.

CONVENTION OF MOTORCYLISTS

Every train and boat arriving in Providence today brought its quota of delegates and visitors to the annual national convention and assembly of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, which is to hold forth here during the remainder of this week. The attendance and enthusiasm recall to the old-timers the days when the national meets of the League of American Wheelmen were among the largest yearly gatherings held in this country. Members of the reception committee today met each train and boat and gave all possible information to the visitors. Hundreds of the arrivals brought their motorcycles along, and the baggage-rooms of railroad stations and hotels looked like some mammoth cycle clearing-house. The election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place, and the consideration of a number of changes proposed for the by-laws of the federation will occupy the attention of the delegates at their business sessions. Between sessions there will be numerous features of entertainment provided for the visitors. Of most interest, however, will be the racing program that will be carried out in conjunction with the meeting. The races will take place at the Narragansett Park Speedway, commencing Thursday and continuing over Friday and Saturday.

ROBBERY ON FRONT STREET.

Kresge's five and ten cent store on West Front street was broken into by boys sometime last night and between $15 and $20 worth of candy, cakes and other articles taken. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window, and candy and cake had been thrown about the store. The youths go away without being seen and the police have only a meagre clue to work on.

POPE'S NAMEDAY OBSERVED.

Rome, July 25.—One of the largest bodies of Catholic pilgrims seen in Rome since the beginning of the war visited the Vatican today to participate in the observance of the nameday of Pope Benedict. This afternoon his Holiness received the members of the Sacred College, when the usual good wishes of the prelates were extended.

MEN ON THE BORDER ANXIOUS TO KNOW HOW MUCH LONGER THEY MUST REMAIN

Some of the National Guardsmen Fear Their Families Are In Want, as Few Employers Didn't Make Good In Pay.

Other Little Stories of Daily Life of Our Boys—Razors and Tobacco In Demand. Need Cooler Uniforms.

"WHEN are we going home?" is the question heard more often than any other around camp these days. The men are at the point of drafting a petition to be sent to the secretary of war demanding the fixing of a date for their withdrawal. With a definite time limit in sight, even though it be a long one, they feel they can better stand the monotony of camp life.

Officers receive letters daily from wives of their men asking for information on this subject. Some of them show that actual want is being caused by the continued absence of the breadwinner. In three instances it has been claimed that the offer of the employer to continue the payment of salary while the man was at the border has been withdrawn now that the prospect of war has been averted. Three of the largest mercantile firms of New York were mentioned among those that had failed to live up to their agreement.

Writes She Got No Pay.

Here is part of a letter written by the wife of a soldier in the Seventy-first New York regiment who refused to join the depot battalion before his regiment left New York until he was assured his employers were going to pay his salary while he was away:

New York, Tuesday.

My Dear—Now, dear, don't think I am crazy for writing so often, as I just cannot help it. Your mother called up today to let me know that your father couldn't get your money. I had not got a cent. I only hope that Queenie will never know the hunger for something to eat as I had since you went away. Florrie and Ida and Rita have given me some money since you left, and I have been down there quite often for supper, but you know how I am. I don't like to be always going down there.

Well, Honey, as the days go on I seem to be getting more and more disgusted with life. Here I am, can't go out, for I expect some one from the Seventy-first regiment up. I have not got a cent and nothing to eat. I don't worry any more, for I really don't care what happens to me now. I tell you, Honey, if it wasn't for the children I never would put up with it. I don't know what I will do tonight, for I have not got any supper for the children. * * *

P. S.—Don't forget to try hard, as hard as you can, to come home, for we need you badly.

When this case was reported one of the officers of the regiment at once telegraphed to his wife to aid the family, and it is supposed that the auxiliary has considered the case also.

Cookie Takes Night Off.

Private Frank Dorres, second cook in Company C, Thirty-first Michigan infantry, stationed in El Paso, spent a day under guard.

Dorres, who speaks Spanish fluently, got the wanderlust one night and, changing his khaki garb for civilian attire, walked across the international bridge into Juarez. Down the Calle Commercial and up to the Plaza Independencia sauntered the disguised guardsman. He stopped at numerous cantinas, where, with fingers crossed, he says, he was forced to drink to "Muertos los Gringos."

A Mexican dance was in full swing, and Private Dorres grabbed himself a senorita and took step. The sun was just peeping over the well known peaks of the Casas Grandes mountains when the dance broke up and Dorres came home to be arrested.

"Indians" on Warpath.

Several "Indians" from Chicago now doing their bit for Uncle Sam have held a council of war—a council of war with a cold peace pipe, which is quite unaboriginal—and the reason is to be found in the following soldier's letter:

Sunday.

Camp Wilson, Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex.—Just a few words from the "Indians" of Company I, First Illinois infantry. The Indians called a council of war and decided to hit the trail at 7 a. m. After making blanket rolls they started on the warpath, on their trusty ponies, commonly known as shank's mare.

By the time they had tramped for an hour and a half they suffered their first defeat at the hands of General Sun and his army of 110 (degrees). The Indians held their ground, but soon retreated to the shelter of their cool and comfortable tepees—cool and comfortable in this case meaning 105 in the shade and no shade.

We do not want the people in Chicago to get the impression that the Indians are uncivilized, as they originated in Hamilton park. The cause of the outbreak this morning was due to the lack of tobacco for their peace pipes.

As soon as we receive a supply of the weed, which we expect from our fellow tribesmen in Chicago, peace will once more reign on the reservation. Hoping that our friends will see this article, we remain,

JAMES WALKER,
HOLLY MIDKIFF, Chiefs.

Guardsmen In Mud.

With quantities of mud to the right of them, mud to the left of them, mud underneath them, with mud in their puttees and with mud in their hair, 6,000 national guardsmen from Nebraska and Indiana are glued in Llano Grande, Tex., in a morass which makes the New York encampment sites stand out like million dollar, paved, sidewalked, street lighted, suburban developments.

It was raining hard when the first of the troops, a battalion of Indiana artillery, detrained. It has rained hard several days since. Sun baked fields which until a couple of weeks ago had known nothing but duststorms for more than a year have become swamps.

The three mile road to Mercedes, the nearest town, offers the same sort of thoroughfare to autos and motortrucks that flypaper does to a fly, and halfway along that road the men must toil to reach their water supply, hoofing it.

Only two trains a day pass over the nearby branch line railroad, and the only other reliable transportation to town is a handcar that the "cap" kindly lends to Uncle Sam when it is not employed in transportation the transportation of Mexican track hands. In the north the water that repays the men for the long, sticky haul would hardly be considered worth going after. It comes from an irrigation ditch and is unfiltered.

Battery A Has Record.

The most distinguished organization in the camp at Llano Grande is Battery A of Indianapolis, formerly commanded by James B. Curtis, who now has a law office in Nassau street and is president of the Indiana Society of New York.

Under Captain Curtis the battery went into Porto Rico in '98. Its guns had just been trained on the mountain passes beyond Guayamas when word came that peace had been declared.

Battery B is made up entirely of engineering students from Purdue university, and Battery C also was recruited in the university city of Lafayette.

Major Robert H. Tyndall, commanding the artillery battalion, is considered one of the two best posted national guard officers in the country. The other is Major General John F. O'Ryan of New York. The two, both captains then, represented the guard on the executive council of the Field Artillery association some years ago.

Because of Major Tyndall's training (for years past he practically abandoned all other pursuits to attend war schools) the artillerymen are the most comfortable of the troops here. They are encamped on the highest land, have the best equipment, barring ammunition, and the best organized messes.

Mexican Guards Crossing.

Jose Allendro holds a red flag and the life of most of the officers of Camp Wilson at San Antonio in his hand.

"Wava the red flag, lives all save," he says.

Jose, a Mexican, all day long guards the crossing where trains over the Katy come roaring out of the "cut" across the roadway traversed by camp vehicles. General Funston and General Bliss today passed his red flag twice, and he was "muy hombre."

"Sava life of the generals," said Jose, "and kill many Mexicans; that is fine. They should be dead, some of them."

There was a lull in the mumps epidemic at Camp Wilson. No new cases. The original seven eye each incoming patient jealously and when he passes to another ward say, "We are seven."

Alfred Schmidt of Company E, Seventh Illinois infantry, Tenth squad, says every morning the men in the squad have to inquire each other's names because "we need a shave so bad." He says the boys can worry along without smokes, but won't some one please "help us out with a razor, we don't care how old it is."

Many Bryan Likenesses.

Even among the militarists William J. Bryan must have a considerable following at Llano Grande. Anyhow, a great number of officers and men seem to take care to look as much like him as possible, and some of the likenesses are striking.

The Third Minnesota infantry, rather better off in equipment than the Nebraska and Indiana infantry regiments, arrived late one afternoon and went into camp in the mud wallow. As a class they are tall and fair, and the roster naturally runs strongly to Jensens.

To the north when the country is dried out and practice marches are possible the men of that camp will come upon two heaps of bleaching bones, a reminder of the strenuous happenings that Llano Grande and Mercedes knew last year. The bones and a few spreads of cloth no longer identifiable as Carranzista uniforms are all that is left of seventeen Mexicans who crossed the river on a raid and met a posse.

Married by Mail.

Before the departure of the troops to the border Private Louis Bansemer, Company H, First regiment, New Jersey national guard, was deeply in love with Miss Ethel Maud Sergent. Both live in Newark. When the guard was sent away this young couple decided at once to have announcement of their engagement made public. This was done.

Fearful lest the worst should happen to Private Bansemer, who worked for the Prudential Life Insurance company, and desirous of being married at once, efforts were made while the troops were encamped at Seagirt, N. J., to have the ceremony performed by proxy. This was found to be impossible under the laws of that state. So Bansemer left for the border, still single.

MARRIED BY MAIL

Jersey Couple Overcame Many Obstacles and Were Wed While Miles Apart.

LOUIS BANSEMER AND BRIDE.

Undaunted, the young couple increased their determination to marry at once. On July 6 Miss Sergent appeared before a notary public and signed a marriage contract, which was sent by registered mail to Bansemer at Douglas, Ariz. Both her lawyer and the marriage clerk at Newark expressed the opinion that such a procedure was perfectly legal and binding, being the same as a common law marriage.

On receipt of the papers Bansemer appeared before a notary at Douglas and signed the contract, completing every detail of the marriage ceremony. The papers were at once sent back to Newark, and when Private Bansemer returns he will be greeted by his bride, Sergeant J. C. Clark of Company H witnessed Bansemer sign the papers.

Company H, on hearing of the marriage, arranged a wedding breakfast, consisting largely of salt pork, and at 5 o'clock on a hot morning on the frontier the entire company celebrated and drank distilled water to the health of the bridegroom in their midst and the bride in faraway Jersey.

Kid McCoy Fights.

A crowd was on hand to watch the famous Kid McCoy engaged at sentry duty with Company K of the Seventy-first of New York. Company M boasts another athlete in Nick Gianakopola, the Greek runner, who officiates as cook. McCoy was matched with "Scrapper" Dooley of New York for a four round sparring match.

With the arrival of General O'Ryan the border will commence to resound with the roar of artillery and rifle fire. Practice range shooting is to be carried on at a scale never before attempted by the national guard. There are to be no weak links if the call comes to move down that seven miles of dusty road to the Rio Grande. To help make that hike in record time the Seventh has produced the following marching song:

When we come back from Mexico,
When we come back from war,
The national guard can go to hell,
We won't enlist no more.
We'll get a bath and change our clothes
And truly, by the Lord,
We'll hop into a jitney bus
And vote for Henry Ford.

His Wife Wasn't Dependent.

A New York private swept out the quarters of the regimental staff. With broom in hand he labored with such a will and such seeming joy in doing a hard duty that he was asked about it.

"If you're going to be a soldier you might as well go the whole way," he answered. "I see the necessity for doing this, so I do it. What was I before I turned soldier? Why, I was an exploration engineer for a big Wall street house. I thought that, being a young man, I ought to do my bit for my country, so I came away."

"Rookie?" one asked him.

"Yes," he answered. "I bought my own outfit at a supply store. They weren't going to bring me."

He was writing a picture postcard to his wife.

"Yes," he said, "I'm married. Here's a picture of my little girl. They asked me about her when I enlisted. They asked if my salary would go on. I told them no, it wouldn't. They told me I better go back to my wife and support her. Then I had to tell 'em what I didn't like to—that my father left me $930,000 when he died eight months ago and my wife wouldn't be exactly dependent."

WAR ORDERS NOW $3,000,000,000

Purchases by Allies Reach an Unprecedented Amount.

SCHWAB'S BIG OPERATIONS.

Has New $200,000 Plant Solely to Make Boxes to Ship Shrapnel In. Secrecy Marks the Deals, and It Is Difficult to Estimate Just What Amount Has Been Expended Here.

America, from Chicago east, is now on the shady side of $3,000,000,000 in all its war orders, counting blankets, machinery, locomotives and other products not coming strictly under the head of munitions.

Twenty-four corporations alone account for more than $1,000,000,000 up to Feb. 1 of this year. This figure is said to be "highly conservative." In other words, this item, comprising scarcely one-third of the country's war receipts, is equal to the entire national debt of the United States, with 140 years of existence behind it during which it financed four wars of its own, innumerable congressional "pork barrels" and satisfied the wants of a population of 100,000,000, or as many people as France and Germany have combined.

Official reports from the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce at Washington show that shipments of war munitions up to date have aggregated $446,000,000. These figures cover munitions in the strictest sense of the word. They do not include locomotives, blankets, rails, machines for gunmaking or other materials of this class which are indispensable to the nations as part of their war supplies.

It must be remembered also that a tremendous amount of war orders already placed will not begin to run before the fall and next year. Some of these contracts call for delivery as late as 1918.

The Philadelphia district, taking in South Bethlehem and Wilmington, stands credited with $1,000,000,000 all by itself. As nearly as can be computed, for nothing can be learned accurately with the munitions makers tied lip and tongue by the allies, fear of labor disturbances and other factors, including the government, the Baldwin Locomotive works have received, either directly or indirectly, for the Eddystone Munitions company orders amounting to approximately $150,000,000. Beside this the company will participate in royalties of at least $2,000,000 from the Remington Arms company plant at Eddystone, not to speak of two buildings which revert to it on the termination of the war.

$60,000,000 Worth of Orders.

The Midvale Steel and Ordnance company, so William P. Barba, vice president of the Nicetown plant, testified before the house committee on naval affairs on March 23, was working on $60,000,000 worth of war contracts. At that time the Remington Arms plant had not started work on the second order for 2,000,000 rifles for the allies, which, it is understood, the company took at $16.20 apiece, or a matter of $32,400,000 for the whole contract. In the Midvale business must be included the orders taken by the Cambria Steel company, which, consolidated with the Midvale, brought a dower of rail contracts.

The war orders of the Bethlehem Steel corporation at one time at least were an open book. They are placed at $300,000,000 up to February last. Charles M. Schwab, the salesman extraordinary of the war order business, made no secret of scalping the cream of the allies' business before J. P. Morgan made such a bargain as to be appointed the virtual representative of the foreign group. And to prove that his profits were not mere paper figuring Schwab is reported to have gone so far as to distribute Christmas presents of anywhere from $100,000 to $1,000,000 to "deserving employees." One of these to receive the "cross of gold" to the extent of $1,000,000 as a bonus, it is said, was E. G. Grace, president of the company. Other "boys" fared proportionately well, depending on the way in which they had dug up their talents to further "getting out the stuff."

The Bethlehem Steel corporation has produced munitions far in excess of any other plant in the country. Its payroll now equals 55,000 men. Only the other day Schwab announced he had a war fund of $70,000,000.

Bethlehem's output averages 350,000 shells of all calibers a month. These include the English "three 29's," sixty pounders, ten inch explosives, naval projectiles for England and a large order of the famous "75's." In addition to finished shells it is making accurately rolled bars out of which England and France will cut shrapnel billets. It is said that the price of an English 329 or a French 75 at Bethlehem is $12,000, while a sixty pound gun is reputed to bring $22,000.

The Du Pont company, at Wilmington, next to Schwab, is said to be the big profit maker with a foreign war account of more than $200,000,000. The profits arising from this business can be appreciated when it is known that powder brings $1.10 a pound. As given out it costs something in the neighborhood of 30 cents a pound to manufacture this explosive.

DEAD HORSE SURE DECOY FOR SHARKS

West Indian Tells How to Kill the Man Eaters.

SUCCESS IN CARIBBEAN SEA

Carcass Anchored Off Shore Would Attract Them, and Men In Boats Could Easily Harpoon Them—Sea Monsters Cowards and Never Attack Unless They Have Advantage.

James Glasco, a native of St. Croix, Danish West Indies, told of a plan he believes will clear the New Jersey bathing resorts of any sharks that may be cruising off the coast. It is a plan adopted in the Caribbean sea and in those waters never fails.

Mr. Glasco spent many years shark fishing before he became a resident of the United States and is familiar with the habits of these undersea monsters. He thinks that undoubtedly the fish which killed several men off the Jersey coast was a shark and that it or a number still lurk in the same vicinity.

"If the authorities will take the carcass of a horse and anchor it from a half a mile to a mile off shore," said Mr. Glasco, "I will be greatly surprised if they do not get a chance to harpoon every shark within five miles. They won't have to wait long. Several boats should lie close by, and heavy harpoons should be used.

Feed on Carrion.

"Man eating and other sharks feed on carrion and the longer the horse has been dead the greater will be the attraction. My experience is that any shark cruising in the vicinity will detect the horse in a few hours. He will attack it viciously and may be easily harpooned. More than one boat should stand by for the reason that when a shark is hit he becomes blind with anger and is likely to dash into any one of the boats. He will strike with his triangular dorsal fin with enough force to crush or upset the boat."

Mr. Glasco said that sharks of the white, or man eating, variety usually travel in twos or threes, and that they might remain along the coast the entire summer unless caught. They keep close together, so if there is more than one the fact can be readily ascertained.

Sharks Are Cowards.

"It is most unusual for a shark to go in so close to the beach," he said. "As a rule, they fear they will get sand in their gills. Once sand reaches the gills breathing is difficult. Moreover, strange as it may seem, sharks are cowards. A man jumping from a boat will scare a man eater off, but he will lurk around waiting his chance. They like to strike when they are sure they can take their victim unawares."

According to Mr. Glasco, the pound nets off the coast near Spring Lake probably have attracted the sharks, which he considers strayed north from the gulf stream into unfamiliar feeding grounds. Each morning these circular nets are filled with food fish and he thinks it likely that the man eaters, crazed by the sight of food they could not reach, became ravenous enough to go inshore for human flesh.

Crew Gives to Red Cross.

The officers and crew of the German undersea liner, the Deutschland, decided unanimously and enthusiastically to turn over to the German Red Cross the $10,000 check which has been donated to them by August Heckscher of New York in recognition of their pluck in bringing the submarine across the ocean.

HOW TO CONQUER HEAT.

One way to take the hot weather is to stew, fret, fan yourself and force your neighbor into company with your misery by asking him, "Is it hot enough for you?" Another way is to take it as an adventure. To be prepared for meeting the heat you should drink no liquor, eat moderately and reduce your clothing to—or, if your courage is great, below—the minimum prescribed by custom, advises the Waterbury (Conn.) Democrat.

The adventure itself is to prove yourself superior to the heat. Man, the master, can live in both hot and cold climates. His progress is marked by ever increasing fear of things outside of himself and ever increasing dominion over matter. His being—spiritual and eternal, most people call it nowadays—cowers no more. Look upon the sun and its warmth—pretty well tempered to us—as the friend and not the tormentor of humanity.

This establishment of a friendly relation with the source of heat waves helps some. But it is not enough. There is left the necessity for calling upon your inner strength to meet the heat and prove yourself the better in the encounter. You may not win. But you will be calmer and more self respecting and "feel better" if you attempt the mastery than if you sink down at the first approach of heat and wait for its blows.

RESTRAINING THE MEXICANS.

George Marvin in the August World's Work tells the following interesting story of Candido Aguilar, who is now Secretary of Foreign Relations for the Carranza Government, but was, in 1914, when United States troops under General Frederick Funston were occupying Vera Cruz, commander of the Mexican army lying between that port and Mexico City. "In his own name, as 'General' of the Constitutionalist forces, he several times demanded, two years ago, the immediate retirement of General Funston and his brigade from Vera Cruz. Finally, Aguilar sent his messenger with a note to Funston which ran approximately as follows: 'I am sorry to say that I am no longer able to restrain my troops and I therefore take the liberty of suggesting your immediate withdrawal.'

"General Funston withdraws very poorly. But even though he cannot walk Spanish he speaks the language fluently. He turned the dispatch around and wrote across the face of it: 'My Dear General: If you can't hold your own troops, allow me to help you, because I can. Funston.'"

Carelessness or disobedience toward the recent emergency orders of the Health Board merit prompt and severe action on the part of Chief Kiely and Judge DeMeza and citizens will note with pleasure that two men were fined for this offense in police court yesterday. One had allowed his children to run around on the streets after they had been ordered to stay at home. The children recently came from an infected district. They may have carried death to many local homes. No one in the city is safe unless every man, woman and child does his or her part to prevent the spreading of infantile paralysis to this city. The most careful mother may find her children infected through the recklessness of a neighbor, and those who endanger the health of the community for any reason are criminals.

Clark Martin, the first Plainfield boy to give his life in the service of his country in the latest need, did not die in the glory and heat of battle, but his sacrifice was as great as that made on any battlefield. He gave his all. Mounted Orderly Martin, of the fighting 69th, was one of those who should never have been called. When he answered the bugle call he left at home a girl-wife of three or more weeks and now she must don widow's weeds before the bride's blush has faded from her cheeks. Free to choose, he would have been a volunteer, but it required sacrifice amounting to heroism to don a soldier's uniform when his clear duty was at home. No sane system of defense should demand such sacrifices.

Our heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, of 804 Central avenue, as they enter onto their 61st year of married life. In this day of "a short life and a fast one" and of divorce mills that grind unceasingly golden wedding anniversaries are events of more than passing interest, and a couple that has enjoyed sixty years of loving companionship is blessed indeed. Eight children, all born to the union, were alive and had a part in the anniversary.

Let Scientists Go Hang.

The scientists inform us that there's danger lurking in a kiss.
They've conjured up a kissing gauze
that's to be worn by every miss.
The gauze will keep the microbes from the spreadin' of grim disease.
For kissin' microbes, so they say,
will sting a feller just like bees.
Though I have tried a lot, I've yet to see the feller old or young
Who walks on top of this old earth who wouldn't just as soon be stung.

Them old professors don't seem able to give other folks a rest.
They're always thinkin' up some scheme to knock Dan Cupid galley west.
Why don't they 'tend to their own business, dopin' grammar out, and laws,
Instead of spoilin' all our fun by boosting their new kissing gauze?
If my Irene, the village queen, does mix up microbes with romance,
They won't sell me no kissing screen—a good sport always takes a chance.

Pity the Poor Microbe.

It is announced that the University of California has received a donation of $1,000,000 from a rich man, the fund to be used in research work among microbes. It may seem to the lay mind that nearly all of the possible microbes have been discovered already, but this is a common error. The scientists have never yet failed to come to the front with a new microbe when there seemed to be a demand for one. They began discovering them in large and diversified quantities about ten years ago and have been hard at it ever since. One of the first was the drinking cup microbe, but closely following this came the dollar-bill microbe, the door-handle microbe, the telephone microbe, the roller-towel microbe, the hand-shake microbe, the kiss microbe and enough others to fill seven columns of a newspaper printed in agate type.

It is sometimes a question how the forefathers worried along and did everything that they should not do and defied all these germs. With but very few advantages they lived to a ripe old age and the microbes were all about them as thick as mosquitoes in a New Jersey coast village. But now that the work of discovery has secured such a grand start it seems as though it should be pushed to a finish, if there is a finish.

Signs of the Times.

Have you ever noticed how the ice-box door hangs open? One of them is everlastingly open and the hot air from the outside is just eating up your good ice that you have paid for at taxicab rates. We have an opinion upon this subject. We believe that the ice trust holds stock in the refrigerator factories and that every ice-box is so made that at least one door will hang open.

An up-to-date paper announces, "Premier performance of Romeo and Juliet by William Shakespeare." The only drawback to this premier performance is that the author will probably not be able to be present.

- Proctor's Theatre -

AT PROCTOR'S FRIDAY.

Yesterday Anna Pavlowa, the famous Russian dancer, who is one of the most noted artists to succumb to the lure of the motion picture, began a three-day engagement at Proctor's Theatre in a picturization of "The Dumb Girl of Portici." The story is a decidedly strong one, giving to the various members of the cast supporting Mlle. Pavlowa, remarkable parts. That all were cast well is brought out by the very good performance given by each member. This subject stands out from all others produced in which fancy dancing is a part in that in this the dancing appears natural and with perfect rhythm, and lacking that jerky motion films heretofore possessed. Mlle Pavlowa is introduced first as the dancer, and gives several of her most popular creations. Through the film she appears in this role in but few instances, but in each case the dances brought forth applause. Other very beautiful scenes were those in which Mlle. Pavlowa's Russian ballet took part, these being staged in the Palace set and making new standards for producers in the future. Rupert Julian as Masaniello was sincere in his performance, and Douglas Girrard as Alfonse was an ideal lover, swayed by the will power of his royal parents. William Wolbert, in the heavy part of Pietre, though a most unlikable character, gives a remarkable performance. Edna Maison and Betty Schade appeared as Lady Elviria and Isabelle, and their beauty and ability as actresses add to this production. Wadsworth Harris as the Viceroy, gives a very worthy portrayal of this heavy part, and Hart Hoxie as the captain of the guards, again proves his ability as a horseman in the dashing raids, and especially the one in which he rescues the duke's leader.

"The Dumb Girl of Portici" will continue at Proctor's tonight and tomorrow in addition to other photoplays, while on Thursday William S. Hart, Thomas H. Ince's most popular Triangle star, will be seen in his latest vehicle, "The Apostle of Vengeance."

AND THE LIFE GUARD IS AFRAID TO GO OUT

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

THE CHARGE AT PETERSBURG.

One of the exciting moments in "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Seats now selling.

The general character of "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is of necessity sober and somber. It represents a critical period in the history of the States. It pictures a time that "tried men's souls," and is not to be approached in levity or with the view that there is a "laugh in every line." It is not a farce; it is not a comedy, it is simply a truthful picture of the times it portrays, and there was little of a comic nature about those times and events. Yet there is comedy in D. W. Griffith's filmed spectacle. Comedy of the most delicate sort, but comedy nevertheless.

There is the typical Southern home where all is good cheer. War's alarms have not yet disturbed its serenity. A Northerner is visiting his old college chum. Youth will be served, and in their playful wrestling and chasing each other about the old mansion and grounds we have pure comedy and the best of good feeling. Then there is the young daughter of the Southern home; almost a hoyden, playful as a kitten, up to all sorts of tricks with her brothers, sister and their guests. Alas, later we see her tragic end, when to save herself from a fate worse than death, she jumps from the high cliff. Comedy that ends in tragedy, but comedy just the same.

Again there is the scene in "the quarters" where the negroes are "showing off" for the benefit of Northern visitors. There is the shuffle, buck and wing "Mississippi Sawyer," "Turkey in the Straw," and other steps in which the darkeys delighted. Later in the play they have their serious roles.

And so through it all there are bits of the lighter shade of life to be overcast by the somber shade later on. And that is what makes "The Birth of a Nation" such a truthful picture of the times whose life it portrays, for tragedy follows comedy ever. Such is life. Seats for the entire engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" are selling fast, and late comers are in danger of disappointment. Daily matinees will be given.

BURNING RUBBISH, FINED.

Mrs. Eva Walters, of East Sixth street, was fined $5 in police court this morning by City Judge William G. DeMeza for burning garbage and rubbish in her yard. It is another step in the judge's crusade against violators of the sanitary code. Officer Joseph Dunlap made the arrest.

SAINTS TO PLAY.

BOY SCOUTS WILL HOLD NO MEETINGS

Scoutmasters' Ass'n Decide to Aid Local Board of Health.

The Scoutmasters' Association met at Camp Ackerman last night, being met at the Netherwood station by E. J. Harding and taken to the camp in an automobile. Scout Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., read a communication from the Plainfield Board of Health requesting that no scout troop meetings be held until the danger of an epidemic of infantile paralysis here is passed.

It was reported that this request had already been complied with by the individual scoutmasters, each one notifying his scouts that there would be no more meetings until further notice. The association took formal action and voted not to hold troop or scout meetings and not to conduct hikes, the sentiment being that the scout officers should stand behind the health authorities in safeguarding the health of the city. This will not affect Camp Ackerman, it being the belief that the boys are safer there than in the city which is congested.

Assistant Scout Executive Buhr, of Newark, was present and told of the scout work in that city. The Newark Scout Council employs a scout executive and assistant who devote their whole time to the work, organizing new troops, reviving weak ones and exercising over all an inspirational influence.

AFTER GASOLINE, WHAT?

We May In Time Learn How to Run Motorcars With Alcohol.

Must we give up motorcars altogether? Must we take back the horse? No mechanical engineer will assent to that. Motorcars we shall always have, but motorcars which will be driven by some new fuel.

What fuel? Perhaps alcohol, perhaps kerosene. Both have been the subject of experiment. If either is employed a new type of engine must be created.

Alcohol is a product of organic nature. Every blade of grass, every plant, every tree, whether dead or alive, is a source of alcohol. Not until the world has been stripped of vegetation—and that can never happen so long as there are water, sunshine and soil—will the supply of alcohol be exhausted. And when that day dawns man himself will perish.

Of alcohol we have made but little use as a source of power. Coal, oil and waterfalls have been too abundant; they need not be manufactured. But alcohol is not stored up in pockets out of which it gushes at the tap of a hammer. A mass of sawdust, a heap of potatoes—in a word, some form of vegetation—must be chemically converted into a water clear liquid in which is stored all the energy that the sun has poured upon the foliage of the earth. Alcohol is distilled sunshine.

As the oil supply of the world nears depletion, as the price of oil fuels and distillates increases, alcohol will drive more and more of our machinery. The logs that we now permit to rot in our forest, the stumpage that reckless lumbermen leave in their tracks, the dry husks of corn that farmers now burn in the fields—all these will propel the motorcar of the future, in the form of alcohol.—Waldemar Kaempffert in McClure's Magazine.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Pewit's Wife Digs In The Garden.

Down She Fell Into the Pond.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JACK and Evelyn clapped till daddy told them this story about an old man, Pewit, who got his wife to dig in the garden in his stead because he heard the neighbors were going to do him harm.

"Sure enough, when the neighbors saw his wife dressed just like Pewit digging in the garden they thought it was he and threw a stone. Perhaps they threw harder than they meant. Anyway, the stone killed the old woman.

"Poor Pewit was rather sorry for this. He had meant merely to save himself trouble. But when he saw how angry his neighbors were at him he decided he had a lucky escape himself. So he thought how he might turn his wife's death to some account. He dressed her in her own clothes and put a basket of fine fruit in her hand, fine fruit being very scarce since it was now winter.

"Then he set her on a broad bench beside the road. After awhile there came by a fine coach with six horses, servants and outriders, while inside sat a grand lord who lived not far off. When his lordship saw the beautiful fruit he sent one of his servants to ask the old woman the price of her goods.

"'What do you charge for fruit?' the servant asked Pewit's wife. No answer. 'How much for fruit?' shouted the servant again. No answer!

"When this happened three times he became angry and, thinking she was asleep, gave her a good box on the ear. Down she fell backward into the pond that was behind the seat.

"Then up ran Pewit, wringing his hands in sorrow and crying out that they had drowned his poor dear wife. He threatened to have the lord and the servant arrested for what they had done.

"The lord begged him not to be so hasty and finally offered to give him the coach and horses, servants and all. So after a long time Pewit let himself be comforted, took what the lord offered, got into the coach and drove off home.

"As he drove up you may feel sure that his neighbors wondered at the beautiful coach and horses. They wondered still more when Pewit drove up at his own door and got out. Then he told them the whole story, which only made them the angrier. So they put him in a tub and tied him there. They were going to throw him in a lake that was near by."

"Oh, don't stop, daddy!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

"Till some other night, my dears," daddy promised.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph's Mother Gives Her Son a New Idea as to What Marriage Means.

"Now, Ralph," said his mother when she had put away the last of the tea things and they had returned to the living room, "tell me all that has happened. Where is Ethel?" she questioned as he did not begin.

"I do not know," he said simply, looking into her eyes.

"Have you done anything to find out where she has gone?" continued Mrs. Gordon. Ralph shook his head.

"Why should I? She has money enough to come home. She knows my address, and she has neither written nor appeared. I am having a good rest for my unstrung nerves. She probably is enjoying the separation as much as I am. We act like poison on each other."

Mrs. Gordon sat silent for some time, then she said:

"Ralph, there is no such easy solution of your difficulties as that. Marriage lasts till you die." As he made no answer she continued: "You insisted on having your own way; would not listen to any advice. You insisted on marrying a child and you are certainly man enough to abide by the consequences. I should blush for you if you were not."

"Mother, do not misjudge me. I have tried to be patient. I have borne all sorts of discomfort and have not whined. But if I can not trust my wife, I can not see how a life can be patched up between us." Ralph was leaning his head on his hand and sadly looking into the fire.

"You are judging her by standards that would apply to me or any grown-woman. You must remember she is a child," said his mother gravely.

"A child! She is twenty-one years old. When is she to cease to be a child?" Ralph asked excitedly.

"I do not know," was the sad answer. "She must be trained in responsibility and high moral sense."

"That is a parent's task, not a husband's," he blurted out.

"When you chose to marry a child, you chose the responsibility not only of a husband but of a parent as well. You have not realized that, it seems." Mrs. Gordon looked earnestly at her son.

"But suppose she refuses to learn. A parent can force a child to do certain things. A husband can not. However much of a child she is she thinks she is a woman and she resents any interference with her liberties." Ralph was talking excitedly. His mother softly patted his hand to quiet him and said:

"Of course that is where the difficulty will lie. You must not minimize the difficulties of your problem. That will make it harder. There must be a right way to approach her, to make her see the necessity of a change."

"Well, I have tried coaxing and scolding and letting her alone and nagging and——"

"It is too big a problem to attack at eleven o'clock at night," interrupted his mother, looking at her watch. "Let us go to bed now and we will try to work out a plan together." She rose and kissed him good night, saying:

"You can always find the right way if you look for it with earnest desire to do the right thing."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

A RUN ON RHUBARB.

RHUBARB MARMALADE.—Two pounds of rhubarb, cut in inch dice, one and one-half pounds of sugar, chopped rinds of three oranges, two lemons, pulp of three oranges and one pound of chopped seeded raisins. Place all materials in an agate preserving kettle, boil slowly until the mass is thick and smooth, nearly one hour. Pour into jars and seal.

Rhubarb Compote.—Four pounds rhubarb, three pounds brown sugar, stick cinnamon, one lemon and one-half pound blanched chopped almonds. Cut rhubarb in dice, simmer slowly, adding sugar. Cut lemon in thin slices and add it and stick cinnamon toward end of cooking. Allow sauce to become thick and juice sirupy, adding almonds before cooking is finished.

Rhubarb Raisin Pie.—Rich pie crust, one cupful of sugar, cinnamon, two cupfuls rhubarb, one-half cupful raisins and ginger sirup. Line pie pan with crust and lay in rhubarb, cut in quarter inch pieces; sprinkle with sugar, add raisins and ginger sirup. Sprinkle with cinnamon, cover with second crust and bake forty-five minutes in moderate oven.

Rhubarb "Spread."—Boil for twenty minutes four pounds of rhubarb. Cut into small pieces, leaving the skins on. Add the juice of five lemons, also the rind, which has been sliced off thinly, boiled in a little water for about twenty minutes or until soft and then chopped fine. To this add six pounds of granulated sugar, one pound of English walnuts, chopped or cut, and one wineglassful of Jamaica ginger. Boil all until thick and seal in small jars.

As with all stewed fruits, sugar should be added after the rhubarb has partly cooked. This will prevent the fruit from toughening and also save the sugar. Spices which combine attractively with rhubarb are ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg. Prunes, figs and strawberries are also excellent combined with rhubarb. Because of its soft, seedless consistency, it is a most excellent fruit to form the basis of a marmalade or "butter." It is so easy to make that one wonders why so many modern housewives are losing hold on the preserving kettle.

SMART VERSION OF THE TAILOR HAT.

By Mary Glynn.

Few items of dress have afforded as much variety in detail as the millinery of this season. Especially is this so of the tailor, semi-tailor, and sport hats. Never before has there been so enormous and at the same time attractive, a showing. With this the situation, it stands to reason that women, in order to keep abreast with the times, must needs have more than one hat per season. This tendency towards rapid changes will naturally have its effect on the demand, and also the price, of these products; consequently, if Mademoiselle would appear smart and seem extravagant, it is not her entire fault. It is a notable fact that women generally have come to realize that such a detail as the change of hat or collar, etc., has much to do with lending an effective finishing touch to an outfit, and the more often one can make this change in detail, the more modish she will appear. In this there is a subtle economy. A smart outfit may be charmingly brightened up by a tastily embroidered collar and a smart tailor hat, such as the one illustrated. In this instance a rather conventional gray chip, straw sailor, loses its severeness by the arrangement of a spray of gouri trimming, which emerges from a cut in the brim and crown. A simple band of gray grosgrain surrounds the crown.

HOW TO CONTROL DREAD DISEASE

U. S. Public Health Service's Timely Advice As to Infantile Paralysis.

THE DANGER IS REAL

The Chain if Infectoon Between Wel Persons and Those Harboring Germs Must Be Broken—Preventative Measures.

To control the present epidemic of infantile paralysis, according to a statement issued by the United States Public Health Service today, the chain of infection between persons harboring germs of the disease and the well members of the community should be broken. Infantile paralysis is probably caused by a very minute organism found in the nasal, mouth and bowel discharges of those who have the disease or who are carriers of the germ without themselves suffering from the ailment. All of the steps in the spread of the infection are not known but if this germ can be prevented from passing from the infected to the well person, the disease will cease.

Infantile paralysis is not a disease of recent origin. Sporadic or scattered cases have occurred throughout the country for many years, but it is only during the last decade that the infection has assumed proportions in the United States. The present epidemic in New York city, on account of its magnitude and virulence has awakened the residents of the many communities to the danger of the importation of the disease into their own midst. This danger is real, but if due precautions are exercised it is believed that the epidemic will subside.

The actual control of the present epidemic must be left to the city, State and Federal health authorities. These organizations will properly quarantine and care for affected persons, prescribe sanitary measures and limit as may be necessary the travel of individuals in order to protect neighboring districts from the infection. Individuals and communities, however, can do much toward their own protection.

Poliomyelitis is probably spread directly or indirectly, through the medium of infective secretions. Account must therefore be taken by communities of every means by which such secretions are disseminated. Promiscuous expectoration should be controlled. The common drinking cup affords a method for the interchange of material of this nature and should therefore be abolished. Rigid cleanliness of glasses and utensils at soda fountains, in saloons and other public places should be enforced. Flies, roaches and other vermin, by coming in contact with infective secretions, may possibly convey them to our food and thus directly bring about the development of disease. Therefore eliminate insects. Street and house dust bear a definite relation to the spread of many infections and it is not unreasonable to presume that they may be a factor in the dissemination of infantile paralysis. Maintain strict cleanliness of streets, yards and alleys in order to prevent the breeding of insects and other vermin. See that all garbage and waste are properly cared for and collected at regular and frequent intervals. Guard all food supplies, especially milk and other perishable products. Digestive troubles of children arising from the indigestion of food of questionable quality may lower resistance. Asemblies of children in infected localities are to be discouraged, if not entirely forbidden. While the above measures are in a sense general, and applicable to many epidemic diseases, their importance should not be overlooked.

Individual preventive measures may be thus summarized:

Summon a physician at once and immediately notify the health officer of the presence of the disease, if the disease is present in the community, medical aid should be sought whenever a child is sick no matter how light the illness; many cases of infantile paralysis begin with a slight indisposition. Should the illness prove to be infantile paralysis isolate the patient, place a competent person in charge, and reduce all communication with the sick room to a minimum. Hospital care is preferable, not only for the child, but in order to better safeguard against the spread of the disease. The sick room should be well ventilated and screened. Nasal and mouth secretions should be received in cloths, placed in a paper bag, and burned. The clothing of the child, the bed linen, and the excretions should be disinfected in the same manner as for typhoid fever, that is by boiling, the long continued application of 5 per cent. carbolic, or other well recognized disinfectant. The same is true for dishes and drinking vessels. Nurses should exercise the same precautions as regards cleanliness of hands in caring for infantile paralysis as for those afflicted with other infectious diseases.

A child may convey the disease to others even after a lapse of several weeks. For this reason quarantine should be maintained for a considerable period, usually from six to eight weeks, and the above precautions should be adhered to during this time. Disinfection of the room following recovery is advisable.

A DAY WITH THE SCISSORS.

"Mathewson took hold of the Reds as manager the other day, made a big shift in the lineup and formed a combination that looked strong, for the first day, at least. One thing that will aid Matty a whole lot is the fact that he has taken hold in the middle of the season. the Reds are down in last place and by the time the excitement is worn away, if the team does not brace, the end of the season will have rolled around. The Cincinnati bunch is not the best behaved crowd in the league and some of the boys are a bit hard to handle. They must respect Matty, however, a whole lot more than they did O'Day, Tinker or Herzog, as Matty is one of the greatest figures in baseball, has been with pennant winning teams for years, has the McGraw system and has proven his ability on the mound and in knowing inside playing. Mathewson has more chance to make good, as manager of the Reds, than any man who has handled the reins for the past eight years."—Pittsburgh Leader.

ROUSCH MAKING GOOD.

"Eddie Rousch broke into the Cincinnati lineup with a big splurge. There is a good ball player, if played regularly, more valuable than Benny Kauff. Rousch was handicapped as a member of the Giants. There was no chance for him to replace either George Burns or Davy Robertson. The only fellow he could beat out of a job would have been Benny Kauff, and McGraw could not afford to take Benny out on account of the big amount of money invested and the drawing power of Kauff on the road and at home, not so much on account of his ability, but due to amount of publicity he received when he joined the New York club. Kauff has been playing fairly consistent, but nothing like the predictions made of him. Rousch should make a great player for the Reds, as he is comparatively young, fast on the bases and a natural hitter. Just a case of where McGraw loaded up with too many stars."—S P. McCarthy.

BUYING MEN IN JULY.

"The idea of buying men in July for a baseball team is quite likely supported by the theory that next year the outfit will be world beaters. This next year stuff does not get very far with the fellow who is diligently engaged in putting up his little two and four bits periodically to see 'is-ers,' not 'to be-ers.'

"I never undertook to own or run a baseball team myself, and consequently, any opinion I may entertain about the administration of its affairs is subject to the objection that I don't know very much about it, practically, but, despite the objection and notwithstanding the sad fact, I may be permitted to say that I certainly believe that if I owned the Brewers, for example, I would say to myself: Here is the biggest city in the American Association circuit; baseball is popular and attendance may be had; next year will just as certainly come as can be; my team will play; men are available at all times; money will buy them; why not invest?

"It seems to me this sort of thing is natural. When the season of 1915 closed the Brewer owners knew that 1916 was inevitable. If they knew anything at all (and I am willing to give them a whole lot of credit) they knew that Milwaukee had backslid as a baseball town from its certain possibilities. They must have known that the best way to reclaim it was to deliver the goods—and they didn't do it! Possibly they may plead in extenuation that they tried, but that they failed is palpable. The Milwaukee public is hard hearted and selfish. It excuses nothing. It demands winners and must have them. If the Brewer owners fail to satisfy them, they need not expect support."—"The Arbiter."

TOURNAMENTS AT HAND.

"With the big tournaments of the tennis season at hand, players of note from all parts of the country are gathering in the East for that sequence of famous events, Longwood, Seabright, Newport and Southampton, which lead naturally to culmination in the national championships at the West Side Tennis Club. In a large degree these are the tournaments which determine ranking, and it is during this period that the stars of the game put forth their greatest endeavor that they may retain or recover their place among the elite—the first ten. The early season, and even the midseason, is more or less of a practice period, although each contains its share of championships.

"What the season thus far has shown is that some highly exciting tennis may be expected before the national titles are decided, and some of the veterans, who have long been accustomed to high place, may find themselves passed by youngsters with towering ambition and keen skill. It is at this time difficult to speculate as to a new singles championship. William M. Johnston, the holder, has just arrived from California and has competed in only one match in the East, a doubles exhibition at the Crescent Athletic Club. Judging from that there is no reason to believe that his skill on the courts has diminished.

"Several men, however, have loomed up as possible contenders for the title, not the least of them being Willis E. Davis, also a Californian, who, during this, his first Eastern season, has met with only one defeat. George M. Church, who brought about the downfall of Davis, has been playing better tennis than ever before in his career, and is another who is highly regarded by followers of the sport. The Japanese, Ichiya Kumagae, has established an excellent record, even though he did suffer defeat at the hands of Watson M. Washburn. Should R. Lindley Murray compete, there is another Coast star who must be seriously reckoned with, to say nothing of the two former national champions, Maurice E. McLoughlin and R. Norris Williams. The former will probably not come East until just before the title play. With such a galaxy of stars, Johnston will have to travel at high speed to hold his laurels. On the play thus far there seems to be the certainty of a big shifting in the first ten ranking players of a year ago."—New York Times.

BROOKLYN DODGERS NOT INSECURE.

The Brooklyn Dodgers are not slipping. Because they dropped a pair of games to Pittsburgh the other day, does not indicate that the Brooklyn team is on the verge of a drop from the first perch. Robinson has a stable of hurlers that is bound to keep his team on top. With Ed Pfeffer going at top speed and with the second string pitchers taking care of the less threatening opposition, "Rotund Robbie" should worry.

PLAINFIELD KENNEL CLUB DISCUSSES PLANS FOR FIFTH ANNUAL DOG SHOW

Meeting of Bench Show Committee in Queen City Hotel—Judges Appointed for Various Classes—Entries Filed With Wilber Purcell, Manager of Show—Large Premium List.

At a meeting of the Plainfield Kennel Club, held in the Queen City Hotel last evening, preliminary plans for the fifth annual dog show to be held by the club on September 23 were discussed. Judges of the various classes were appointed and the necessary perliminary arrangements attended to.

Wilbur Purcell, of 29 Broadway, New York city, is manager of the show and entries will close with him on September 8. Mr. Purcell has conducted several shows at Madison Square Garden and other places, and is acknowledged to be one of the best managers of A. K. C. shows in this section of the country. It is expected that over 600 entries will be filed and that many of the dogs that are now being exhibited at the Hudson County Kennel Club will be entered in the local show. Premium lists will be mailed on August 22, and the next meeting of the Bench Show Committee will be held on August 7.

The judges appointed for the event are Mrs. Frank J. Clark, of Larchmont, N. Y.; Mrs. Abbie Rubino, of Bergenfield, N. J; Fred Hill, of Valley Cottage, N. Y.; George Greer, of Rye, N. Y.; James Meade, of Brooklyn; Dr. J. E. Demund, of Brooklyn; Vinton P. Breese, of Newark, and Dr. Henry Jarrett, of Philadelphia.

The Bench Show Committee is as follows: William B. Nash, C. F. Neilson, John J. O'Donohue, Thomas K. Bray, Francis G. Lloyd, Morris Kenney, John G. Bates, John A. Conway, Richard J. Harrigan and Edmund I. Mackenzie. The officers of the club are Edmund L. Mackenzie, president; S. S. Carvalho, vice-president; John J. O'Donohue, secretary; John A. Conway, treasurer; John F. Zerega and Dr. H. E. Winter.

The show will be held September 23 and will be given at the Horse Show Grounds. Prize lists may be obtained from the manager of the show or from the treasurer of the club.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Freddy Mills proved to the fans on Saturday that he is one of the best flingers in the City League. Pitted against the Farmers, a team that, although last in the league race, is one given over to sudden surprises, Freddy performed in good fashion. He was never in danger and worked hard every minute during the whole nine innings, with "Hub" Stine, a player that understands him, behind the bat. Mills earned the admiration of the fans who attended the league contest.

While we do not know Taylor Mehaffee personally, we would like to extend to him a congratulatory message. Taylor was the "whole show" with the Baptist team on Saturday. In addition to hitting the ball when a hit meant a run, he covered the keystone sack in a style that commanded attention. Despite the fact that he has been out of the game for some time, Taylor is bound to be one the season's "finds."

Burns, said to be a semi-professional player whose "habita" is Elizabeth and thereabouts—handled the work in the region of second for the Farmers on Saturday. Burns is a fast man, although a trifle sensational and given over to grandstand plays. Still, there's no law against "grandstand playing," provided one can show the goods. And Burns can. To the utter chagrin of "Hub" Stine, this Betsytowner stole second, third and home in rapid succession in Saturday's game. And then the bleacherites went wild. They always do.

While we are discussing the Farmer-Baptist game, we might comment on the showing made by Stahl. Erney was by no means ineffective. He tightened up in the pinches and fanned a number of men. While he did seem to fatigue toward the latter part of the game, very few of the fans were of the opinion that he was to weak to finish the game. Ernie had plenty of stuff which he exhibited at times, when the Firsts wished he had kept the existence of his ability to himself.

It was unfortunate that Ford, the new and energetic catcher of the Farmer team, should split a finger in Saturday's game. Nevertheless, the plucky backstop did not quit the fray, although he retreated to the outer garden, Burns finishing the contest as catcher. Ford went to a doctor after the game and the injured finger was attended to.

Jimmy Montross failed to make an auspicious debut as a player in his "comeback" stunt on Saturday. Jimmy chalked up three errors, but it is thought that the strain of receiving so many bouquets affected him. Oh, yes, they distribute "bouquets" in the City League. There's nothing in the constitution that prevents it.

Frank Mullen did well on Saturday. Frank was hifted about considerably, but performed creditably in all the positions. A utility man is certainly a valuable asset.

Frank "Kid" Brennan, in the absence of Tony Denitzio, who, owing to the fact that he is not an expert swimmer did not care to risk his "life" on Maurer Oval, played an even game and clouted out a single. This work did not surprise us, as it only demonstrates our contention that when Brennan adorns the bench a valuable link in the Tab chain is missing.

Jimmy Emery is black. Triples were never his favorite dish, but Saturday seems to have been an "off day" in this respect. Chef Denny may have made the dish unusually tempting.

Lou Brown has a habit of scoring. He dented the pan three times Saturday. The Tabs say that was "three times too much."

"TOM" MULLIN HURLS AGAINST KEANSBURG

Local Infielder Given Opportunity to Demonstrate His Pitching Ability.

Local baseball players who pastime outside of the city are still earning renown for themselves. Cliff Randolph and Frank Hand and Tommy Mullin, the Washington trio, led that team to victory over the Northampton team in the Schwab League Saturday. Cliff allowed only six hits and did not allow these to be bunched. The Northampton team is leading the league. Although the game was a success from a playing point of view, it was a financial failure. The inclement weather caused the attendance to fall off considerably, making the total receipts a little less than $87.

The Keansburg team undertook to trim Pfau's Amboys at Amboy on Sunday. But the home club proved that it was too much for the visiting aggregation and piled up an eight-run lead in the second inning. The regular Amboy pitcher was given a rest after this sudden outburst and Tommy Mullin was sent in to pitch. Tommy was easy for the Keansburgers, but still they could score but few runs off him, so strong was the Amboy defense. Tommy gave way to Stevens toward the latter part of the game. "Nibs" Hand handled the catching problem for the day.

CITY LEAGUE MOGULS HAD TAME SESSION

"Peaceful" Gathering in Press Office Last Evening—Little Business Transacted.

The City League meeting last night was an interesting affair, although there was little business transacted. The various teams were represented at the meeting and ratified the action taken.

The fact that the league season closes on August 12 was given prominence at the meeting and the list of postponed games was given out, although no dates for the playing off of these postponed encounters were set. Acording to the list, the Netherwood team has postponed contests with the Baptists, Hopes and Farmers. Dunellen's list of postponed attractions includes games with the Farmers and Baptists. The Baptists must play Netherwood, Tabs and Dunellen. All of these games will be played directly after the close of the league season. Should there be no other postponements the league season will be closed before Labor Day.

At the meeting A. L. Warwick, of West Fourth street, was appointed a substitute umpire. Mr. Warwick formerly pitched for the Monroe Avenue team in the now extinct Sunday School League.

The games for Saturday are as follows:

Dunellen vs. Farmers.
Baptists vs. T. A. B. S.
Netherwood vs. Hopes.

CHLOROFORM IN SURGERY.

The Horrors That Were Stopped by Its Use as an Anaesthetic.

Sir James Simpson, who was connected with the medical department of Edinburgh university, if not actually the discoverer of chloroform, was at any rate the first to introduce its employment as an anaesthetic into surgical practice. This was in 1848.

Previously all operations were performed without anaesthetics, the patient being drugged with whisky and held down by strong men while the operation was performed. No medical discovery ever did more to alleviate human suffering.

Sir James is generally given credit for the actual discovery of chloroform, but it is stated in some works that it was discovered some years previous to his first experiments by an American doctor named Guthrie and by a French physician named Souberian. In any case, it was Dr. Simpson who proved its great value as an anaesthetic, and the room in which he made his first experiments still exists in Edinburgh.

The story goes that he tried the chloroform on himself and two medical friends. They proved its efficacy by simultaneously falling beneath the table. Sir James had considerable prejudice to overcome before chloroform was adopted generally by the medical profession, it being denounced at one time as dangerous to health, morals and religion. — Pearson's Weekly.

The Seal Ring.

The seal ring dates back to the days of the Old Testament, and products of the glyptic art, as gem engraving was called, were known in the most remote times. In Exodus xxviii, 17-20, mention is made of the following stones, upon which the names of the twelve children of Israel were engraved: The sardius, the topaz, the carbuncle, the emerald, the sapphire, the diamond, the ligure, the agate, the amethyst, beryl, onyx and jasper. In verse 2 of the same chapter we find mention of the engraving of signets upon the hardest stones. It is believed that the Egyptians instructed the Israelites in the art of stone engraving. The Egyptians used the lapidary's wheel and emery powder and knew the use of the diamond in engraving other hard stones. Among the Assyrian and Babylonian ruins were found fine specimens of signets on gems, many of them set in rings.

HAND'S EXPRESS CO.

A Phrase Explained.

Medicus tells us that it makes him mad whenever he sees some writer using the old southern phrase "the spit an' image" without showing any knowledge of what it means. Medicus says that he has even seen it spelled thus: "The spittin' image." So we have seen in the works of an English novelist:

"He's the spit and image of his father, as they say in America."

And an American short story writer makes a negro character say:

"Yassuh. He's de spittin' image of his ma."

The phrase was originally "the spirit and image," explains Medicus. Of course that means that one person is both mentally and physically like another. Southern people are careless about their r's, so the phrase became "the spit an' image" and "the spittin' image."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Hydroaeroplanes.

The idea of the hydroaeroplane was suggested in patent specifications by Hugo Matullath of New York in 1899, but it had its practical origin in Glenn Curtiss, who added floats to the aeroplane with which he was experimenting over Lake Keuka in 1908. These were placed under each wing, so that in case of accident the machine would not sink. Langley and others had "made their experimental flights over bodies of water for like reasons." Probably the first to make the floats an integral part of his machine was Fabre, who on March 28, 1910, made the first flight with a practical hydroaeroplane at Martigues on the Seine. Curtiss soon abandoned floats and built boat bodies, and for this accomplishment he received the Aero Club of America trophy in 1911.

Butter From a Tree.

One shea tree beside each man's back porch would cut a big slice of butter off the monthly food bill. In Africa vegetable butter is made from the fruit of this tree, and it is said to be of richer taste than any butter made from cow's milk—alleged or actually scraped from a churn and squeezed into the wooden mold which leaves a yellow rosebud on top of the cake. The Arabs used it in early times.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

High Calling.

Little Walter's uncle was attached to the commissary department. Naturally little Walter wanted to know what that meant. His father explained that it was the commissary's duty to supply the soldiers with food and drink and the like. The very next day a lady came to call and asked Walter how his Uncle Paul was.

"He's fine," said the young man. "He's a waiter now."—New York Post.

Woodwork.

"Is it your intention to offer your enemy an olive branch?"

"I'm not sure," replied Senator Sorghum. "We'll try out the olive branch proposition. But we'll fix the thing so it can be turned into an ax handle."—Washington Star.

PROVIDE MANAGEMENT AS WELL AS PROPERTY

Many an intelligent man makes a will and then congratulates himself upon having done his whole duty by his family. He has done well, to be sure, but not well enough. Multitudes of inexperienced beneficiaries under a will have been seriously burdened and handicapped by the sudden acquisition of property the care of which they do not understand. This difficulty may be obviated by appointing The Plainfield Trust Company as

GERMANS PLAN A COUNTER ATTACK

Mass Forces on Somme Front and Will Move When Weather Changes.

ADMIT SMALL LOSSES

Australians, French and Russians Continue to Gain, But British Are Held—Verdun is Not Yet Abandoned.

Berlin, July 26.—While admitting temporary losses on French and Russian front the German staff insists that the high tide of the Allied offensive has been reached, and the Germans are concentrating strong forces for a counter offensive against the British and French on the Somme front. Many of the new units come from Verdun. They have been reorganized and re-equipped. The British are not gaining ground, but have been able so far to withstand the drives of the reinforced German armies. It is announced here that the counter attacks are to begin as soon as favorable weather sets in.

Australians Fight Marvelously.

London, July 26.—The progress of the Australians continues marvelous. In a third day of hand-to-hand fighting they gained more ground and are getting in position to enfilade the Thiepval works, hitherto impregnable, and also to close the neck of the Leipsic salient.

The French have won some powerfully fortified houses by a drive near Estrees, and have ousted Germans from trenches in the neighborhood of Vernandovillers, near the southern end of the battlefield.

One of the most interesting phases of the war situation today is the imminent fall of Erzingan, the great Turkish stronghold in Central Armenia. For months the armies of the Grand Duke Nicholas have been battering at the Turks, who are reported to be evacuating Erzingan and to be making a defense only to cover their retreat to Sivas, 130 miles further west. The Russians are reported closing in on Erzingan from three sides, while the Turks are fleeing in confusion, abandoning artillery, rifles and stores.

The Russian advance against the German-Austrian forces also continues. Berlin admits that south of Stonowka and south of Berestechk, near the Galician frontier, the Russians have succeeded in penetrating Gen. von Linsingen's first line.

Artillery Active at Verdun.

Paris, July 26.—The Paris statement says: "Apart from a violent bombardment of La Laufee, northeast of Verdun, there has been no important event on the whole of the front."

PRAYERS FOR HENRY LUTZ.

Members of Watchung Council, No. 532, Knights of Columbus, are requested to meet tonight at 8:30 at the corner of West Fourth street and John street, to go to the home of Mrs. Catherine Lynch, on West Fourth street, where prayers will be offered for Henry Lutz, formerly of this city, whose death occurred in Washington, Sunday, and a member of the Washington, D. C., council. The body of Mr. Lutz arrived in this city this afternoon.

WM. DOEPER IMPROVED.

The condition of Wm. Doeper was reported as improved at Muhlenberg Hospital this morning, where he is a patient suffering from a general shaking up. Doeper was taken to the institution Sunday, after falling from the loft of his barn at Upper Watchung, when he missed his footing and fell a distance of fourteen feet. He was bruised about the head and shoulders.

J. N. Simpson, of this city, is sojourning at the New Monmouth, Spring Lake, for some time.

SIMILAR ACTION BEING URGED HERE

David T. Kenney Advocate of Ordinance Restricting the Height of Buildings.

There are to be no more skyscrapers in New York, according to an edict sent out yesterday by the Board of Estimate, which by unanimous vote adopted the plan of the Commission on Building Districts and Restrictions, which has been in the making for two years. Moderately low buildings are to be the rule from now on and there are to be no more garages invading splendid homes.

There is considerable local interest in the above action for the reason that David T. Kenney, as the president of the Chamber of Commerce, has for some time been endeavoring to have a similar building ordinance adopted in this city, and on several occasions has discussed the subject at the meetings of the chamber. The very reason as set forth in the action of the New York authorities have been emphasized by Mr. Kenney as the basis for urging local action.

New York now proposes to prevent the indiscriminate building of structures without relation to neighborhoods, rights or property owners or existing values.

While Plainfield at present is not bothered with skyscrapers such as they have in New York, Mr. Kenney is of the opinion that the time may come when the city might have to confront such a condition and he believes that there should now be an ordinance which would prevent the erection of buildings of unusual height in Plainfield.

SEVEN ARRAIGNED FOR VIOLATING HEALTH CODE

On complaint of Health Inspector Louis Oliff, of North Plainfield, seven residents of the borough were arraigned in court this morning on a charge of violating the health ordinances. The case was tried before William L. Smalley, the mayor of North Plainfield, who imposed a fine of $20 on the offenders.

The fine, however, was suspended over their heads provided they promised to clean up their premises within forty-eight hours. Each one promised to do so. Those arraigned were Benny Estrin, Morris Estrin, T. Fadna, Mr. Laskiniski, Mr. Schultz, James Fleming and Isaac Schneider. These men reside on the Hand property on Somerset street.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCEMENT

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Margaret Kearns, of Atlantic Highlands, and Allan Fredericks, of Dunellen, and manager of the American Express Company at Atlantic Highlands. The ceremony was performed a week ago last Monday at the parsonage of the Atlantic Highlands M. E. church, by Rev. Norman Sargeant, the pastor. Mr. Fredericks assumed his duties in Atlantic Highlands only in April.

FUNERAL OF DAUGHTER.

The funeral of Oleava M. Ross, the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Oleava, of Chatham street, this borough, was held this afternoon at 2:30, from the parents' home. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring was in charge of the service. Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery.

MILK STATION OPEN.

The milk station for babies at the Day Nursery is still open on Tuesdays and Fridays from 10 to 11 o'clock, and at No. 308 Richmond street, Mondays and Thursday from 9:30 to 10:30.

ANNUAL EXCURSION.

The annual excursion of the Shiloh Baptist church to Bellwood Park will be held tomorrow. No small children will be allowed to go. The cars will leave the trolley station at 8:15 a. m.

Insure Against Disappointment, Give Standing Order Now for the Plainfield Daily Press

Owing to the shortage of news print paper throughout the United States, the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS will become non-returnable after July 31st. This means that no unsold copies of the DAILY PRESS will be accepted from newsdealers. Naturally newsdealers will order only sufficient copies of the DAILY PRESS to supply REGULAR CUSTOMERS.

If you have been in the habit of buying your copy of the Daily Press from a newsboy or newsdealer, or have been buying a copy three or four times a week, let us urge you to GIVE A STANDING ORDER NOW to have a copy of the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS delivered to your home or laid aside each night. By so doing you will make sure of securing the PRESS when you wish it.

Newspapers throughout the country have been putting this same rule into effect for months, but we have held off taking action hoping that conditions would improve. Such has not been the case, however. Not only has the price of news stock been advanced, but the paper mills are sending out notices to the effect that the supply may have to be curtailed at any time by the cutting in half of orders received from newspapers. We are therefore taking the above mentioned step in order to conserve our supplies.

CREDITORS HELD UP IN COURT ACTION

Attorney W. S. Angleman Secures Appointment of Receiver.

Three creditors who expected to get judgment in the Somerville District court this morning against the Charles Pfadenhauer Company, a $50,000 building corporation of Bernardsville, and make levies immediately, were disappointed when they learned that they were held up by some very quick work done by Counsellor W. S. Angleman, of this city, yesterday afternoon.

To protect other creditors against the contemplated action in the Somerset court today, Mr. Angleman made application yesterday afternoon at Newark to Vice Chancellor Stevens in the Chancery Court for the appointment of a receiver for the company without giving notice and without applying for the usual preliminary rule to show cause.

The bill of complaint presented to the court showed that the assets were slightly in excess of the liabilities, the assets being $19,867.30 and the liabilites $19,581.21, and that on three building contracts then under way the company employed about 25 men.

The application for a receiver was granted by the Vice Chancellor, and Daniel Gillie, of Bernardsville, was appointed, and his bond fixed at $20,000. The order allows the receiver to continue the contract work on hand until August 15, and the stockholders and creditors are required to show cause in Chancery Chambers in Jersey City on August 14 why the receivership should not be continued.

The bringing of any new suits against the company is restrained, as is also the prosecution further of those already brought.

DR. CAMPUS DECIDES PINN GIRL HAS PARALYSIS

Dr. Ellis Campus has decided that Ida Pinn, the eight-year-old daughter of Frank Pinn, a junk dealer of 681 West Third street, has infantile paralysis. He discovered the case in its first stages yesterday, but was unable to be certain of its nature until today. The house and family have been put under quarantine.

The Board of Health is becoming more stringent every day now that three cases have been found in Plainfield. Families coming from out of town will be obliged to stay at home for two weeks, and in case where landlords or the people themselves do not notify the Board of Health of their coming the matter will be taken into court.

BOY SCOUTS DECIDE TO CLOSE CAMP ACKERMAN

Scout Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., in charge of the Boy Scout work in Plainfield, announced today that in compliance with the request of the Board of Health, it was decided to close Camp Ackerman on Terrill road. This action is considered unfortunate as the camp has been full all season and a sufficient number of applications have been received to keep it so until fall.

However, the Boy Scouts want to stand back of the health authorities and aid in every possible way to safeguard the health of the people and for that reason thought it best to close the camp until all danger from infantile paralysis is passed.

NEGRO FOLKSONG FESTIVAL.

Dallas, Texas, July 26.—During the three days beginning today the huge Fair Park Coliseum in this city is to resound with the old plantation melodies of "the days before the war." The occasion is the Southern Negro Folksong Festival, sponsored by the Texas Normal Industrial Institute, and the first affair of its kind on a large scale ever held in this country. The leading negro singers of the country will be supplemented by sigers from Texas and the entire South, making a great chorus of voices, which will join in the chants and hymns peculiar to the Southern negro of half a century ago.

Patterson said it makes the second time the boy has run away from a good home and he will now be put in a reform school. Officer Bader picked him up Sunday.

HONOR FLAGS FOR ALL VOLUNTEERS

Congressman Capstick Would Have One Over Each Home.

A BILL IN CONGRESS

Mark of Appreciation of Government for Heroism of Militiamen He Says, in Asking $25,000 Appropriation.

Over the home of each man who went to the border when his country called there will soon float an American flag as a mark of honor service, if a resolution prepared by Congressman Capstick is passed by Congress and the Senate. The purpose of the resolution, according to Mr. Capstick, is to convey to the soldiers some lasting material evidence that their patriotism is appreciated and to in a measure fittingly recognize their relatives for the sacrifices being made in so many homes. The resolution of Mr. Capstick was introduced in Congress on July 2 and is now pending. It follows:

"Whereas, The members of the militia of several States have been mobilized and mustered into the service of the United States and are now encamped along the Mexican border as volunteers, thereby causing relatives to feel a deep concern as to their probable length of service, and

"Whereas, The families of these soldiers are entitled to recognition for the sacrifices cheerfully made and endured in the severance of home ties, and the fortitude with which they saw the father, husband, son and brother, in many instances the main support of such families, march away with the colors; now therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled do hereby authorized and direct the Secretary of War to provide and issue a flag to each enlisted man, said flag to be not less than 16 inches wide by 24 inches long and of suitable material, construction and color to be easily distinguished as a 'Service Honor Flag' when displayed by the soldier himself on his abode, or by his family and relatives, or whoever he may designate to display same to indicate the residence of said volunteer soldier; and said flag shall be the property of said soldier: Provided he is not dishonorably dismissed from the service, in which event he shall surrender said flag upon demand to the Secretary of War or his authorized representative; and be it further

"Resolved, That a flag or similar design but varying slightly as to color or insignia, be provided and issued to each man who offered his services at the time the Mexican emergency arose, but who through no fault of his own was rejected, said flag to be used and displayed for the same purpose as the ones herein provided to the accepted volunteers; and be it further

"Resolved, That any person displaying, or causing to be displayed, either of these 'Service Honor Flags' without having the right to so display them or cause them to be displayed, as herein provided, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding $300, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both; and be it further

"Resolved, That the sum of $25,000 be and hereby is appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States, not otherwise appropriated, to be used in whole or in part, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, for defraying the cost of providing and issuing said flags."

H. M. CLEAVER IS MADE MANAGER AT POND PLANT

Henry M. Cleaver, of the New York office of Niles-Bement-Pond Company, has been made assistant to A. C. Stebbins, and manager of the Pond Tool Works, this city, taking the place of James T. MacMurray, who held the position for many years.

The Pond plant is still rushed with work, employing a large force of men in completing the many orders received within the past few months. The work is now progressing rapidly on the new addition to the plant. This will be 215 feet long, 7 feet wide, and although but one story it will be 45 feet high. This will be used for the erecting department, allowing for the much needed room in the other building for various departments.

GEORGE GREENLEAF WILL LEAVE PONDS

Accepts Fine Position as Assistant Manager for Westinghouse Co.

George E. Greenleaf, of 652 West Eighth street, for the past twenty-eight years employed at the Pond Machine Tool Workks, and for the past eighteen years chief engineer of the plant, has resigned to become assistant manager of the Westinghouse Company's three plants at Springfield, Mass. He will leave Plainfield on Sunday and take up his new duties in Springfield on Monday. He will remove his family to the latter place within a short time.

The new position to which Mr. Greenleaf goes is an important one, and with the advancement he will receive a large increase in salary over his present one. The Westinghouse plants at Springfield employ 10,000 men, and it is the purpose of the company to increase this number to 16,000 in the near future.

When Mr. Greenleaf presented his resignation to the Niles-Bement-Pond Company, the president expressed his regrets and tried to persuade him to remain here, offering as an inducement a substantial increase in salary. However, Mr. Greenleaf thought that as the new position was so attractive and offered so many advantages, he had better accept it.

Mr. Greenleaf came to Plainfield from New Haven, Conn., shortly after the Pond plant was started and has been considered one of the most valuable men in the employ of the company here. So far as known his successor at Pond's has not been named as yet.

MISS C. S. LAZELL PASSES AWAY IN HER 91ST YEAR

Miss Celina S. Lazell, a native of Massachusetts, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her niece, Mrs. A. D. Beeken, of Fanwood, with whom she had been making her home for the past nine years. Miss Lazell was born near Worcester, ninety-one years ago on April 8. Since her last birthday she had steadily declined, the infirmities of age being ascribed as the cause of death. She was a member of the Temple Baptist church of Brooklyn. Beside Mrs. Beeken she is survived by four other nieces, three of whom reside in Brooklyn and one in California, and one nephew of New York city.

The funeral will be held from the residence of Mrs. Beeken tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 and the service will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Calvin Hare. Interment will be made in Worcester, Mass.

DISTRICT CONVENTION IN SWEDISH LUTHERAN CHURCH

A district convention of delegates of the Swedish Lutheran church with delegates from Bayonne, Staten Island, East Orange and Elizabeth, besides this city, was held in the Swedish Lutheran church on East Seventh street last night and was attended by some seventy-five or eighty people. The Rev. L. F. Nobstron, of Staten Island, made the principal address of the evening, and the Rev. C. A. Anderson, pastor of the local church, also spoke. Various members of the local church rendered a program of musical and vocal numbers and following the meeting refreshments were served.

Plans are new under way for the holding of a convention on Labor Day, the place to be yet decided on. A committee composed of the president, secretary and one delegate from each parish will hold a meeting in the near future to further plans for the convention.

MAY CALL LEGISLATURE TO GIVE SOLDIERS VOTE

Trenton, July 26.—Following a conference between Gov. Fielder, Attorney-General Wescott and Secretary of State Martin yesterday afternoon the belief was expressed that a special session of the Legislature will be called to pass an act enabling soldiers to vote though absent from the State.

Whatever the outcome the Attorney-General did not hand down an opinion he was supposed to have written holding that a state of war actually exists between the United States and Mexico and hence that the Jersey troops can vote under an act passed in 1898.

Martin protested that such a decision would be political hari-kari, since one of the chief arguments to be made for President Wilson is that he has kept the country out of war.

RAIN HALTS DRILLS BUT GUARDS WILL BE WORKED HARD DURING FINAL THREE DAYS AT SEA GIRT

STRENUOUS SCHEDULE MAPPED OUT FOR COMPANY K AND OTHER DETACHMENTS NOW IN CAMP.

CIGARETTES TABOOED IN MACHINE GUN CORPS

Third Battalion, Including Company M, of Somerville, Off on Hike This Afternoon—Officers' School Held During Rain Yesterday—Work of Training Men is Thorough and Serious.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 26.—Advance guard and patrolling drills, with rifle practice for two companies, occupied the time of the men of Company K and the Second Regiment this morning. Late this afternoon the Third battalion, consisting of Companies H of New Brunswick, L of Princeton, G of Freehold, and M of Somerville, will leave here for a practice hike, which will keep them out of camp until some time tomorrow. While out they will practice digging trenches, and will have actual field experience in preparing their food and camp for a short stay, the little shelter tents being used. Major Walter A. Morton will be in command of the manoeuvre.

All of the action by the troops this week is arranged to lead up to a manoeuvre by the entire regiment on Friday morning. The First battalion consisting of the four Trenton companies, commanded by Major John McCollough, will go out of camp tomorrow night, and bivouac at some point a few miles from Sea Girt. In the morning the other two battalions, commanded by Col. Horace M. Reading, will act as an attacking force against the Trenton men, and a sham battle will ensue, with the use of blank ammunition. The manoeuvre will probably be completed by noon, so that the men can get back into camp in ample time to prepare for the review of the regiment by the Governor, the first in two years.

Yesterday afternoon the rain came down so hard that the parade ground was turned into a lake in spots. It was necessary to abandon all drills, and the men strove to keep their effects away from spots where the water beat through. Colonel Reading took the opportunity to hold officers' school in the old mess hall, and some of the instruction that was lost because of the sudden breaking up at the time of the mobilization order, when the officers were here, was given them.

Few people who have been away from the National Guard camps here for a year or two can realize how serious the business of instructing the guard has become. It was not many years ago that the week here was looked upon by the guardsmen as a sort of vacation, with little work besides parades, and a few drills in the morning, and but few rules and regulations. This year for the first time even the musicians are getting a taste of real service. In the old days band men had to play for guard mount, evening parade and a concert in the evening, and that was all. Now the musicians have to drill in the school of the soldier under the direction of the drum ma-

M'ART TO RAISE BUILDING FUND

Y. M. C. A. Directors Engage Him for Campaign in November.

J. F. MacArt, who so successfully conducted the recent campaign in this city for new members for the Y. M. C. A., has been selected by directors of the association to handle the coming solicitation for funds for a new building. Mr. MacArt was in Plainfield this morning and signed a contract to come here in November and raise money for a handsome new Y. M. C. A.

The building campaign will begin on November 12 and will run ten days, closing on Thanksgiving eve. The opening dinner will likely be held on the evening of November 10 or 11, in order that the workers may be organized and drilled before they begin active work. A fund of $250,000 will be asked during the ten days and directors feel that it will be cheerfully given.

Mr. MacArt is enthusiastic over his selection. He made many friends here during the membership campaign and was impressed with the generosity and progressiveness of Plainfield people, so is anxious to come back. Since his work here, he has had little time to spend at his home in Scranton, Pennsylvania, but has been in charge of seven similar campaigns in other cities. He went from Plainfield to Elizabeth, thence to Summit and to Madison in New Jersey, and also conducted campaigns in Winnipeg, Alton, Ill., Danville, Virginia, and Middletown, Ohio. Mr. MacArt will conduct a campaign in Passaic in October and will come from that city to Plainfield.

OFFENDERS OF HEALTH CODE IN CITY COURT

Fines Aggregating $16 Imposed by Judge DeMeza on Residents of W. 3rd St.

This was Board of Health day in police court, all five cases that were disposed of by City Judge W. G. De Meza being for violations of the sanitary code. Only one of those brought into court escaped a fine, he being C. L. Panetelle, who was told to make changes in his Park avenue fruit stand to conform with the health code. Abe Deutsch, remanded for sentence from Monday morning, was fined $10 for allowing his butcher shop and grounds at 513 West Third street, to get in a filthy condition. Sameul Red, of 533 West Third street, was fined $2, for not making provision for keeping his barn clean, and Samuel Pearl was also fined $2 for keeping his bakery at 511 West Third street, in wretched condition. Ike Jenutsky, of 510 West Third street, was fined $2 for leaving his place of business become a menace to health.

In the crusade of the Board of Health, police and city judge are fighting violators of the health code. There have been twenty cases disposed of by Judge DeMeza in the last week, and in all but one instance they have come from Third street. The judge has found that it does not do any good to talk to offenders and then let them go, so he has now adopted the policy of applying a moderate fine for the first offense and making it heavier each time.

FREIGHT CAR BLAZE CALLS OUT FIRE DEPARTMENT

The local fire department was called out at 7:30 o'clock last night to extinguish a fire which was discovered in a freight car left on a siding just west of Grove street. The fact that the car was filled with several carboys of acid gave nearby residents considerable concern. The firemen responded promptly to the alarm and performed creditable work in putting out the blaze before it reached the acid.

The freight car had been run in on the siding with a hot box, and shortly afterward was discovered on fire. There are some people who think that the fire was caused by the bursting of a carboy of acid.

When the alarm of fire was given a large touring car was pressed into service to take the truck to the scene of the blaze, and the apparatus came within an ace of upsetting while turning the corner from Bound Brook road into Chestnut street.

Sacrificed His Own Life.

During the war of the Revolution two British soldiers of the army of Cornwallis went into a house and abused the inmates in a most cruel and shameful manner. A third soldier, going into the house, met them coming out and recognized them. The inmates acquitted him of all blame, but he was imprisoned because he refused to disclose the names of the offenders. Every persuasion was tried, but in vain, and at length he was condemned by a court martial to die. When he was on the gallows Lord Cornwallis, surprised by his obstinacy, rode up to him, saying: "Campbell, what a fool you are to die thus! Disclose the names of the guilty men and you shall be immediately released; otherwise you have not fifteen minutes to live."

"You are in the midst of a campaign, my lord," replied Campbell. "You can better spare one man than two." And, firmly adhering to his purpose, he died.

What Am'I?

I've wrecked trains; I've saved a rich man's life and of course married his beautiful daughter; I've committed murder; I've preached the gospel; I've found treasure; I've led armies to victory, I've been a king; I've seen hell; I've toured heaven; I've made men slaves and freed them; I've threatened women's honor and saved it; I've condemned to death the innocent and given liberty to the guilty; I've built nations and destroyed them; I've created drought and brought flood; I've changed poverty to riches and robes to rags; I've fought in the Crusades; I've gone through the Revolution; I've made men of politicians and politicians of men; I've tortured Christians as a pagan and as a Christian enlightened the heathen; I've been lawmaker and law breaker; but, with all, I've made the world progress—I am imagination!—Life.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

The Review of Reviews, of Plainfield and Its Business

The "Loyal" Plainfielder takes pride in the city's progress.

"Where do you live?" is frequently asked of travelers, and those travelers take pride, if they're loyal, in naming the city or town from which they came.

Plainfield "is" progressive; she's reached a period of decided progressiveness, preparedness.

The government of our city is doing wonders, the marks of progressiveness of our Council stand out in bold relief. As a mark of efficiency, national attention is attracted here to our automobile manufacturing, machine shops and printing press works, and other great plants.

And they're not over-night promotions, either, these industries, but, they're substantial institutions that have been tried and found true, by many long years of successes, through good, bad and indifferent times, and again, results, Plainfield stands on the brink of a still greater prosperity, so prosperous that not a hint of its inefficiency in any direction can be pointed to by the most jealous rival of our city's progress.

Our city has been most fortunate in avoiding ever, serious labor troubles, serious business failures, serious calamities of any kind that have been noted so frequently in many directions throughout the land —well, all things to Plainfield, "Plainfield Right or Wrong," but, Plainfield's right.

Our Plainfield retail mercantile establishments, what of them? Barring a very few, they have been successful to an extent made possible by a combination of the conservative and the progressive; both must go hand in hand to bring about successful results, and so Plainfield can point with pride to her retail mercantile establishments.

May we especially point out the stores of the members of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield? Stores that have had uninterrupted growth for as long as the oldest inhabitant can remember. But, in all their growth, nothing has equaled that of the past year; and incidentally, nothing has equaled that of the present spring season.

"THEORY OF ANARCHY BEAUTIFUL"--EATON

N. Y. Sun Editorially Disagrees With Cleveland Sermon.

The New York Sun is stirred over the belief that Dr. Charles Eaton, of Plainfield, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church in New York, recently declared that anarchism is a beautiful theory in a sermon at Cleveland. The following editorial is from this morning's Sun:

Is it the Rev. Dr. Charles Aubrey Eaton, of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, whom the Times disguises as John A., and to whom it attributes the opinion that "Anarchism is a beautiful theory?" The sentiment is said to have been uttered on Sunday to Dr. Eaton's former parishioners in Cleveland. The beauty of the theory has escaped a good many persons so far; they see with a glazed, material eye, not with that inward vision that strips from it its bombs, murder, free love and other interesting accretions. The benevolent Mr. Rockefeller nodded his approval; at the beautiful theory, of course, which for a moment banished the concrete fact from his philanthropic mind.

Mr. Frick was not present. It may be that he is one of those falling under Dr. Eaton's criticism who think of anarchists as "men with red noses, red shirts, and bombs in their pockets." Whether Comrade Berkman had a red nose and wore a red shirt at Homstead our treacherous memory refuses to inform us; he did not carry a bomb in his pocket; Comrade Gerkman used a pistol and a knife. Comrade Berkman is a philosopher. He puts the "beautiful theory" in to practice, with Comrade Goldman's loyal assistance. Dr. Eaton says the theory does not work because it is not human; Comrade Berkman and Comrade Goldman find it adjustable to human affairs, however.

In Germany a preacher is still a prophet, Dr. Eaton told the fortunate of Cleveland, and is not thought a fool by "boneheads," if the synopsis of his sermon is correct. It may be; we have never sought to differentiate the Teutonic ivory pate from that of French, or Celtic, or Italian derivation. Dr. Eaton has unquestionable studied the subject. Curiously enough, the "bone heads" of our acquaintance—we confess their number is small—are not unanimous in their opinion of preachers. Some of them believe preachers to be prophets; none, to our knowledeg, regards them as fools.

It was Darwin who started the war; the supermen of Germany are possessed of his ideas. How the "boneheads" of Germany are affected by Darwinism Dr. Eaton did not confide to his congregation. Probably Darwinism is taboo in Germany now; does Darwin not fall into the catalogue of those who are to be strafed? Charles Darwin is guilty of most of the wickedness in the world; he is almost as bad as the Gulf Stream.

CHARLES BUFFANO ARRESTED IN BELLEVILLE, WANTED HERE

Wanted by the local police for a burglary he committed here four or five years ago, beside being wanted in Paterson and Little Falls on a similar charge. Charles Buffano, who was given up as dead several years ago, when wounded, he jumped into the Morris Canal and eccaped a posse, was arrested in Belleville, yesterday on a charge of burglary. Buffano, wha is 44, has spent twenty years in prison. His specialty is said to be jacking up freight cars and stealing brass journals. He has been turned over to the Little Falls police.

Ten years ago Buffano was deported to Italy by Judge Robert Cortese. Soon afterward Cortese received a bomb in a package, which wrecked his building, killed him and maimed his son.

MARTINE BITTER IN ATTACK ON ENGLAND

Entire Senate is Now Interested in the Case of Casement.

Washington, July 26.—That many Senators are intensely interested in saving the life of Sir Robert Casement, the Irish patriot, whose date of execution for treason has been set for August 3, is proved by the intense interest aroused in the Senate during the debate over his case.

So great was this interest that Senator Stone, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, promised that today he would try to have a resolution in some form reported from his committee.

This followed Senator Martine's fourth attempt to have the committee discharged from further consideration of the various resolutions now before it.

Senator Ashurst, in a brief but bitter criticism of England's policy, expressed the hope that "Great Britain will be broad enough to see that she cannot get a place in the sun by snuffing out the lights of the world."

Senator Martine condemned the British policy in unmeasured terms. He said:

"She has dictated policies to the United States and attempted to control our domestic and foreign product. She has dictated our policy with regard to the Panama Canal, which we built and paid for; she has rifled our mails, she has stopped every American ship that sails the seas at her pleasure, and taken them into her own ports for examination; and now we are helplessly awaiting her next move."

Senator O'Gorman declared:

"I would favor either of these resolutions. They both convey the same expression of a hope for clemency in behalf of one whose only offense is love of his native land. I cannot conceive of the sensibilities of any nation being disturbed by a respectable appeal coming from one of the units of a family of nations urging in the name of a common humanity that clemency be extended to a man guilty of no moral turpitude, animated by the purest of purposes, and moved only by a passion to free his people and his race from an oppression under which it has labored for centuries.

"If Sir Roger Casement be a criminal, then George Washington and John Hancock and John Adams were criminals. They were all rebels protesting against wrong and tyranny. The names of those who fail, no less than those who succeed in rebellion, remains enshrined in the hearts of a grateful people.

"According to the standard that guides men, are they not born, the successful and unsuccessful rebel, to be judged by the animating purpose of their conduct? Though its votaries fail, the struggle for liberty is eternal."

L. A. HOFFMAN TOOK PART IN THE ANNUAL "ROUND-UP"

L. A. Hoffman, well known in this city through his visits to Thad Doane, Jr., about two years ago, took part in the annual "round-up" at Miles City, Montana, during the celebration in that city on July 3, 4 and 5. Mr. Hoffman is the original eight-horse coach driver of that State and each year's carnival features him for such an event. Hoffman is a rancher, miner, cowboy and scout and is one of the most widely known of Western men.

CUBS GET BACKSTOP.

Harold (Rowdy) Elliott, star backstop of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, has been bought by the Cubs, it was announced today. Elliott will leave tomorrow to join Tinker's outfit. Elliott was manager of the Oakland club until last week, when he resigned. Several big league clubs immediately made offers for him, but the Cubs, through Frank Chance, manager of the Los Angeles club, got first call on the catcher.

WOULD RETAIN LINES.

New York, July 26.—Examiner Howell, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, today begins the taking of testimony in this city on the application of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad to continue operation of its steamship lines in New England. The Panama Canal act prohibits joint ownership of competing steamship and railway lines. The New Haven company contends that this prohibition does not apply to its lines.

For the Book Borrowers.

What one of us in school years did not write in his arithmetic, geography or speaker:

Steal not this book for fear of shame,
For here you read the owner's name.

Some antiquarian once made the statement that Jean d'Orleans, Comte d'Angouleme, was the first to write a verse threatening any book thief—i. e., borrower, with terrible punishment, Philip Hale writes in the Boston Herald. He wrote this, captured in the Hundred Years' war and a prisoner in England for thirty-three years. The book was Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales." The common stanza among English schoolboys is:

Steal not this book for fear of shame,
For in it is the owner's name,
And when you die the Lord will say,
"Where is that book you stole away?"

But your confirmed borrower of books has no fear of punishment in this world or the next.—Exchange.

Rough Wooing.

Courtship and marriage customs among the Greenlanders were in early times simple and unceremonious. We are told that when a lovelorn youth made up his mind as to the girl he wanted to adorn and be useful in his hut of ice and snow he went to her house, seized her by the hair or wherever he could secure a good grip on her and dragged her to his own domain, where she was expected to stay without any further marriage ceremony. If an affluent bridegroom he would perhaps soothe her lacerated feelings by presenting her with a new lamp.

Bits of Swedish History.

Gustave III. of Sweden was assassinated at a masked ball; hence the opera "Un Ballo In Maschera," although Verdi was obliged to change the name of the ruler and the scene of tragedy from those in Schibe's libretto which served for his opera.

A queen dowager of Sweden died of apoplexy while witnessing a play entitled "Life Is But Smoke." She was a Frenchwoman named Clary. Bernadotte married her when she was seventeen years old and he was twice her age. Joseph Bonsparte had married her younger sister.

All Bands Alike to Her.

A little girl was greatly interested in watching the men in her father's orchard putting bands of tar round the fruit trees to prevent ground insects from crawling up and asked a great many questions. Some weeks later, when out with her mother, she noticed a gentleman with a mourning band round his left sleeve.

"Mother," she said, "what's to keep them from crawling up his other arm?" —London Globe.

Mohammed.

Mohammed was born about the year 570 A. D., at Mecca, the son of Abd Allah, of the family Hashim, and Amina, of the family of the powerful tribe of the Koreish. The number of the followers of Mohammed is estimated to be 176,834,372.

OFFICERS PROVED THEY ARE READY

General Preparedness of National Guard Shown in Mobilization Work.

NO HITCH IN JERSEY

Labors of Corps Would Have Been Greatly Lightened if Equipment Had Been Previously Stored in State Arsenals.

(From Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 26.—Departmental officers of the National Guard of New Jersey proved the general preparedness of the militia for actual war service when the Federal mobilization orders were issued and State troops were assembled here preparatory to assignment to stations on the Mexican border. This mobilization work by the State's military heads was a valuable practical lesson, from which much good may come in the future if the Federal and State authorities will profit by some of the shortcomings of the present supply system and rectify them for emergencies to come.

The mobilization orders of the Federal government were carried out in New Jersey by a score of officers headed by Lieutenant Colonel David S. Hill, chief of the quartermaster's corps. The experience of these officers shows to even the casual observer of military preparedness that plans made by New Jersey for mobilization worked without a single hitch, but because of certain supply arrangements of the Federal military authorities there were delays in obtaining equipment and horses.

The labors of the corps would have been greatly lightened if the war strength equipment had been previously stored in the State arsenals instead of in the Federal depots, in which event it would have been possible to assign the equipment immediately and directly to the State troops upon their arrival in organization camps, whereas under the Federal depot plan it was necessary to ship the equipment to the Federal depots and then reassign it to and redistribute it at the organization camps. This duplication can be entirely avoided in the future by storage of army equipment in war strength quantities in State arsenals, rather than in Federal depots.

There was much delay in the matter of supplying horses for the State troops, and this lost time could have been saved, it is suggested, if an officer of the quartermaster's corps had been previously assigned as an officer qualified to select and purchase mounts, without awaiting the convening of the United States Army Inspection Board. It is considered that an officer of the State organization could well qualify in advance of a call for troops and could arrange so that animals could be purchased and assigned within a day or two after arrival or organiztions at mobilization camps.

Examples of efficiency of the organization of the quartermaster's corps are strikingly shown by some of the important preparation work carried out under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Hill. This efficiency was in a large measure due to the division responsibilities of members of the corps. Major John L. Kilpatrick had charge of water supply and sanitation, Major William H. Chew of disbursements, Major Harry L. Harris of issuing commissary, Captain Frank A. Reinhard of field construction, Captain Charles W. Stark of rail and wagon transportation, Captain Edward I. Richards of acquiring horses, Captain Richard J. Drever, assistant issuing commissary; Captain James M. Sheen of quartermaster and office administration, Captain Stephen H. Barlow of property of the quartermaster.

As to water supply and sanitation the Sea Girt camp grounds were well equipped, and with the addition of the Buckelew farm, near the camp field, and the construction of pipe lines for water supply and sewage, adequate facilities for the mobilization of troops were complete within 14 hours of the time of receipt of the pipe at Sea Girt. About 40,000 pounds of pipe and fittings were ordered and installed between noon of Monday, July 19, and 14 hours thereafter.

One day after the receipt of the Federal mobilization orders a complete purchase of five days' garrison rations for the troops had been made and every detail perfected for the disbursement of these food supplies. When the New Jersey troops that went to the Mexican border left Sea Girt, they carried with them five days' travel rations and two days' garrison rations. In the transport trains kitchens and other necessary equipment was installed within a day after the order for movement of the mobilized guardsmen was received. The quartermasters' corps secured approximately 1,100 horses and mules, attended to inspection and branding, provided temporary blacksmith shops and did all other necessary things within 24 hours of the receipt of orders. At the time of the call for troops the State had on hand complete equipment for peace strength, and, in addition, a limited supply for recruits.

Taking the work of the quartermaster's corps as a whole the performance in preparing the New Jersey troops for Federal service on the Mexican border was a great credit to the State and places the militia of the State in an entirely new light in many heretofore skeptical minds.

Public Service Electric Co.,
Hoboken.
Gentlemen:
For the past fourteen years we have been using Public Service power in the operation of our entire plant, including electric cranes and blower service. We find it entirely satisfactory in every repect, particularly so in relation to overtime and emergency work, which is very essential in our line of business.
Very truly yours,
FOX HILL FOUNDRY,

Public Service supplies a large percentage of all the power used in its territory.

—In the aggregate more than 10,000 customers

—Having a total connected load of more than 185,000 H. P.

These customers represent nearly all classes of business and all sizes of installation; for instance, some of them are:

PLAINFIELD SOMERVILLE ELIZABETH

Hardening Up at Sea Girt

(By Staff Correspondent)

Company K men spent their spare moments yesterday and last night resting up after the strenuous hike of Monday night. Muscle sore and weary the company returned about noon yesterday and no one would deny but what he was "all in."

The shower baths are now in working order. Private Reynolds and Corporals Clark and Glover tried them out yesterday and reported them "O. K."

For some reason or other ocean bathing hasn't appealed to the Plainfielders since arrival here. It is necessary to tramp over a half-mile stretch to the water, but many of the guardsmen are doing it.

Privates Millwater and Horton are proving valuable assistants in the kitchen. As cooks they haven't a peer in the camp, according to those who eat "three squares" a day in Company K. They have been complimented on several different occasions for cleanliness by inspecting officers and the menus they have been preparing are unusually tempting.

Plainfield soldiers discovered twenty-seven new kinds of bugs on the hike Monday night. Every man had bites to exhibit on return to camp and some of the men brought samples of the insects back as mascots.

Private Clark found the going too much for him on the hike. He "caved in" on the way and Private Millwater had to carry his luggage.

Private Miller has just sent his 168th souvenir postal card. If you haven't received one your name isn't in the directory for he's determined not to forget any of the "back homes."

Rain and more of it. Some has fallen every day the campers have been here and when it isn't raining it's generally getting ready to.

Those Plainfielders who were detailed to the machine gun company just can't stay away from Company K's headquarters. Although all of their equipment has been moved to the corps' tents the trio are hourly visitors at the Plainfield row and one of them, Private Clark, had the nerve to return to his old tent and shave himself yesterday.

Lieut. Adjutant Littell is no more. Now it's General Carranza Littel. Major Hall got a shave yesterday afternoon and the first one he exhibited it to was Littell, probably thinking that the latter would wise up to the tip. He'll have to mow the growth some time before Saturday, for it's one safe bet that he couldn't exist long on North avenue in his present condition.

Private Hort furnished the cabaret number at mess time yesterday. After getting his chow Hort was hurrying to the mess tent to get out of the rain when a stake got in his way and turned him over, dinner and all.

Privates Pollon and Wallg and Sergeant Pearson have been rejected by the medical examiners, but will remain in camp until Saturday, severing their connection with the company at that time. All have been hard workers, particularly Sergeant Pearson, and it is with the regret of all that they are compelled to quit.

Private Clark, one of the Plainfielders transferred to the machine gun corps, stayed out a little late last night and had the time of his life trying to "miss" sentries on his way in. He finally worked a "war problem" of his own and got back under covers a few minutes before reveille was sounded this morning.

Company K is anticipating work on the range today or tomorrow. Several companies have already been practising and the usual sore shoulder complaint is prevalent.

The horses turned over to the mounted officers Sunday are rounding into better shape and are now half-way manageable. Several men were "dumped" pretty roughly by the unruly steeds, but hard work has taken the snappiness out of the animals.

Sea Girt's "rainy season" is here, at least it has been with us ever since we arrived. Weather conditions at the Jersey camp are a whole lot similar to those at the border. When it isn't raining it is hot and sultry and while the temperature doesn't soar as high as that in Douglas, the heat is felt a good deal worse.

Rain afforded the guardsmen an opportunity to take beauty naps following the baths yesterday afternoon. The Plainfield and Elizabeth boys welcomed the chance to make up for lost sleep.

News of the death of Clark Martin at McAllen, Tex., traveled through the camp quickly following the arrival of the Plainfield Daily Press yesterday. Martin was well known to many of the Company K men, but few knew that he was a member of the New York Guard.

Company K is getting water of far better quality than the Plainfield troopers had at the Buckelew farm. At the latter place it never seemed to get cold, but here it is always good for drinking purposes.

TERRIFIC HEAT AT DOUGLAS, GUARDSMEN LONG FOR OCEAN BREEZES AT SEA GIRT

Douglas, Ariz., July 21.—Terrific heat has for two days interfered with the work of the New Jersey guardsmen. With the thermometer hovering high up over the 100 mark in the shade it has been difficult to get the work done that was absolutely necessary in camp. The daily rains have deserted us for two days now and the dust and heat have returned in all their powers.

Only half clothed the men are moving slowly about the camp. Only the work that is in immediate need of accomplishment is being pushed and the men will welcome the rain when it comes. The camp ground, with the exception of the parts that can be reached from the water hydrants by hose, ars as dry as at any time since the boys reached camp and the dust is terrific. Indications point to showers late this afternoon or tonight. Men and officers made the most of the shower baths during the day and those who had the opportunity took several baths. There is no wind blowing and the heat is so oppressive that even the countless species of bugs and insects have given up their singing.

Yesterday and today have actually been the only two days since the men arrived here, that they felt the heat to any great degree, and they are longing for the Sea Girt ocean breezes and the tall glasses of cold beer that they were accustomed to back home. The haze caused by the heat is so thick that the mountains that rise out of the desert on all sides of Douglas cannot be seen. Nothing is moving in camp or in the city unless the need is imperative.

While soldiering requires hardship and privation the commanding officers are looking after the welfare of their men and are not working them more than is necessary in such weather. So far the Jersey troops have stood the heat and other trials remarkably well and with the exception of a very few cases there has been no serious illness among the more than 4,000 men encamped here from New Jersey. Minor troubles are reported to the medical authorities from time to time, but when the daily returns are referred to they show that the men remain under treatment only a few days. The cases are mostly of stomach ailment, brought on by drinking too much pop or trivial complaints caused by the heat.

The nature of the water has caused more or less trouble in the ranks, owing to its alkaline qualities, but the men are none the worse for it. As a matter of fact the medical authorities advise that the keeping open of the digestive system is of supreme importance to the soldiers here, especially those who are new comers in the country.

Drills in the early mornings were cut short today owing to the oppressive heat, and the men were given lighter duty to perform during the hottest part of the day. They take their chores philosophically and there is less complaint heard in the camp every day. Brigadier-General Edwin W. Hine, commanding the New Jersey Troops, is taking a personal interest in the welfare of the men and makes inspections of the camp daily. He is "in the saddle" practically as well as literally, and stands the game fully as well as the most seasoned men here. He is in very good health and is getting a real soldier's pleasure out of the present tour of duty.

General Hine is greatly loved by all of the men in the various commands. His popularity is probably due to his democratic administration of affairs as the head of the State troops. He chats with privates and colonels alike, inquires as to their needs and through his able adjutant-general, Major Alexander P. Gray, sees that their requirements are fulfilled. It is a big game, commanding a family of 4,000 men, but the load has fallen on able shoulders and out of the chaos disorganization and disorder of things, General Hine and his right hand man are gradually making a force of men that with good steady training for a few months will be ready for real duty.

The New Jersey National Guard cannot be whipped into an efficient condition within a few days. It is true that they have beaten the country on rapid mobilization, and caught the War Department down here along the border unprepared to take care of them, but the fact still remains that experience and long, steady preparation is what must be given the Jerseymen before they will be fit for actual service, unless the service is constituted merely of providing marks for the enemy.

There are at the present time organizations that could give a fairly good account of themselves under the direction of experienced army men, but several months will be required to shape them all for effective work either in offensive or defense. This is realized, and the officers of the State troops are securing all the advice and profiting in every possible manner from the experience of the army men who have been assigned as advisers to the State organizations through the courtesy of the War Department.

Large numbers of the New Jersey troops who have been worried about the condition of their affairs back home, and especially the financial side of the matter, have been cheered with the news that relief associations are aiding the dependents in practically every section of the State that has contributed to the big New Jersey army in the field here. Uncertainty as to their welfare led a number of men to make application for their return home under the ruling making it permissable where the men have left dependents. Hearing, however, that their wives and families are being cared for adequately, withdrawals to the applications have been received.

Both batteries of field artillery, the infantry outfits and the cavalrymen were out this morning for drill during the cooler hours of the early morning. The infantry all drilled out on the big parade ground that has been cleared off, to the north of the camp proper. One section of the field is given over to the cavalry troops and the batteries, whenever possible, hook up and go out into a section where their movements will be less restricted. The mounted organizations are getting along with their work now better than while the horses were for the most part suffering from the heat and the inoculations administered them.

Lumber for the mess halls and kitchens, which are built here permanently by the War Department, began to arrive today and by next week artisans will probably be hard at work in all outfits constructing the eating and cooking quarters. The organizations that have already built them at their own expense will be permitted to use the other buildings also, and in this way the men will have recreation buildings where they can write and play games.

The men have organized an association called the Crepehangers. Anyone who assumes a long drawn out expression of total disgust and can give information tending to show that the troops are here for a long stay in eligible. General Hine joined today by expressing an opinion that the Jerseymen wouldn't get out of here before Christmas.

TOO BUSY TO READ!

Analysis of an ordinary day's grist of motor offenses brought before Commissioner Dill reveals a startling lack of information among people who run cars, say the Newark News. They seem not to know the penalties that surely await them.

One man drove without a license. Another neglected to have his learner's permit on hand to show to inspectors. A fourth cut out his muffler and refused to stop his car at an inspector's order. A boy ran recklessly. A young man let a fifteen-year-old girl drive his car. A motorist refused to give his name and address to another whose car he had smashed. A score paid fines for speeding, and one man who failed to appear when summoned was deprived of his motoring privilege. That is only one day's work for the authorities.

Book publishers says the commercial decline of literature is due in part to the automobile; the people who used to buy books now buy cars. Commissioner Dill's daily experiences would seem to bear out the publishers' theory. Apparently the motorists as a class are so busy motoring, or earning the money to buy gasoline, that they have no time to read. A few minutes of looking through the papers would save many of them from coming to grief.

More than 930 violations of the health ordinance have been reported by members of the police department during the inspection that started only a few weeks ago. This does not necessarily mean that Plainfield is a dirty or unsanitary city, because the officers are most rigid in their demands, but it does mean that those regularly employed by the Health Board have been guilty of neglect. Most of these cases were due to ignorance on the part of the property owner or tenant. A campaign of education is necessary every time a city attempts to really "clean up," but this should not be. Health laws are far more important than traffic regulations, yet the latter are printed in pamphlet form and freely distributed, while the ordinary citizen knows little or nothing of what the law demands in the way of prevention of disease. The infantile paralysis epidemic in New York will prove a local blessing, as it will serve to thoroughly clean the city and officials here will be guilty of gross carelessness if they do not insist on a more general observance of sanitary rules in the future.

The proposed plan to use the more than 200,000 dimes that were given by children over the country to the Marjorie Sterrett battleship fund in providing annual prizes for gun crews in the United States navy means that the money will be even better expended than if it were put to the use for which it was given. A single battleship would not make our navy the mistress of the seas, but to encourage increased efficiency on the part of every gun crew on every warship is to add much to the strength of our defenses. Cash prizes, awarded publicly and with ceremony, will promote a rivalry in target work that will bring out the best that is in those who use the big guns of the warships and the torpedo tubes of the undersea craft, and the competition will work wonders in a few years. The Press is proud of its part in collecting this fund and every contributor should share this satisfaction.

BIENNIAL SESSION OF SUPREME LODGE

Knights of Pythias Will Gather at Portland, Oregon, July 31.

Portland, Ore., July 26.—The biennial session of the supreme lodge, Knights of Pythias, will begin in this city Tuesday, August 1, with an attendance that gives promise at this time of surpassing any previous similar event in the history of the order. Fully 25,000 visitors will be here from all over the country, according to an estimate based on applications for accommodations received by the committee in charge of local arrangements.

P. S. Young, of Ada, Ohio, will preside over the sessions of the supreme lodge. He will be succeeded in the chair of supreme chancellor by John J. Brown, of Vandalia, Ill., the present vice-chancellor. Several States have candidates for the office of supreme vice-chancellor. At the present time it looks as if it will be a contest between the East and the West for the honor of filling the office. In the half century of the history of the order the West has never had a supreme chancellor. The selection of the supreme vice-chancellor from this section will place the West in line for securing the head of the order, since it is the invariable rule to promote the vice-chancellor to the supreme chancellorship.

California has high hopes of landing the honor for Robert F. Burns, for many years a conspicuous leader in Pythian affairs. Colorado has the other Western candidate in the person of Charles F. Davis, for twenty years a representative of that State in the conventions of the supreme lodge. The Eastern men most prominently mentioned for the vice-chancellorship are William Ladue, of New York, and W. F. Broening, of Maryland.

Elaborate arrangements are being made by the citizens of Portland for the entertainment of the Pythians. Thousands of dollars have been raised by popular subscription. The encampment parade will take place on the opening day of the convention, and it is estimated there will be 20,000 uniformed Knights and fifty bands of music in line. Entire lodges will be here from various points in Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

The Bull Moose.

All dressed up and no place to go,
Without a leader and without a show;
Left by the Moses of years gone by,
Left on the sand bar, high and dry.
Issues were stolen upon all sides,
Elephant and donkey, drat their hides!
Both came up and stripped the Moose
Of all his issues laying loose.
The way is long and the grazing punk,
There's nothing left but a store of spunk.
He's ready still for a rousing fight,
But nothing to fight for is in sight.
When the end has come and the Moose has starved,
This epitaph we will see carved
Upon the stone where the daisies grow:
"All dressed up and no place to go."

An Emperor on $2 a Day.

Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria-Hungary lives on $2 a day, but the answer is easy. He is an emperor. If an emperor wants to wear a celluloid collar and wash it himself no one dares criticize. An emperor can wear a $7 suit until the fringe hangs about its edges and no one dares object. An emperor can live on oatmeal, smoke "Pride of the Gravel Train" and use bluing in order to save ink if he wants to under the dievine right of kings. Royalty covers a multitude of peculiarities. A with a rubber loop and hook over th king can put on a 25-cent necktie the collar button and instead of being called cheap he is lauded as the originator of a new style.

Impossible Things.

To make a pianola play as well at home as it did in the store.

To get in the last word with a life insurance agent.

To keep a woman from writing on both sides of the paper.

To get the buttons in a white vest without breaking one of the commandments.

To look dressed up when you have a ready-tied four-in-hand on.

To understand the telephone conversation of a stenographer who is chewing gum.

To refrain from turning to the sporting page of a newspaper first.

To get a theatre seat that suits, even if it is the one you asked for.

At Last a Groom Is Mentioned.

A recent wedding write-up says: "The groom, Harry Leroy Tabor, was dressed in navy broadcloth, while the bride, Miss Anna Lee Steele, wore pongee silk elaborately trimmed in lace and embroidery and carried a large bouquet. The groom is a handsome young man of fine physique and exemplary habits. He is a locomotive fireman and has his flat already furnished."

Cheer Up, Brother.

Every now and then Tom Bodine of the Paris (Mo.) Mercury forgets he's an apostle of "Sunshine Street" and lapses into rankest pessimism. In this manner does he spill the bluing: "June still comes rose in hand the sweetheart of the world, but is met at threshold of Arcady, hustled into a gasoline wagon and forced to go joy riding. She has laid aside her witching draperies and donned a dirty linen cravenette and a dinky cap. The scent upon the night is now the stink of Standard Oil and our ambrosia beer. Clearly the old order changeth." Cheer up, Tom. Things may take a turn.

A HUSKY HELPER ARRIVES

Plainfield Theatre.

LILLIAN GISH

As Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the carpetbag leader in "The Birth of a Nation"—she has endeared herself to millions.—at the Plainfield Theatre Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, Matinee and Night.

Quite the most wonderful of the many wonderful scenes pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, is that showing Sherman's march to the sea and the burning of the city of Atlanta. Imagine, if you can, a view fo a long, fertile valley extending for miles, apparently between the hills. Moving through this valley, in straggling formation, or lack of formation, is the army of General Sherman. Now and then a puff of smoke indicates return fire upon snipers in farm buildings. Now and then a barn is fired in evident retaliation for a deadly bullet from its shelter, and the army of human ants is ever moving forward, wriggling its way like a huge serpent towards its goal—the sea.

Atlanta is reached. Whether the burning of the city was a military neecssity, or whether the conflagration was of accidental origin, chroniclers of the time fail to agree, but Atlanta was sacrificed to the flames and the conflagration is so realistically pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" that one can almost smell the smoke, and hear the cries of the terrified people as they flee to the hills for thir lives. Sherman's army has cut its fearful swathe through the heart of the South. Another link has been forged in the chain that shall bind the Confederacy to the stake. Another move has been made in the big war game that is to end at Appomattox Court House with the surrender of Lee. It is a wonderful picture in very truth. Nothing like it has ever appeared on the screen, and it took a vast amount of labor and infinite patience to stage such a spectacle.

At the rate seats are selling for "The Birth of a Nation" most of them will be gone before the beginning of the engagement. Daily matiness will be given.

Proctor's Theatre

Mlle. Anna Pavlowa, the noted dancer, who began a three days' engagement at Proctors' on Monday in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," her initial appearance as a film star, ends her engagement in the massive eight-part production tonight. This attraction has created widespread interest wherever shown and has made a lasting impression on all local amusement seekers who were fortunate enough to see it. One feature in connection with this production that deserves special mention at this juncture is the fact that it was produced and directed by a woman, Lois Weber, who also has the honor of adapting it to the screen from the operatic production "Masaniello." In additon to other features today the latest Mutual Weekly is also shown.

Tomorrow William S. Hart, one of the most popular of the Triangle dramatic stars, appears in a Thomas H. Ince Triangle play entitled "The Apostle of Vengeance." This feature has its story laid in the mountains of Kentucky, where moonshine whiskey is distilled in secret caverns, and feudists pop at one another from behind the rocks and trees. Again the characters are seen under the open sky, and both the love interest and the drama of the play have their inception and their culmination outside the walls of human dwellings. A strong and prominent Triangle cast appears in support of William S. Hart in "The Apostle of Vengeance" and includes Nona Thomas, Joseph J. Dowling, Fanny Midgley, Jack Gilbert and Marvel Stafford. The latest Keystone comedy is also on the program for tomorrow and several educational and topical pictures will also be shown.

On Friday by special arrangement with the Fox Film Corporation, Virginia Pearson, the popular emotional star, will appear in one of her most powerful dramatic Fox productions, "Hypocrisy," in which she is called upon to exert herself to the utmost in registering the human interest touches and emotional depictions required by the story.

Temperance

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

As never before the Roman Catholic Church is becoming actively hostile to the liquor traffic. By voice and pen and vote the leaders are doing valiant service in State and national prohibition. The Oregon Signal (official organ of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union) recently wrote to a number of promient Catholics requesting statements for publication. The replies may be summed up in these words of one of the reverend fathers:

"The man who says that Catholic Church is for the saloon is doing a grave injustice to the religion of fifteen millions of the American people. The man who tells you that the Catholic priesthood and the Catholic bishops of America are allies of the saloon business is guilty of a gross and serious misrepresentation."

The war against drink — greatest enemy of America and of the world—is non-sectarian, non-sectional, non-partisan, non-hyphenated.

A certain brewery product is advertised by its manufacturers as "brewed for the wise—goes in disguise." In the Samuel Hopkins Adams column of the New York Tribune a contributor thus aptly comments: "Goes in disguise—I wonder why? Are the brewers ashamed of their product, or is it because the users are such hypocrites that they want their neighbors to believe that they never use the stuff? This advertisement is one of the most telling anti-booze arguments before the public. It convicts every drinker of this particular brand of beer of moral cowardice."

"Kind of the brewing company, isn't it," says a prohibition journal, "to so thoroughly spread abroad the picture of its disguised crate that anybody half a block away can tell what is in the box."

One of the men who has ceased to be a friend of liquor and has come out for prohibition is John L. Sullivan, the famous pugilist. A total abstainer for a number of years, his statements with regard to the severing of his former relationship with John Barleycorn are being used in current campaigns. "Be a sport, vote dry," is the advice of Mr. Sullivan. In telling of his reason for cutting out booze, he says, "John Barleycorn was the real heavy-weight champion. I was not knocked out by Jim Corbett, but by Jim Jams. Booze strikes a man below the belt. The booze game is a game no one can beat. Every fellow thinks he can, but if he don't let it alone it will get him. I punished some of the stuff myself, but I cut it out and see what I am now. They say when I was whooping it up years ago that I would die in the gutter. But I fooled them. I have not touched a drop in years. I don't need it, and I know very well that it don't need me.

"Now days a man can't drink and get away with it as he once could. The man who drinks is not wanted now, no matter how good he is. There has been a big change in the last thirty years. Some day John Barleycorn will receive the knockout blow. The day is coming in this country when there will be no saloons."

The Yukon Legislature (Canadian) has voted to submit the question of prohibition to the electors not later than September 1. This action was taken in response to a petition submitted by the Yukon people's prohibition organization, and represents two-thirds of the qualified voters of the territory. The bill to be submitted is very stringent and provides for no importation save for medicinal and mechanical purposes. It also provides for the abolition of all manufacture and sale of intoxicants in the territory on and after July 1, 1917.

Governor Moses Alexander, of Idaho, it is reported, has made a standing offer to buy any banks or stores which feel that on account of prohibition they will be forced to sell. The Governor, who is a man of great wealth, has done this in times past, he says, and in each instance he has resold the property at a greatly increased value. Governor Alexander, who was one of the speakers at the Anti-Saloon League convention in Indianapolis, told from his personal experience and observation how prohibition stimulates all lines of legitimate industry.

Pewit's Wife Went to Dig in the Garden.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How Pewit Made a Lot Of Money.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

WHEN the children finished bread and jam daddy came in to tell them their bedtime story: "A poor countryman once traded two hides for an old chest. On his way home a great kicking and noise happened, and a young man knocked and begged to be let out of the chest. But the countryman, whose name was Pewit, was not to be found so easy. After much talk he agreed to open the chest and let the young man go if he paid $1,000.

"The young man finally gave up the money, and Pewit set him free to go about his business.

"Then Pewit went home very happy with so much money. He built himself a new house, and all his neighbors wondered how he had suddenly become so rich. 'Pewit must have been where the gold snow falls,' they said.

"So they took him before the justice to give an account of himself and show that he had honestly come into wealth. Then Pewit told them that he had sold his two hides for $1,000.

"When the people heard this they went home and killed their oxen that they, too, might sell their hides for $2,000. But the justice said, 'My maid shall have first chance.'

"So off she ran to the tanner. But when she got there he laughed her to scorn, saying that he had paid the countryman no money, only an old chest.

"All this made the townspeople very angry, and they got their heads together to work some mischief to Pewit. They decided they could best do this while he was at work in his garden.

"Pewit heard about his neighbors' ill will, and he said to himself, 'If anybody is to get into trouble I don't see why it shouldn't be my wife instead of me.' His wife was a great scold, you see, and he did not love her well.

"So he went home and told his wife that he wished she would humor a whim he had in his head. He wished she would put on his clothes and dig in the garden in his stead. Now, you children know how much fun it is to dress up in somebody else's clothes," said daddy, "how Evelyn always likes to wear Jack's overalls. So Pewit's wife dressed up in his clothes and went to dig in the garden just as her husband did each day."

"What happened to her, daddy?" cried the children from the top of the stairs, where daddy blew kisses to them.

"Some other night," daddy smiled back.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph's Mother Plans a Campaign to Bring Ethel to Reason.

"Do you think Ethel has gone to her mother?" asked Mrs. Gordon as she and her son sat in front of the fire the evening after her arrival.

"I have no idea. I hope not. Of all things that I dread her mother's influence is the worst," he replied, taking his cigar from his mouth and knocking off the ashes. "If she is not there I do not want Mrs. Mertage to know she has run away from home, and if she is there and I write to inquire the mother will take that as a white flag and will begin to prepare her terms of capitulation. There is one thing I am determined about: I want this to be a turning point in our lives. Things can not go on as they have been going."

"This is a critical point in your lives. There is no doubt about that. I have been thinking that I could write to Mrs. Tyler and ask her to find out if Ethel is at home. She can be trusted to keep her mouth shut." Mrs. Gordon nodded decidedly.

"If she is not there I can do nothing but wait," continued Ralph.

"While you are waiting you can get in the right attitude toward your wife." His mother looked anxiously at Ralph as she spoke. "She has many good qualities and I am sure she has the making of a woman in her."

"If she could only be with you." Ralph reached out and squeezed his mother's hand. "I tried to make her willing to have you come and teach her how to keep house and cook, but she would have none of it."

"That would not be wise. She is prejudiced against me because I opposed the marriage. I must work long and patiently to win her love and confidence. Any such arrangement as that would be a hindrance to the good understanding I hope to establish between us."

"How is she to learn, then?" asked Ralph despairingly.

"Nothing can keep her from learning when once she has the desire." His mother smiled into his face.

"And the desire, where is she to get that?" asked Ralph gloomily.

"Perhaps this absence will give her time to think. If it does not, it may be necessary to tell her frankly that she is to learn to cook and keep house before she takes her place in the home as a partner." Ralph noticed what a firm mouth his mother had as she spoke.

"And if she refuses?" asked Ralph, leaning forward in his earnestness.

"If she absolutely refuses to do anything to make herself fit for the work of a home-maker, there can never be a home. God forbid that any such contingency should arise." There was silence for a few minutes, then Mrs. Gordon added: "What you need to prepare yourself for is to be patient with her failures and relapses when she is really trying. Character building is a slow process and there will be many failures."

"Oh, mother, I could be patient with her if she tried. What I could not stand was her utter indifference, her sitting down and receiving all I had to give as her right and never lifting her finger to make home happy or comfortable."

"'Not to be ministered to but to minister.' If she ever gets that vision all will change." She smiled into her son's face.

MADEMOISELLE'S CHAPEAU A FEATHER CREATION.
By Mary Glynn.

There are few novelties in the way of millinery that can surprise the average fashionable woman today. However, occasionally, one must admit, there is some whimsical feature introduced that will give cause for loud exclamations of enthusiasm. Such is the case in the hat illustrated. A rather deep-crowned hat of brown satin with decidedly chic roll to the brim, suits "Mademoiselle's" bright face perfectly. She wears a saucy lace nose veil with this chapeau, which is most becoming. The exceptionally interesting feature of this creation, however, was the arrangement of the queer brown and white wings just above the grosgrain band on the crown. This afforded a peculiar distinctiveness that could not be mistaken. In this feature was evident the novelty that has occasionally been found in the extensive display of summer millinery. In this particular detail of the entire outfit of "Mademoiselle" there was the secret of perfection in the tout ensemble. Topping an outfit that consisted of a navy mohair afternoon frock, the style of which just escaped being severe and attractively trimmed with silk stitching. This chapeau supplied the last note to a correct attire. Not less noticeable were the very high kid button boots that flitted in and out under the rippling skirt with its wichtex lined hem.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE FISH COURSE.

ESCALOPED FISH.—Two cupfuls of left over fish, a cupful of white sauce, buttered crumbs. Line a buttered baking dish with crumbs, then add a layer of fish and continue until all the fish is used. Pour on the thin white sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown and the fish heated through.

Baked Halibut Steaks.—Two pounds of steaks, a cupful of cream, a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of flour, salt and pepper. Trim the steaks and place in a roasting pan. Dredge with flour, season, spread with butter, pour over the cream and bake fifteen minutes in a quick oven.

Salmon Loaf (Cold).—A can of salmon, a green pepper, three hard boiled eggs, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of gelatin. Dissolve the gelatin in the lemon juice and add enough boiling water to make a cupful. Pick over and flake the salmon and add the chopped pepper and egg. Season and add the gelatin mixture, then put into a loaf pan lined with paper. When firm serve with sliced lemon or salad dressing.

Broiled Fish.—This recipe is for mackerel, white fish, trout, halibut, salmon, smelts or perch. Broil small fish five to ten minutes, large fish fifteen to twenty minutes. Grease the hot broiler with salt pork rind. Rub the fish dry and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broil on one side until the skin is crisp, then turn and broil on the other side. Broil split fish with the flesh side up, then turn. When tender slip on a hot platter and serve with tartar sauce.

Sauce For Boiled Fish.—Three tablespoonfuls of butter, three tablespoonfuls of flour, two cupfuls of milk, two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of lemon and a teaspoonful of salt. Melt the butter and add the flour, stirring until smooth. Gradually add the milk, stirring constantly, and when smooth and just bubbling add the beaten egg and seasoning and stir until thick and smooth. Add the lemon juice just before serving.

jor, they have to give a certain amount of their time in learning the rudiments of hospital work, especially first aid and litter drill, under a medical officer designated for the purpose, and have to hold regular band rehearsals every day. The work as laid out is all in keeping with the regular army conditions, and it is no longer possible for a man who is a good musician, but happens to be physically unfit for heavy work, to expect to get through in the guard. It has been pointed out by a number of officers here that mobilization for active service was one of the best things that could happen so far as increasing the efficiency and military ability of the bands was concerned.

Mounted orderlies formerly had to look pleasant, be able to ride well, and be on hand when the colonel went for a ride, spending the rest of the time doing as they pleased. Under the changed order of things they are given instruction in watering, feeding, grooming, picketing, care of the hoofs of the horses, bitting, bridling, saddling, scouting, patroling and messenger service, and still more important must learn flag and semaphore signalling, a thing which has heretofore been left entirely to the signal corp men only. The men of the supply company are also put through the entire routine of care of horses, and of course are given instruction in policing, issuing of supplies, transportation and similar duties. Company musicians, two buglers, in each case who used to get through their day's work by occasional toots for commands in the field, and calls for mess and drill, have now to take up the semaphore and signalling work, and they have been put through a steady course ever since they arrived here, wigwagging to each other from one end of the parade ground.

As for the enlisted man, perhaps the best idea can be gained as to the work he has to do from the fact that when the hikes have been taken just one man has been left in a company street in camp, and when possible the commanders have picked out men who are temporarily disabled, or who are well enough to be about but not to do hard work, to leave behind.

Governor Fielder has received a large number of acceptances for the luncheon which he will give at the Little White House on Friday for the prominent men of Mercer, Somerset, Middlesex, Union and Monmouth counties, and if it is a fair day the authorities here expect the largest crowd thus far this season. The fact that there is to be a review of the regiment is expected also to bring a great crowd of summer people, and special arrangements are being made to police the ground. The review takes places at four o'clock.

The medical inspection of the entire Second Regiment has been completed and officers in charge say that the proportion of rejections has been very small, much smaller than was the case with the commands that weeks ago. The rejections have averaged less than five to a company. have averaged less than five to a company.

Two of this year's West Point graduates arrived in camp yesterday, and will assist the regular army officers in the instruction work for the guardsmen. One of the newcomers, Delp Styer, is a son of Colonel Henry D. Styer, who has been detailed here since mobilization began, and he graduated third in his class at the Academy last month. The other is Sidney Herkness, and both rank as Second Lieutenants in the regular army. They have taken especial charge of the newly formed machine gun company, and will give the men the benefit of their experience in this work here.

Incidentally, in picking the men for the machine gun section the regimental officers frowned on the cigarette smoking guardsmen, and gave orders that no man that uses tobacco in that form could expect to be given preference in such special work as a company of this kind is called upon to do. It was also used to serve as a warning to others that if they expect promotion it is best to let cigarettes alone.

"DARE-DEVIL" DODD WILL RETIRE TODAY

Man Who Led Expedition Into Mexico Closes His Career as a U. S. Fighter.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—The official life of a gallant old warrior expired today, when, by reason of the fact that this is the sixty-fourth anniversary of his birth, Brigadier General George A. Dodd, the commander of the cavalry brigade of the punitive expedition into Mexico last Spring, was retired from active service. In the ordinary routine of military affairs General Dodd would have retired with the rank of colonel. Only a few weeks ago, by order of the President, the higher rank of brigadier-general was conferred upon him in recognition of his distinguished services in Mexico, particularly his cavalry dash at Guerrero last March, when he went into successful action against a superior force of bandits after a ride of 55 miles in 17 hours.

In the forty years of his service in the regulars, "Dare-Devil" Dodd, as he is familiarly known, has seen as much hard fighting as any officer of the service. He is a native of Pennsylvania and was appointed to the military academy from that State. Immediately after his graduation in 1876 he was assigned as a second lieutenant to the famous Third cavalry, the command that has seen more hard service on the border in the past four years than any regiment in the army.

At West Point his classmates included Hugh L. Scott, now a major-general and chief of the general staff; Brig. Gen. Ernest A. Garlington, the inspector-general of the army, and Herbert W. Slocum, now commanding the Twelfth cavalry, the attack upon which at Columbus, N. M., was the immediate cause of the expedition being sent into Mexico last spring.

The first ten years of Gen. Dodd's service were years of never-ceasing activity, for the most part in actions against the hostile Indians of the Far West. He served through the Powder River expedition of 1877, helped to keep the Indians of the Red Cloud Agency quiet in 1878, won the commendation of his superiors for gallant service in the Ute expedition of 1879, was in command of a famous company of scouts in the Arizona outbreaks in 1882, and helped suppress Indian disturbances in what is now the State of Oklahoma in November, 1893.

Gen. Dodd was captain in the Fourth cavalry in the Spanish war. He was in the battle of San Juan and participated in the siege and operations against Santiago. He was commended for gallantry in the face of the enemy in the Santiago campaign. When he returned to the United States in the latter part of 1898 he was sent to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., for a tour of duty, which lasted but a few weeks, when he was ordered to the Philippines, where he participated in the expedition into Northern Luzon under Major Gen. Young. In this expedition he took part in tewlve battles, and again won the commendation of his superiors for gallant and meritorous work. He was recommended by Gen. Young for brevet major for gallant conduct in action at San Nicolas, P. I., and subsequently by Gen. Wheaton for conspicuous gallantry in action at Aligangan, P. I.

Gen. Dodd returned to the United States from the Philippines in 1901 and again was sent for a tour of duty at Fort Ethan Allen. He was ordered West in 1903, to command Fort Assiniboine, Mont. On July 23, 1904, he was made a lieutenant-colonel and assigned to the Tenth cavalry, one of the two famous negro mounted commands of the regular army. He was made a colonel in April, 1908, and put in command of the Twelfth cavalry.

He was commanding the Second cavalry on the border at the time of the Columbus raid. When President Wilson ordered Gen. Funston to send a punitive expedition into Mexico he promptly gave the command of the forces to Dodd, for he knew, as his brother officers expressed it at the time, "that old Dodd was the man who could successfully cope with the Mexican bandits if anybody could."

H. OTTO WITTPENN'S CAREER IS REVIEWED

Congressman Hamill Discusses Naval Officers Qualifications for Governorship.

Hackensack, July 26.—The career of Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City, candidate for Governor, as an official in both Hudson county and his home city, and as leader of the progressive element of the Democratic party, was reviewed by Representative James A. Hamill, of the Twelfth Congressional district, at a big meeting of the Bergen County Democracy, held at the Wheelmen's Club, the headquarters of the Bergen County Democratic Committee, here, last evening.

Mr. Hamill discussed Mr. Wittpenn's activities which brought about reform in the adminstration of Hudson county's affairs while he was county supervisor—a position equivalent to that of mayor of a large city—and as Mayor of Jersey City, laying particular stress upon his efforts to bring into effect an economical system and at the same time give the taxpayers the benefits to which they are entitled.

The meeting was in the nature of a reception to Mr. Wittpenn. It was the result of a resolution unanimously passed by the Democratic County Committee, and several hundred prominent Democrats, in addition to the members of the county committee, gathered at the headquarters to meet the naval officer. In his address Mr. Wittpenn promised an efficient, economical system of State government in the event of his election as Governor.

"Among the important questions that must be settled is the status of the Governor as the chief executive officer of the State," said Mr. Wittpenn. "From a comparatively simple government of years ago, the administration has become a series of units, each in control of some branch of activity. With this condition and through the adoption of political expediencies, these units have ceased to co-ordinate, and the Governor has little but the moral control resulting from respect of his office.

"If the Governor is to be held responsible he must be made the executive in fact, and the office must become the most influential force in department work. He should be the head of a Budget Commission," Mr. Wittpenn continued. "He should have power and means to investigate the needs and the workings of every department. He should be required to constitute duly designated heads of departments as advisory committees, at meetings of which matters of general departmental policy might be discussed. In conjunction with this he should have definite power to compel heads of department boards to submit to him all questions of broad general policy for the purpose of informing him and that he may voice his opinon theron."

FITZSIMMONS A "CAVE MAN."

"Robert Fitzsimmons declares the 'cave men' of the ring are extinct, and the champions of today are children compared with the old school.

"'I had my first fight when I was 15 years of age,' said the old gladiator. 'I had three bare knuckle fights with heavyweights when I was a kid weighing less than 115 pounds.

"'That's the school I learned in. Today they get a purse that would equal my entire ring earnings, and they have it handed to them for six or ten rounds on no decision fighting.'"—Extract from "Sun."

Ed. Note—It would appear that Bob is still in the fighting mood. Perhaps, Jack Dillon may see this.

KENNEL CLUB SHOW.

Now that preliminary arrangements for the fifth annual show of the local Kennel Club have been made, lovers of dogs should get busy, preparing their pets for exhibition. The fact that this show is conducted at a time when the canine season is at its height should be of great benefit in making it a success. With such a capable manager as Wilbur Purcell, the local club's event will be just as classy and will have just as many entries as any show held this year, or, in fact, any other year. The Horse Show Grounds are well situated, easy of access and in beautiful surroundings. The list of judges, too, is of such calibre that many fanciers will be induced to enter their pets in this event. Given publicity and the support of local sportsmen and canine fanciers, this show will be unusually successful. That it will get plenty of publicity is certain as the work of making known to the public that such an event is to be held here in September has been intrusted to the care of a capable newspaper man. Whatever service we can render the club in its effort to make this annual affair a success will be done with a will. The city of Plainfield is to benefit by the Dog Show and citizens of this city should realize that by helping the affair along they are but helping themselves.

TROUBLE WITH THE GIANTS.

Johnny McGraw seems to have overstocked his team. Stars and, some that are not stars, have been signed with ever-increasing regularity, until now the New Yorks have more "star" players on the bench than any other National League team. When a manager seeks to build up his squad and to annex stars, he must realize that there is a limit to his right to purchase stellar talent. Not that "Mugsy" McGraw does not know how to manage a baseball team. He does. But it is the firm conviction of men who know more about baseball than we do and as much as the average minor league manager does, that the purchase of such players as Kauff, Rousch, Rariden, McKechnie and Benton was not backed by the best of judgment. The fact that the Giants had Burns and Robertson should have demonstrated to the Giant moguls that the purchase of both Kauff and Rousch was useless expenditure. As a result, Rousch is now with Cincinnati and Kauff, said to be the poorer of the two, is still with the Giants. The other players mentioned above were all needed for the time being and for the time being made good. They did not come to the Giants for a few cents, either. Now that "Mugsy" has them all, what is he going to do with them? What has he done with them?

PRAISE FOR RALPH RUNYON.

One of the most reliable athletic authorities in the metropolis stated the other day that Ralph Runyon "is one of the most promising athletes around the metropolitan district." What was said was not amiss. Stress was laid on the fact that Ralph was in the habit of practicing diligently and that his stay at Penn State had improved his ability to a great extent. Ralph was in earnest when he began his career as a pole vaulter. He went about his work in a lively fashion and could be seen at Parker Field daily. His triumph—for it surely is a triumph—is a wonderful incentive to the athlete who is striving to be of some account. Ralph was by no means a star at the start. But that he is a little more than a star now seems to be the convivetion of Howard Valentine. And Howard is paid to know.

NO OUTSIDE TALENT.

We have William Kline's word for it. No outside talent, as far as the pitching problem is concerned, is to be employed by the Royal Giants when they meet the Tabs on Sunday. Kline firmly believes that his players are in the same class with the Tabs and that they do not need the help of outsiders in order to make a good showing. If Kline means what he said, then he is to be congratulated three or four times and then some more. It has been the custom around these parts to employ outsiders to trim rival outfits. If one team gained the ascendency and had a rival, that rival would purchase the assistance of a few metropolitan players and then attack the "champions." The title would be annexed by a purely "non-local" combination. The fact that William Kline is to have none of this means that he is taking a step higher. That he will live up to his word is the belief of many fans. There is not one law in this country that prohibits his bringing the whole Lincoln Giant team here next Sunday. But there is the unwritten law of sportsmanship which says that it's better to fight on even terms. And what we know of "Midge" Kline makes us feel doubly sure that he is going to do the right thing. And we are going to watch that lineup on Sunday, just to prove to ourself that in "Midge" we have one manager who has "taken the step higher."

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Although Pete Simmons is generally considered the leader of the Royal Giants, William Kline says that the club is really owned by him (Kline). And, furthermore, Pete is one of the best managers that could be obtained for the position, but, as Kline says, the "hiring" and "firing" of players is not up to Pete, nor to any individual player on the team. Kline is the man who will do any hiring of outside talent for Sunday's attraction with the Tabs. And, inasmuch as Kline stated that he does not have to go out of the city for talent with which to battle the Abstainers, the public takes it for granted that the Royal team that meets the Teetotalers next Sunday will be a purely local one. If outside players are employed, we fail to see where the Royals will profit by employing them. Managers of City League teams, upon reading of the employment of other than local players, will hesitate for a long time before doing business with the leaders of the Royals. And these leaders are prudent enough to realize that no manager is compelled to lead his team against the Giants.

While he is not, by any means, a finished first baseman, Dan Randolph can hit. And, after all, what does it profit a man to be a good fielder and unable to hit. It has been aptly stated that there are hundreds of excellent infielders. Dan is one of the few dependable "stickers" with the Baptist team. He is not a "poor" infielder, but there is nothing striking about his work at first base. He and Mehaffe are bound to lift the Firsts out of the rut into which they have fallen.

There has been more discussion regarding that postponement of the Baptist-Hope encounter. We were of the opinion that this matter had been settled once and for all at the last City League meeting. Upon what point the Baptists will base their latest contention, we do not know. But we do know that new evidence will have to be furnished, or the City League court will decide that there is no cause for action.

Tommy Mullin is still anxious to get a chance to do a little pitching. With this end in view, he requested the manager of the Perth Amboy Pacers to allow him to hurl as soon as the opportunity offered. Consequently, when the Keansburgers appeared on the horizon Sunday, Tommy prepared for action and was given a chance to demonstrate his ability. Tommy did well, but gave way to Stevens before the completion of the contest.

They say it's "suicide" to sign up as an umpire in the Southern League. There are a few fans in this city who are doing their best to make the expression applicable in the City League.

The Pans were scheduled to take a trip to Cranford last Saturday, in an effort to defeat the representative club of that place. Unfortunately Jupiter Pluvius decided that Joe Newell needed a rest. Hence, the rainfall and the postponement of the attraction. The Cranford manager realized that his players were far from being "ducks."

"What is a loyal player?" If the fans of this city believe that they can solve the problem satisfactorily, these columns are open to an expression of their views.

We would like the fans of this city to submit for publication an article on "My Favorite City League Player."

Baltusrol Defeated For First Time Since Beginning of Competition.

Baltusrol suffered its first defeat in the team competition of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association yesterday losing to Glen Ridge 7 points to 2.

Plainfield won from Montclair by default. The local team has not played in some time, winning and losing several matches by default.

Englewood won a sweeping victory over Hollywood by 8 to 0, and Cranford accounted for Hackensack by exactly the same score. Cranford, however, had the benefit of playing at home, while Englewood invaded the Hollywood links.

KENNEL CLUB JUDGE CARDED FOR COLUMBIA

Dr. DeMund, of Brooklyn, to Be Judge at Columbia Show Sept. 2.

The list of the judges who will officiate at the dog show to be held under the auspices of the local Kennel Club on September 23, includes the name of Dr. John E. De Mund, of Brooklyn. Dr. DuMond is also a judge at the Columbia Kennel Club show which will be held at Hudson, N. Y., on September 2. He is registered as a judge of all breeds and for unclassified specials.

The Greenacre Kennels have entered their best dogs in the Hudson County Show at Union Hill and it is expected that an effort will be made to have this club exhibit at the local show. The Greenacre Kennels bench such dogs as Chows, Japanese spaniels, English toy spaniels and Boston terriers. Entries for the local show will begin to pour in after the Hudson event is over. There are other shows on the boards for the early part of September. There is a prominent event in Atlantic City and it is highly probable that many of the entrants in that show will exhibit here the following week. Entries may be filed with the superintendent of the show, Wilbur Purcell, of Broadway, New York.

CONTESTANTS DRAWN FOR EDGEMERE EVENT

Alrick H. Man, Jr., and Walter M. Hall, the former of whom is one of the contestants in the night invitation doubles tennis tournament which is being conducted by the Plainfield Country Club, were among the thirty-two tennis players drawn yesterday for the Edgemere Club tournament which is scheduled to start today. Man is carded to oppose Allan K. Behr.

R. H. Baggs, also well known locally as a tennis player, is scheduled to compete against W. Rasenbaum. Cedric Major is one of the contestants and is entered as competitor against Charles Chambers.

BASEBALL

Denison, the 1915 pennant winner in the Western Association, is again showing the way in that organization.

The Texas League teams are staging a corking good race, with Waco, Houston and Fort Worth packed in together at the top.

Forty-two games postponed on account of bad weather gives an idea of what "Old Probs" has handed to the Central League so far this season.

Recent Western League averages show "Hank" Butcher, of Denver, the leading batman, and Marty O'Toole, of Omaha, leading the list of pitchers.

Poor attendance at the home grounds caused the Burlington Club to toss up the sponge and forfeit its Central Association franchise.

The Kansas City Blues are showing surprising strength this season, putting up a hot fight every day in an effort to cop the American Association flag.

The Binghamton, New York State League champions, seem to be all set to repeat this season. The "Bingoes" are now in front and traveling at a fast clip.

Harry Walter, who is pastiming with the Los Angeles, Pacific Coast team this season, is showing the big league stuff that made him famous.

It looks to be all Nashville and New Orleans in the Southern League this year. Chattanooga has been coming forward of late, but the Volunteers and Pelicans seem to have the class.

Pitcher Tom Rogers, of the Nashville, Southern League team, equalled the world's record held by Cy Young and Addie Joss when he pitched a no-hit, no-run, no-men-reach-first-base game against Chattanooga.

The Augusta team, which finished at the top in the first half of the South Atlantic League season, is making a strong bid for second half honors. Unless the Georgians are stopped pretty soon there will be no post-season series in the Sally circuit.

Without the services of dependable heavers, "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity has had to jump in and pitch overtime in order to keep his Butte team up in the Northwestern League race.

Mont eal has made a rapid climb in the International League race. Buffalo, Providence and Baltimore, the top-liners, will have to keep their weather eye peeled on the Royals.

Worcester and Springfield are putting up a hot battle for the Eastern League batting honors. An odd feature of Springfield's recent work was topping the league in batting while running last in fielding.

When Jerry Eddinger, the veteran Three-I leaguer, reached his fiftieth birthday a few days ago, he made his last decision in the league by calling himself out for good. It is said that Jerry retires with a considerable bankroll, accumulated as a minor league umpire.

NETHERWOOD ALMOST CINCHES LEAGUE FLAG

East Enders Can Be "Headed" But Only by Superhuman Effort.

With but six more games to be played, the Netherwood City League baseball team looks like the pennant winner for this year. The team has enjoyed a most successful season and has had few mishaps or misfortunes to mar its trip to the flag.

While it is not impossible for the East End team to be headed, it is highly improbable that any other City League team will take the lead away from the present holders of first place. The pitching staff of the team has been the main reason why the club has been so successful, although the hitting ability of the team in general has had a lot to do with the excellent showing made during the year. According to semi-official information, Russ Stewart has twirled ten or eleven victorious games for the Netherwoods and has failed in only one attempt. The pitching of Lou Slocum was good at times, although Lou was worked but seldom, owing to the fact that his arm has not been in the best of condition. The East End infield has been a veritable "stone-wall," through which very few hits have been able to pass. The outer garden material has shown up exceptionally well and has figured in the batting fests.

That the team cannot be beaten out for first place honors is not a fact. Netherwood has not, as yet, actually won the title, but the team that is able to annex the honors must do more than the unexpected. The Tabs and, possibly, the Hopes, can overtake and pass the Netherwoods, but not one fan in ten believes that either team will do that feat.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Recreation.

Recreation is essential to good health. The object of recreation is to give our tired and hard worked minds and bodies, as the case may be, a much needed rest and to give the unused side of our physical or mental makeup a chance for exercise and development.

The person who makes his living by the use of his mental faculties should seek recreation on the golf links, tennis courts, in the automobile, the garden or lawn. He should try hard to forget his regular work. The mental worker needs physical diversion.

But the laboring man who spends all his energies at hard physical labor needs mental diversion. And the laboring man, as well as the mental worker, needs fresh air and plenty of it.

Ask the Lehigh Dealer

Before you do any building or remodeling, see the Lehigh Dealer. You'll find him the progressive dealer in your community, who can give you practical advice and tell you which materials are best suited for your purpose.

Ask him why he sells Lehigh, the National Cement. He will tell you because he knows it to be absolutely dependable. It's only logical that he selects his other materials with the same care and judgment.

Ask him some of the ways you can use concrete to advantage. Right now there are probably half a dozen repairs and real improvements to your property that you could best build of concrete.

Concrete is the fire and weather resisting material for practically every kind of construction. Its uses include houses, garages, factories, barns, dairies, elevators, silos, porches, steps, foundations, troughs, feeding floors, fence posts, sidewalks, streets, curbs, roads, bridges, piers, culverts, cisterns, ice houses, and a hundred others. It is the material for you.

Remember the name LEHIGH; go to the Lehigh dealer. Buy Lehigh, the National Cement; the cement for all concrete work; the dependable cement; the kind that will give you lasting satisfaction.

GREENBROOK RISES FIVE FEET IN HOUR; LOCAL STREETS FLOODED BY HEAVIEST RAINFALL SINCE 1897

PAPER MILL WASHED AWAY AT SCOTCH PLAINS—THAT SECTION HIT HARDEST WHEN RUSHING WATERS COME.

MAYOR AND COUNCILMEN VIEW THE DAMAGE

Emerson Avenue More Than Three Feet Under Water—Residents at Third and Richmond to Hold Indignation Meeting—Ten Valuable Cows Washed Away.

Plainfield and its environs were swept yesterday afternoon and last night by the most severe rain storm that the city has known since 1897. Within forty-eight hours ending last night the total rainfall here was 3.26. Many believed that it was a new record, but the weather department this morning announced that on this date in 1897 almost twice as much rain fell in less than two days. Then the fall began at 5:30 a. m. on July 27. It rained all day and night and until 11:45 on the evening of July 28, and the total fall was 6:24 inches.

While many local streets were flooded, especially in the East End section, no loss of life or even injury was reported, although there was much loss of property. Last night it was feared that ten thoroughbred cows belonging to the Woodbrook Farms had been drowned in a pasture near West End avenue. They were confined in a small lot and when Green brook rose its rushing waters carried them downstream. Searchers with lanterns found the cows late last night, however, and not one was missing.

Local streets that were partly under water were West Front, Emerson avenue, Leland avenue, Berckman street, Richmond street, Watchung avenue, East Seventh, George street, Sumner avenue and many others. For several blocks along Emerson avenue the water stood three feet deep last night. On Harrison avenue in North Plainfield pedestrians were conveyed across in boats until the waters went down.

All cellars in the vicinity of Third and Richmond streets were flooded, some of the contents being washed out and onto the streets, and a call has gone out there for an indignation meeting, which will be held sometime before the next Council meeting. A committee will be named to protest to the Council.

Mayor Calkins, accompanied by Councilmen Booth, Hylan and Sminck and by Street Commissioner Gavett, made a complete tour of the city this morning for the purpose of investigation. They found that the waters came from Green brook, which drains the Washington valley, and that precipitation in that valley caused the flood here. The officials went to Scotch Plains and viewed the heavy damage done there. They found Green brook out of bounds, but Blue brook, which drains the section toward Summit, was not much above normal. Heavy logs floating above a dam at Scotch Plains had not been washed over.

A report on the damage done, with some kind of a recommendation for the future, will be made and submitted to the Council at the next meeting.

Several homes were reported struck by lightning but when the owners were called they denied this.

A two-hour delay was occasioned at Murray Hill, where the railroad tracks on the D., L. and W. road were washed out. A repair gang had to be summoned in order to get the road in condition for the express to go through and carry the passengers to their respective stations.

The Passaic Valley was three feet under water from the overflow of the Passaic River. Sterling was practically inundated and communication was made by boats for a time. The corn fields at Watchung suffered greatly, being washed out and causing great damage. The grain and hay was carried in quantities by the torrents of water.

Scotch Plains Hard Hit.

Althought lightning did not strike anywhere in Scotch Plains, Green brook broke its banks and flooded the whole village, doing thousands of dollars in damage. Rising five feet in less than an hour, the brook became a torrent shortly after midnight and swept down the mountains, cutting a path between forty and fifty feet wide. Taking everything in its path, the flood deposited rocks weighing hundreds of pounds, trees, stumps and the greater part of Seeyl's paper mill several miles down stream.

As the water began receding this morning a Daily Press reporter, who was on the ground, was able to get an excellent idea of the havoc wrought by the flood. The paper mill, which lies between Scotch Plains and Westfield, is practically a total wreck and each eddy of the waters that reach to the second story of the man building carries away masses of timber and paper. Tons of coal that were stored alongside the brook for use at the mill were swept hundreds of feet down the stream, and the Valley road is washed out its entire length. In some places the solid bedded rock of the road has been carried away to a depth of fifteen and twenty feet.

Vandals were early at work on the wrecked paper mill and a number were caught in the act of carrying paper, timber and coal away in wagon loads. Gage Walker, the owner of the plant, now has men at work guarding the premises and trying to save what they can. Men have been at work the greater part of the day collecting debris from along the banks of the brook, in some cases taking rolls of paper from front porches of houses fifty feet away from the book in ordinary times.

A small dam is said to have broken near Mountainside, but the flood of water that swept down the brook in a crest five and six feet high came through the "notch" from Washington Valley. In its course it broke away bridges and isolated numbers of families. The Valley road has been closed to traffic and will not be passable for months.

Westfield also was in the full path of the storm. The church spire of the Presbyterian church was shattered by a bolt of lightning early in the storm and the residence of Thomas Doud on Harrison avenue was also struck.

HEALTH VIOLATOR FINED.

J. H. Clauss, a grocer of 666 West Third street, was fined $5 in police court this morning for allowing a boy to throw garbage at the city dump on Arlington avenue. The judge has had at least one health case in court from West Third street for the past two weeks and he says that in another couple of weeks he may have that thoroughfare cleaned up.

Insure Against Disappointment, Give Standing Order Now for the Plainfield Daily Press

Owing to the shortage of news print paper throughout the United States, the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS will become non-returnable after July 31st. This means that no unsold copies of the DAILY PRESS will be accepted from newsdealers. Naturally newsdealers will order only sufficient copies of the DAILY PRESS to supply REGULAR CUSTOMERS.

If you have been in the habit of buying your copy of the Daily Press from a newsboy or newsdealer, or have been buying a copy three or four times a week, let us urge you to GIVE A STANDING ORDER NOW to have a copy of the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS delivered to your home or laid aside each night. By so doing you will make sure of securing the PRESS when you wish it.

Newspapers throughout the country have been putting this same rule into effect for months, but we have held off taking action hoping that conditions would improve. Such has not been the case, however. Not only has the price of news stock been advanced, but the paper mills are sending out notices to the effect that the supply may have to be curtailed at any time by the cutting in half of orders received from newspapers. We are therefore taking the above mentioned step in order to conserve our supplies.

U. S. PROTEST TO ENGLAND SENT

Demands a Specific Guarantee as to Effect of Blacklist on Firms Here.

APPROVED BY WILSON

Last night it was immediately put into code and sent to Ambassador Page at London for presentation to the Foreign Office.

The protest to Britain is divided into two parts. In the first part the United States is said on good authority to insist on specific guarantees as to the effect of the blacklist on American firms. In the second part the whole question of the principle of such a boycott is entered into, the United States opposing the contention of England that the latter country has a right to impose it. The specific guarantees, it is said, are of immediate demand, while the contention of the Government is to be a matter of diplomatic exchange.

DECISION RESTS WITH THE PEOPLE

Wm. Newcorn Says That Endorsement of Candidates Follows Primaries.

FREE CHOICE POSSIBLE

G. O. P. County Chairman Says There Will Be No Deviation From This Unwritten Law If He Is Able to Prevent it.

William Newcorn, of this city, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, to whom Richard Boardman, as a candidate for Congressional honors, addressed an open leter in which he suggested that the "organization" call off its workers and make it a free-for-all contest at the coming primaries, has replied to the prospective candidate as follows:

"My dear Mr. Boardman: I am in receipt of your letter of the 21st inst., and have carefully noted contents.

"The object of the present primary law is to afford an opportunity to every American citizen of our State, who is anxious to enter public life, to do so by filing his petition with the necessary signatures and go before the voters upon such platform as he might select and the final out come rests upon the decision of the voters of the voting district.

"It has been a rule in Union county since the enactment of the present primary law, for the County Republican or City Republican Committee as an organization, to refrain from taking sides by the endorsment of any particular candidate and the actual work of these committees always began after the choice had been announced by co-operating for the election of the candidates so selected.

"There has been no deviation, to my knowledge, from this unwritten law in our county, and there will be none as far as I am able to prevent it, but the fact that a man is a member of a committee should not deprive him of his right as an individual and citizen to do all that he possibly can to favor the selection of such candidates as in his judgment would be for the best interest of the party and the public at large.

"The aspiration for public office is a laudible one, and as long as a campaign is conducted on a high plane, clean and vigorous, issues not personalities, there can be no bitter spirit engendered, and in the final analysis an interest has been created in the party of workers which will redound to the benefit of the party on election day.

"I trust that I have made my views perfectly plain on the subject matter of your communication. In view of the fact that you furnished the papers with a copy of your communication, I am furnishing them with a copy of my reply.

"WILLIAM NEWCORN,
"Chairman Union County Republican Committee."

ACKERMAN FOR FRELINGHUYSEN

Declines to Enter Contest and Endorses Somerset County Candidate.

FAVORS PARTY UNITY

Former State Senator Discusses Issues of Approaching Campaign and Tells Why G. O. P. Should Succeed in November.

Former State Senator Ernest R Ackerman, whose name has been mention as a possible candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, came out today in favor of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, and endorses his candidacy in an authorized interview.

When Mr. Ackerman was asked if he was a candidate, the former Senator replied, saying that he felt that it was always a duty and pleasure to serve the people, and that no one should refuse at this particular time to make some sacrifice for the country, especially in view of the sacrifice and service now being rendered by the militiamen of the country who have gone to the Mexican frontier. The Senator thought that it was not at all becoming for a citizen to put his personal interest ahead of service to the country. At this time, however, he did not feel that he was called upon to enter the Senatorial contest because of the very excellent candidates now before the Republican voters for consideration and decision at the primary next September, and therefore Mr. Ackerman did not think it would be wise to become a candidate and thus complicate matters.

The object of all good Republicans should be to create party unity as a basis for success at the polls next November, and for that reason Mr. Ackerman is willing to subordinate the consideration of his Senatorial candidacy and to do all in his power to achieve a Republican victory.

When Mr. Ackerman was questioned as to what he thought would be the serious and decisive issues of the campaign, he said the most searching and far-reaching problem to be faced by this country in the next four years is the maintenance of the high economic level now enjoyed by the people. "The United States," said Mr. Ackerman, "stands out in marked contrast to the rest of the world. The possession of the rich markets of the United States has ben the ambition of foreign merchants, manufacturers and importers for generations. Because of the increasing poverty in European countries as a result of the war the markets of the United States are more desirable than ever and therefore extra efforts will be made to control them. It is therefore evident that the tariff will be a most important subject for the consideration of Congress during the next four years, and we must elect men to office who are willing to face the facts and not indulge in experiments and in theories.

"It is very essential that our export trade should be increased with South American countries, and that we should cultivate mutually advantageous trade relationship with them and also strive to have more social intercourse with the people of the southern countries. If we can demonstrate to them that the interests of the countries of the American Continents are interdependent and not hostile, a great deal of good will have been accomplished to secure fruitful results.

"Another question demands prompt action, and that is national preparedness, spiritually, industrially and physically. It is evident that the United States cannot endure on its past record. The present world situation presents clear proof that a nation to remain independent must be able to defend itself from aggression, and it is therefore a matter of self-preservation for us to possess a large body of citizens familiar with modern methods of war, men and women skilled in the latest scientific devices for field and for the hospital. Other nations are equpped in this respect. Why should not the United States be on an even footing so that it may protect its homes and its standards of living?

"In my opinion the Republicans possess a candidate for United States Senator who is fully equipped along these lines, one who would make an ideal representative for the State of New Jersey on the floor of the United States Senate, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen is a man trained and schooled in large business enterprises, who has by his own matchless ability built one of the biggest business enterprises in his line with wonderful success to himself and to those who are associated with him. Mr. Frelinghuyen has been in public life for a long time, for six years he was a member of the New Jersey Senate and served as its president. He has been president of the State Board of Agriculture, and is at the present time president of the State Board of Education, and all those who come in contact with him promptly recognize Mr. Frelinghuysen as a man naturally born to handle large affairs, and it is readily conceded that he has made a great success of every positon that he has been fortunate

HARD WEEK'S SCHEDULE NEARS CONCLUSION; SOLDIERS STILL HAMPERED BY RAINY WEATHER

THIRD BATTALION INDULGED IN FIELD MANOEUVRE LAST NIGHT, RETURNING AFTER EIGHT HOURS' WORK.

SHARK SCARE PUTS BAN ON OCEAN BATHING

Governor Fielder and His Guests Will Review Troops Tomorrow—Dental Corps to Be Formed With L. Thomas Asche, of Newark, in Charge.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 27.—With less than forty-eight hours left for their work in the school of the soldier, the men of the Second Regiment and Company K, of Plainfield, this morning tackled with a fresh vim the program of drills in advance guard and patrolling work where they left off yesterday afternoon. Two companies of the First battalion are on the rifle range all day.

The four companies comprising the Third battalion, which hail from New Brunswick, Somerville, Freehold and Trenton, returned to camp late last night, after a field manoeuvre and they reported a strenuous eight hours of work. Shortly before they left the hardest rain storm that has descended upon this section of the country this season turned all the country into a slippery sea of mud, and the men had a pretty wet time of it before they returned after dark. They originally planned to stay all night in shelter tents, which little more than covered them, and would have had nothing between them and the ground except the blankets in which they were rolled, so the plans were changed for a shorter hike. Supply wagons carried a plentiful supply of food, and the company cooks furnished a fine supper, so in spite of the wet all were cheerful upon their return.

Late this afternoon the Second battalion is to leave camp and if the weather permits will remain out all night. While it is realized by the officers that in actual service conditions the weather could not be taken into consideration, there is no desire on their part to send the men home on Saturday with cases of pneumonia.

New Jerseys medical division has never had any dental corp, and a suggestion came to Adjutant General Sadler yesterday that one be formed for service at the border. He took the matter up with Surgeon General William Gray Schauffler, and as a result it is expected that within a few days a full complement of dental surgeons will be on the border. The regular army regulations call for one man for each one thousand enlisted men, which would entitle New Jersey to four such officers, with a rank of first lieutenant. Colonel Schauffler immediately got in touch with L. Thomas Asche, a Newark dentist, who has expressed a desire to enlist for the work, and he said that he would be ready to leave for the border in a few days. Lieutenant Asche will be sworn in at once. He has served three years as a member of Troop A. In order to get the other three dentists Colonel Schauffler wired to General Hine, with a request that he find if possible three men now at the front who are dentists in the ranks, and advise whether they would like the commissions in the new department. Pending these advices ,no effort is being made to get more dentists to enlist from New Jersey. New Jersey is one of the first states to form this branch of the medical corp.

The shark scare has reached Sea Girt. Reports that man-eaters have been captured at nearby points, and the fact that two of the privates say they saw one of the big fish while in bathing yesterday prompted Colonel Reading to forbid any more ocean bathing. As shower baths have been installed all through the camp, and the men are compelled to use them daily, the boys are able to be comfortable.

Governor Fielder's review tomorrow afternoon will be the last military work except for the breaking of camp. The lines will be eased up a bit tomorrow night, and there will be several initiations of rookies and other horse play.

THIRD LOCAL PARALYSIS VICTIM DIED TODAY

Eight Year Old Ida Pinn Succumbs to Dread Disease—Burial This Morning.

Ida Pinn, the eight year old daughter of Frank W. Pinn, of 681 West Third street, who has been suffering from infantile paralysis since Tuesday, died this morning at 6:30. The disease was of the cerebral type, involving the facial and throat muscles, and one arm was also paralyzed. The child was buried in the Middlesex county cemetery today, service being held at the grave.

Notices are being served on all families in the neighborhood to keep the children at home and these quarantine restrictions are to be strictly enforced, the police court being resorted to if necessary. Similar notices are being served on all householders where there are any children from out of town. The terms of the notices hold good in each case for fourteen days.

Funeral services over the body of Henry Lutz, who died at Washington, D. C., were held this morning from the home of Mrs. Katherine Lynch, on West Fourth street. Services were held from St. Mary's church, where requiem mass was said by the Rev. Father Hennessy. Many beautiful floral tributes were sent from friends in Washington and in Plainfield, and the church services were attended by a large number of relatives and friends. The pall bearers were: Timothy J. Meaney, Thomas Dumphy, Edward Duffy, Thomas Comerford, James T. Lynch and Michael D. O'Keeffe. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

TROOPERS BURNED FIGHTING BLAZE

Megrew and Updike Have Lively Experience Extinguishing Fire in Tent.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Arizona, July 24.—The troop has had an exciting experience in each of the last two days. Today it was a fire about 8 p. m. Trooper George Megrew brought in the major's gasoline lamp to the quartermaster's tent to be put in order. Frank Updike had an open lantern on his knee, Sergeant Roy Cox was partly asleep on his cot and Trooper Ralli was playing his mandolin in a corner. The lamp and lantern came together, a burst of flame resulted and the clothes of Megrew and Updike as well as one of the cots caught afire. Outside of the whole tent appeared aflame. Cox threw a blanket about Updike's legs as both made for the door, and others beat the flames out upon Megrew's clothing. Men rushed for water and blankets and in five minutes all was over. Updike's arms were rather painfully burned, and Megrew's hand slightly.

Saturday night it was sandstorm. In great suddenness it came in a waving wind, blowing the men, shaking the tents and carrying away the cook tent altogether. Hardly able to see and burning with the beating sand the men stumbled about tightening the guys. Then came the rain, a torrent, and the wind dropped.

Trooper Schultz was almost seriously injured today when a horse kicked him. He stumbled when approaching with brush and curry comb, and fell. The startled horse threw out his heels and caught him twice upon the back as he arose. Schultz was carried to the sick bay very badly bruised but fortunate in that his head escaped by a couple of inches.

Last night Troop A visited Troop D and Second Lieutenant George Wilkinson of A, acted as leader for a double quartet. Wonderful to relate, the singers really could warble. Troop A responded with a quartet made up of former glee club men of Princeton, Yale and Harvard.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood

SEND YOUR CONTRIBUTION TO DAILY PRESS FOR REV. J. MADISON HARE'S MILITIA FUND

Word was received at the office of the Daily Press a short time ago that the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, but now chaplain of the Fourth Regiment, N. J. N. G., on the Mexican border, that he has started to raise a fund for the purpose of building a structure to be used as a reading and writing room for the New Jersey militia. The work is nothing new, for Mr. Hare, in his four years as pastor of the local church, was always engaged in some such activity. This time it is different, however, because it will be no easy matter to raise the $250 that he thinks is necessary from along the border.

Wanting to do all it can to help along an idea that is without a doubt a good one, and thinking that the people of Scotch Plains and Fanwood would be only too glad to help M. Hare gain the end that he has set out for, The Press will receive contributions for a fund to help build the structure. It does not necessarily mean that the whole amount has to be raised here, although that would not be impossible, but a fund that would help considerably could be raised without any trouble.

It is not the idea to have a few do all the contributing, but every one is urged to do a little, even five cents will help, in the fund that will be sent to the pastor that has become endeared to the many local people during his residence here.

Read over the section of a letter on another part of this page and then send your contribution to the "Suburban Editor, The Daily Press, Plainfield, N. J." The list of contributors will be printed in the suburban column each night and the whole will be forwarded to Mr. Hare.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCOUTS AT CAMP GREENWOOD

Scotch Plains Boy Scouts are expected to return home tomorrow or Saturday from their annual two weeks' camping trip to Greenwood Lake. The camp this year has been under the active supervision of Ivan P. Flood, State secretary of Baptist Young People's work, and who has spoken here on numerous occasions, and has enjoyed one of the most successful seasons. All the boys have been taught swimming and other Boy Scout rudiments, and not an accident has happened to mar the boys' outing. The cost for each boy has been about $6 per week, which has been enough to cover expenses.

MARTINE AVENUE MAY BECOME STATE ROAD

With the announcement that a committee appointed by Governor Fielder is working on the plan of taking over the main roads of the State, it is again a possibility that Martine avenue may become one of those highways. The commission has held hearings in various parts of the State and will shortly make a report to the Governor. It is a part of the plan to expend $8,000,000 on the roads of New Jersey to put them back in shape.

Martine avenue is the direct thoroughfare between Scotch Plains and Fanwood, and the travel is so great that it is a heavy tax on the two local towns to keep it in repair. The matter has already been called to the attention of the proper authorities by the local street committee, and at the time it was said that nothing could be done this year because all the money for roads had been expended, but the new moves by the committee may change matters.

ANNOUNCE GIFT OF LAND TO EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Announcement was made yesterday by the Rev. Oscar S. Michael, of the Episcopal church, of a gift to the church by the J. M. Bell estate of a strip of land adjoining the church building on Martine avenue, measuring 75x150 feet. The plot was given to be used as a site on which to build a rectory.

The gift will help materially in getting a rectory and parish house for which all the societies and organizations of the church are now working. A fund has already been started and is growing all the time, and it is now expected that in another year or two the $10,000 needed will have been raised.

REV. J. M. HARE RAISING FUND

Wants $250 to Build Structure for State Militia on the Border.

LOCAL BOYS ALL WELL

Allenhurst Woman Would Adopt Maurice Hall After Seeing Picture in Newspaper—Letter Sent to Colonel Fisher.

Even though he is away from Scotch Plains and so cannot work on the "Community Picnic" or Parish House, the Rev. J. Madison Hare has started a movement that will be of benefit to many militia soldiers along the border, and can be helped greatly in his work. Having a chance during his round of work as chaplain and captain of the Fourth Regiment, N. G. N. J., Mr. Hare has seen the necessity of the men to have some place where they can write letters home or read in leisure hours.

He says if folks at home want to do a really valuable service for the 950 enlisted men of the Fourth Regiment, they can contribute $250 or present the regiment with a 20x40 tent to be used as a reading room and writing room for the men. The money will pay for the erection of a wooden building for the purpose. Something of that kind is badly needed, as there is now no place suitable within the lines of the regiment.

The regiment will pay for the furnishing and lighting of tent or building in return for the privileges of using it occasionally for an officers' school when the enlisted men are at work. Such a place in camp during the Spanish war proved of the utmost service to the Hudson county men.

Maurice Hall, of South avenue, is the envy of nearly the entire Seventh Regiment, N. Y. N. G., of which he is a member. "Maury" found a letter in his mail the other day from a woman in Allenhurst telling him she wanted to adopt him and be his godmother.

It seems when the regiment was leaving for the border Hall was standing on the rear platform of the train and was in a picture that was taken and later appeared in a New York paper. The woman cut the picture out and putting a cross under his picture to distinguish him from the rest she mailed the letter to Colonel Fiske of the Seventh, and he in turn passed it on to Hall. Maurice says he may take a risk and answer her letter.

Just at present he is driving an army truck and so having it slighly better than the rest, but so far he has not had any illness at all. "Maury" served nine months in the regular army a year ago "for the fun of it," and is more accustomed to it than the guardsmen.

Elbert Morely, who is a member of the Twenty-third Regiment, N. Y. N. G., is getting along all right on the border, but he says the bugs make it unpleasant at night and the sun is almost unbearable in the day time.

As a member of the New York Signal Corps Frank Carter, of North avenue, is kept just as busy as the rest of the local boys on the border, but reports he is having good health. Frank says he would rather have real action than just patrolling the border.

BIDS OPENED FOR SCHOOL ADDITION

Contracts to Be Awarded for An Eight-Room Building on August 4.

Having had the plans approved by the State Board of Education, the Fanwood Township Board of Education is now ready to start on the actual work of putting an eight-room addition on School No. 1, and to that end has asked for bids on the work. They may be presented either for the entire contract or may be for the building, with the heating and ventilating system separate.

The plans for the new structure, which will be of two stories and of brick, were drawn by W. F. Brower, an architect of East Orange, and may be obtained by prospective bidders from either Mr. Brower or Clerk Thomas Nichols, on the deposit of $10 as a bond for their safe return.

A meeting of the Board of Education will be held in School No. 1 on August 4 for the purpose of receiving and opening bids. The board reserves the right to reject all proposals.

"COMMUNITY PICNIC" POSTPONED FOR THIS YEAR

There will be no "Community Picnic" this year. The fact became known last night after a Daily Press reporter talked with John Z. Hatfield, who has been in active charge of arrangements for the affair since the Rev. J. Madison Hare's departure for the front.

There are two reasons, Mr. Hatfield says, for deciding not to have the picnic. The fear of an epidemic of infantile paralysis is one of the greatest drawbacks and then, too, with Mr. Hare on the Mexican frontier it is doubtful if the picnic could be made a success.

FANWOOD'S FIRST "COPPER" A HERO

Decked in a General's Uniform, Fred Hocke Reigned in 1902.

Fanwood's first minion of the law was a Dutchman by the name of Eric Hocke, who patrolled the wilds of the borough about 1902. After John Miller and Charles Gaffeny, who were watchmen for several private families, were found asleep one night in the railroad station, Hocke, who by trade was a tailor, was appointed marshal by the Council.

The first night Fred started on his tour of duty he was decked out in a uniform of his own pattern and make, one that was partly that of a German general and partly a king's, for design. A German helmet crowned his sorrel topped head and two army six-shooters from either hip while a huge sword was his immediate weapon of defence.

Not long after Hocke became the Fanwood polic force chickens began to mysteriously disappear from various hen coops and Hocke was told to get busy and catch the thief. A few nights after as he strode down North avenue, wielding his sword, he spied the culprit climbing into the hen coop of Burton P. Hall. Walking up to the fellow Hocke told him to go home because he had no business being out at such an hour. A special session of the borough fathers wiped out the police force and there was not another one until John Logan was employed ten years ago.

Hocke went as he came and now his whereabouts are unknown. He came from Germany to Newark, went to Elizabeth and then drifted to Scotch Plains. After he left Fanwood he returned to Newark and there all trace of his has been lost.

A Trip Into Space.

"If you could ride from the earth to Alpha Centauri on a train going at the rate of a mile a minute you would reach your destination in 48,000,000 years," says John Brashear in the American Magazine. "At the rate sound travels if a song were to be sung on Alpha Centauri it would be 3,800,000 years before we could hear it. This neighbor of ours is 35,000,000,000,000 miles away. A spider's thread from a cocoon reaching to it would weigh 500 tons.

"Our earth in its revolutions on its own axis and its trip around the sun and outward into space makes a journey of 984,000,000 miles a year, but the old clock never varies. There is never a jar or tremor, and we are back again on the hundredth of a second. Do you know it would have cost me $1,500,000,000 if I had had to pay my way so far at the rate of 2 cents a mile during my journey of seventy-five years? To ride from the earth to Alpha Centauri would cost $700,000,000,000."

Sharks as Swimmers.

One ill service nature has done the shark—namely, that of placing a triangular fin on his back, which acts as a danger signal and gives warning of his approach. Happily the shark has not been gifted with sufficient sagacity to be aware of this peculiarity, for had he been so he would unquestionably abandon his habit of swimming close to the surface of the water and would in that case be enabled to approach his victim unobserved. The shark is a slow swimmer for his size and strength. Byron observes, "As darts the dolphin from the shark." But Byron was a poet and does not appear to have been a close observer of the habits of inhabitants of the water or he would have known that a shark would have no more chance of catching a dolphin than a sheep would of overhauling a hare.

Value of Good Manners.

Good manners, like the gold at the foundation of all money, are current the world over. Emerson noted this:

"Give a boy dress and accomplishments and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes wherever he goes. He has not the trouble to earn or own them; they solicit him to enter and possess."

"All your Greek," Chesterfield wrote to his son, "can never advance you from secretary to envoy or from envoy to ambassador, but your address, your air, your manner, if good, may."

"The difference between a well bred and ill bred man is this," Samuel Johnson said, "one immediately attracts your attention, the other your aversion. You love one until you find reason to hate him; you hate the other until you find reason to love him."

Civility, polished manners, mean much to a youth in his first position.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER CALLED A BILLIONAIRE.

John D. Rockefeller is America's first billionaire.

Cleveland, trying to collect taxes on his $300,000,000 holdings there, has compiled figures showing the Standard Oil man, seventy-seven a few days ago, is worth over $1,000,000,000.

The balance sheet shows the Rockefeller income to be so great that its owner, despite his benefactions, cannot give away as much as pours in.

Standard Oil holdings represent more than half the gigantic fortune.

If Cleveland's figures are authentic John D. is not only the richest man in the United States, but probably in the world.

GIVES FREELY OF BLOOD TO SAVE LIFE OF STRANGER

Alabama Man Loses Quart to Help Poor, Friendless Boy.

"I'm a practical Christian and believe in deeds rather than words—that's how I came to do it," H. O. Rogers, thirty-five years old, a sawyer by trade, and weighing 240 pounds, said as he left the operating room in a Mobile (Ala.) hospital after giving a quart of his blood to save the life of Albert Mitchell, a youth without relatives, friendless and penniless, who was dying from pernicious anaemia.

A hurry call for volunteers was sent out by the surgeons. Mitchell's condition was desperate; without transfusion of fresh blood his case was pronounced hopeless. With the necessary supply he could be restored to sufficient strength to undergo an operation as a last resort.

A hundred willing responses were made in an hour to the call. Because of his sturdy physical condition Rogers was accepted. Two hours after the operation Mitchell revived and sat up. Rogers declared he desired no thanks.

"He was a human being and dying," he said. "It mattered not that I never saw him before. I've tried to be a Christian in deed more than by profession. This kind of thing is the real test. I'm a healthy chap with plenty of blood and some to spare. I couldn't bear to have that boy die if there was a chance.

"If I could save his life it would be a regular good Samaritan act such as the Bible teaches is the kind of Christianity to hang to, whether the fellow who does that kind of stunt occasionally takes a drink or gets mad and swears once in awhile for personal relief."

CONVICT LEFT A NOTE.

Wills His Skin to Cover Wife's Bible as He Escapes.

George E. Thompson, who escaped from the Camden (N. J.) jail with Wilson Ashbridge, after they had shot and killed Keeper Isaac Hibbs and wounded Jailer Ellis, left in his cell the following letter:

To Whom It May Concern:

Ashbridge has come to the conclusion that he doesn't want to stay here any longer, and, as I don't much care for the place myself, I have decided to go with him.

Now, I understand that in leaving this place in this manner I am "flirting with the undertaker." So I leave this note behind in case such is the case.

In the event of my being killed I make the following request: That my body be turned over to the University of Pennsylvania for dissecting purposes, with this stipulation—that a piece of skin be removed and tanned, of sufficient size to cover a small copy of the New Testament. Have same made up and presented to my lawyer, who will have instructions to present it to my wife, who, although a Manchu by birth and a Buddhist, is interested in the New Testament. Also my ring and pin shall be turned over to the same attorney to be presented to my wife.

GEORGE E. THOMPSON.

PAPERS GOING UP.

Cost of Print Paper Too High, Secretary Redfield Says;

"The one cent newspaper will be a thing of the past within a short time," predicted Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield. "Prices have increased all along the line on nearly all commodities, and within the last few months there has been a steady increase in the price of the materials entering into the making of news print paper and an increased demand.

"The indications are that early this fall when new contracts are made, or before, there will be further increases in news print paper prices, and publishers will be unable to get out one cent papers without a loss, and an increase in price will be imperative.

"From information which has reached me, I am of the opinion that advertising rates will have to be increased also, as it appears that the increased cost of paper cannot be made up alone by the increase in the price of the newspaper."

WROTE HE DIDN'T, BUT HE DID

Did What?—Raised His Boy to Be a Soldier.

He has raised his boy to be a soldier—if—

He is Alfred Bryan.

He wrote the song "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier."

Mr. Bryan has announced that his son Alfred is ready to join the army to defend the United States from any invasion.

"I have trained my son in a gym," explained the writer, "so he will not be a weakling, but will be able to take care of himself and protect his wife, but I have not given him this training so he will be able to knock down some other man and take his watch."

Youthful Housekeepers Like to Work in Such a Kitchen

Interest in cooking is increased; there is added pride in success for the future housewife when she can prepare her dishes in a kitchen equipped with a Cabinet Gas Range. There is added opportunity to put into practice the teachings of last season's cooking class or the directions of the cook book.

The dislike of kitchen because of the necessity of carrying coal or ashes, with the accompanying dust, and continual fire-tending to insure results, vanishes when the Cabinet Gas Range is installed.

And a Gas Water Heater is another incentive to the average girl to become a practical housekeeper because of the quick, convenient way of supplying abundant hot water for all purposes.

A small payment down and the balance on small monthly payments makes it easy to possess these important kitchen needs. Terms as follows:

Cabinet Gas Ranges—$2.00 down—$1.50 monthly.

Gas Water Heaters—$2.00 down—$1.00 monthly.

Another kitchen essential is the gas iron, with its lessening of work—its saving of time and money. Price $3.50—50 cents on delivery, balance 50 cents monthly.

TARVIA TO BE SPREAD ON PORTION OF AVENUE

It was stated this morning by a borough official that only part of North avenue between Washington and Madison avenues will be treated with Tarvia this year. The section of the thoroughfare which will not be touched is the stretch south of the trolley tracks along which the sewer pipe has been laid. This work will be held over for a year to allow the ground to settle.

Miss Edith Bayles, of Oyster Bay, is spending the week in the borough, the guest of Miss Ethel Lewis, of North avenue.

Mrs. Emmett Dice, of North avenue, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Edick, at Manasquan.

Mrs. E. R. Brown and children have gone to Toms River where they will spend the remainder of this month and August.

Elwood Gary, who submitted to an operation for water on the knee last Saturday, is now able to be about in a wheel chair.

George W. Churchill, of Washington avenue, who has been quite ill, is reported as being well along the road to recovery.

MOTORCYCLE THIEF FOILED.

Thieves broke into the barn of Mrs. Cornelia Van Benschoten yesterday morning with the intention of stealing a motorcycle belonging to Mrs. Van Benschoten's son. The motorcycle, however, was fortunately fastened with lock and chain, and before the thieves could break the fastening they were frightened away by members of the family, who had been awakened by the barking of their dog.

NO CHANCE FOR GIANTS.

Francis Teeling and Edward Hannon, popular local baseball players, witnessed the game between the Giants and the Reds at the Polo Grounds yesterday. When asked whether in their opinion the Giants had a chance to win the pennant with their new players both young men voiced a positive "no."

PLANS WESTERN TRIP.

Abram Hebard, an enthusiastic automobilist, is planning an automobile trip to Chicago next month.

John Cannon, of Glen Gardner, was the recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ayers.

John McMahon was a visitor in Trenton yesterday.

SEWERS WORK WELL.

That the various storm sewerage systems have been laid in a proper manner was attested by the way the water has been taken care of during the past two storms.

Charles Doyle, of Front street, will spend the coming week at the seashore.

Mrs. Charles Dodwell, of Jackson avenue, who has been ill, has improved sufficiently to be able to leave her bed.

Earl Rogers, of First street, has taken a position at Saurer's.

Miss Dorothy Cortwright, who has been visiting Mrs. J. R. Hamley, of Washington avenue, has returned to her home at Summit.

TEA FOR MRS. BURNS.

Mrs. John G. Phillips, of Fourth street, gave a tea yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Wayne Burns. Among those present were: Mrs. J. T. Longbothum, Mrs. C. D. Gooch, Mrs. Theodore Vietor, Mrs. L. T. Churchill, Mrs. Edwin M. Dean, Mrs. L. W. Treichler, Mrs. Paul Smith and Miss Buckley.

GOING TO TOMS RIVER.

Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will join his wife and family at Toms River next week for the month of August. Quite a number of sharks have been seen in the river at this place and the genial minister is planning to reduce their number. He is looking up some shark hooks which were given to him a number of years ago, and is also getting his Co't automatic in shape for action. Mr. Brown says that he will go after the man-eaters in a row boat.

The Real Fun In Life.

The Chicago banker who had intimate personal association with James J. Hill related a little incident which throws light on the character of that great railroad man and builder of civilization, says the Albany Knickerbocker Press. Mr. Hill had commissioned the banker to perform a task which required a journey out of town. Here is the story:

"'How soon do you want this, Mr. Hill?' said I.

"'Right away.'

"I suppose he noticed a fleeting expression in my face, for he asked, 'What's the matter?'

"'Well,' said I, 'my family is across the lake, but that doesn't make any difference. I'll start in the morning and'—

"Mr. Hill held up his right hand and said: 'Hold on. Let me give you a fact born of long experience. All the real fun a fellow has in life is within the four walls that inclose his family. Go across the lake and see your family and start on my job when you get through with the home folks.'"

THE PITCHER'S BOX.

In Baseball's Early Days It Was Just a Line Twelve Feet Long.

Up to 1857, or for eighteen years after the first game of baseball was played, there was no limit to the number of innings, the first side scoring twenty-one runs, or "aces," as they were then called, being the winner. In 1857, however, the game was divided into nine innings. The pitcher had a line twelve feet long, kept behind it and could take a short run before his delivery, just the same as is permitted in cricket today.

In 1863 the old "line" for the pitcher to stand behind was done away with and the twirler limited to a "box" twelve feet long and four feet wide, but in this area he could roam at will and throw from whatever spot he pleased. A few years later the "box" was made six feet square, and in 1878 it was again reduced to four feet wide and six feet long. Ten years later it was made a foot longer and a foot wider and in 1887 cut down in length to five and one-half feet.

These "boxes" being always a source of much change and discussion, they were finally abolished altogether and a rubber slab 12 by 4 inches took their place, the pitcher being required to keep his back foot against the slab. This slab was enlarged to two feet by six inches in 1895 and has remained the same since.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

GROW, BUT DON'T SWELL.

Save Exertion of Boasting and Use It In Doing Your Tasks.

It is well for you to have confidence in your ability, but when it reaches the stage of "swell headedness" your value to yourself or to any one else begins to dwindle.

"Some men grow with responsibility; others merely swell." The man who swells has ceased to grow.

He has reached a place where he thinks he has all the knowledge he needs, and naturally all growth is retarded.

The best way—the most convincing way—to prove one's capability is by actions, not words.

The fellow who is continually bragging about what he can do is seldom of much account.

It is the man who does things in a quick, intelligent manner who wins.

Such a man will be found at the top because he deserves to be there.

All concerns want him, because he not only accomplishes much as the result of his concentrated endeavor, but his influence is good on the other employees.

Save the exertion it takes to tell what you can do and use it in performing your tasks. In this way you will get so much consideration eventually that you will not be tempted to brag.

The other fellow will do it for you.—Louisville Herald.

Cheeky John Forster.

In "William Harrison Ainsworth and His Friends" the author, S. M. Ellis, tells a quaint story of Ainsworth and his friend John Forster. Ainsworth had discovered a fine set of Hogarth's engravings which was held at £5, a sum which, he said, "I could not just then spare or at least did not think I ought to spare. I took John Forster down to see the Hogarths, whereupon he actually said that he would and must have them himself and as he had not £5 of loose money at that moment I should lend that sum to him. I pointed out the absurdity of the position—that I wanted the engravings for myself and could not afford to lay out the money; how, then, could I lend it—to him? It was of no use. He overruled me, had the £5 of me and bought the Hogarths I was longing for."

A Narrow Escape.

"I near had a scrap this morning," confided a slender young lawyer whom you wouldn't suspect of being belligerent.

"Who with?" we asked with no regard for grammar.

"Jimmie Squiggs. I guess I spoke hastily to him. Anyhow, he got the idea that I wanted to lick him."

"Well, what did he do?"

"He took it on the run. Honest, he did three blocks in about twelve seconds before I could say a word."

"That's going some for a big man like Squiggs."

"Ain't it? And it didn't do him a bit of good. I was half a block ahead of him every step of the way."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Strategy.

"Nora has just dropped another plate," said Mrs. Twobble.

"Well, my dear," replied Mr. Twobble, "suppose you go into the kitchen and drop a hint to the effect that she must not break any more china?"

"Evidently you don't know how to manage Nora. If I lead her to believe that we rather enjoy having her break a plate occasionally I think she will be more careful."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Exempt.

"We've been playing school, mamma," said little Ethel.

"Indeed?" replied her mother. "I hope you behaved nicely."

"Oh, I didn't have to behave!" said Ethel. "I was the teacher."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It Was Coming.

A City Within a City.

In Augsburg, Germany, there is a little city in the heart of the city shut in all by itself with two gates and named the "Fuggerei." It is so called because the 106 houses within it were built with money left by Fugger, the wealthy sixteenth century banker. When he died he directed that these houses should be built and then given to the poor aged families for 4 marks and 12 pfennigs rental a year, which is exactly one American dollar. They have four rooms and kitchen, with a little front garden and a little garden behind.

The Byplay Minstrels.

"Why, the United States is the richest country in the world, Mr. Tambo."

"No, it isn't. Ireland is the richest country in the world."

"And why is Ireland the richest country in the world, Mr. Tambo?"

"Because it's capital is always Dublin."—Philadelphia Ledger.

One Way to Cure a Headache.

One of the quickest known ways of dispelling a headache is to give some of the muscles—those of the legs, for instance—a little hard, sharp work to do. The reason is obvious. Muscular exertion flushes the parts engaged in it and so depletes the brain. When your head aches take a stiff walk or a short bicycle ride.—Exchange.

Rothberg's Are in Love

Head over heels in love my boy, and proud of it—but work is the Woman in the Case.

That's how we keep young in our styles and fresh in our viewpoints, for one never grows old making love.

A Rothberg Suit isn't the mechanical production of a sweatshop, but the object of our constant affections.

It isn't turned out by the Machinery of Hurry, but tailored with the pride of a personal and previous belonging.

And that's the explanation of Rothberg individuality and style—that's the origin of that distinctive lapel—that's the reason for that ornate touch at the cuff—that's where the lines and the fit and the finish and all the inimitable elegancies of Rothberg tailoring come from—from the fact that we are wedded to our business and not flirting with clothes whose origin is unknown.

Suits $12, $15, $18, $20 to $25.

Palm Beach and Kool Cloth Suits $8.50 up.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.—Adv.

DEATH COMES TO JOSEPH D. SPICER

Well Known Citizen Passes Away at His Home on W. Fifth Street.

WAS ILL THREE WEEKS

For Years He Was Active in Business Here—Prominent in Work of Seventh-Day Baptist Church—Leaves Widow and Two Children.

Joseph Denison Spicer, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known citizens, died at 7 o'clock this morning at his home, 125 West Fifth street, following an illness of three weeks' duration. Recently he made a trip to town and suffered intensely from the heat and this fact, coupled with complications, resulted in his death.

Mr. Spicer was born at Hopkinton, R. I., eighty-two years ago on May 28, 1834, his family having been prominent in that section for several generations. He came to Plainfield in 1865 and in the fall of that year, with his brother-in-law, Richard A. Ross, started at Madison avenue and West Third street, what was afterward one of the largest planing and scroll sawing mills in this section. Madison avenue was then known as Mechanic street, and the original building is still on the corner, having recently been occupied as a portion of the Spicer Manufacturing Company's factory. When Mr. Spicer first opened up his planing business a part of the building was used as a grist mill, and many of the older farmers in the suburbs of Plainfield brought their products to it.

In 1867 the mill was rented to Joseph A. Hubbard, E. W. Thall and Thomas A. Rogers, who continued the business, while Spicer & Ross removed to South Bound Brook. Mr. Ross is still located at the latter place. Another change brought Mr. Spicer back to Plainfield in 1870, when he formed a partnership with Joseph A. Hubbard, under the firm name of Spicer & Hubbard, which prospered and grew rapidly until March, 1900, when Mr. Hubbard withdrew. Mr. Spicer continued operating the mill alone for another month, when he met with an accident that almost cost him his life, and which forced him to retire from business. There are hundreds of Daily Press readers who will recall the mishap. Mr. Spicer, in company with John D. Runyon, then manager of the Boice, Runyon Company, was walking along a balcony built over the entrance way of the Park avenue lumber yard. The weight of the men caused the supports to give way and both were hurled to the ground, a distance of twenty feet. Mr. Runyon died from his injuries three days later, while Mr. Spicer was confined to his bed for several months. He finally recovered sufficiently to get about, but found it impossible to successfully manage his mill, and disposed of it in 1901. The building was rented for several years by the William H. Rogers Silver Plating Company, and later was purchased by the Spicer Manufacturing Company, the present owner, and since that time Mr. Spicer had led a retired life. He still lived in the house he built in 1872 at West Fifth street and Arlington avenue.

Although advanced in years, Mr. Spicer was a lover of outdoor life and thoroughly enjoyed a daily walk about town, the occasion affording him an opportunity to exchange the topics of the day with his old friends. He was a faithful member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and attended services there regularly up to the time of his illness. For thirty-five years he was the clerk of the church and acted as deacon, chorister and superintendent of the Sabbath school at various times. He was a director of the American Sabbath Tract Society and at one time its treasurer, and a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Board. In the early '70's he was a member of the Common Council. Mr. Spicer had no fraternal affiliations, but was deeply interested in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association and was a director in the local association for two years.

Beside his widow, Mr. Spicer is survived by one son and a daughter. The latter are Arthur J. Spicer and Mrs. Irving A. Hunting, both of this city. Two brothers also survive him, Dr. Albert H. Spicer, of Westerly, R. I., and George Spicer, of Ashaway, R. I. The latter is ninety-two years old. The funeral will be held at the late home on Sabbath afternoon, July 29, at 2:30 at his late home. The service will be in charge of Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and Rev. Theodore L. Gardiner. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Hugh V. Reilly, of Newark, business agent of the Internaional Association of Machinists, District 47, was in Plainfield yesterday looking after the interests of the union.

We have been adding equipment to our delivery service from time to time, but the public's patronage has been so increasingly generous that we have been hard put to it to make deliveries promptly. We have still further augmented our equipment and are now prepared to meet the most exacting requirements.

SEEK TREASURE AT SEA BOTTOM

Expedition Hunts $1,000,000 Cargo Lost Four Years Ago.

EXPERT DIVERS GOING DOWN

If First Proves Successful Other Sunken Craft Will Be Explored and Efforts to Find Valuables Will Be Made—New Company Financed by Wall Street Men.

A scientific treasure trove expedition backed by wealthy Wall street men, under command of a United States naval expert and advised by government submarine authorities, has reached its operating base. The first objective point of the expedition is the deep sea grave of the Ward liner Merida, which was rammed four years ago by the United Fruit steamship Admiral Farragut and went down fifty-five miles off the Cape Charles light, carrying to the bottom a cargo of silver bars and other treasure valued at more than $1,000,000.

The expedition includes the steamships Titiana, Fearless and F. H. Beckwith, a wrecking vessel, a yacht and a tug, and is under command of George D. Stillson, for many years in charge of government diving work and the man who raised the submarine F-4 in Honolulu harbor last year.

George D. Stillson, the commander of the expedition, is regarded by navy department experts as the greatest authority on deep sea apparatus in the United States. He left the government service last winter to superintend the submarine operations of a private film project to photograph under the sea a production of Jules Verne's story "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." He has with him on the treasure hunt the government divers and submarine experts who aided him in the film production and in the raising of the F-4 at Honolulu. These divers are equipped with new deep sea apparatus which does not require life lines or air hose connections, and which makes possible long hours of work at great depths.

Bullion Worth $600,000.

The first work of the treasure seekers will be to recover the silver bullion from the Merida. This part of the cargo alone is said to be valued at $600,000. The purser's safe, containing the money and valuables intrusted to him by the passengers, will be hauled to the surface as soon as practicable.

If this first undertaking is carried out as rapidly and successfully as its promoters believe possible the treasure seeking expedition will turn its attention to other ships wrecked on the Atlantic coast which are known to contain treasure. The scope of the work will be extended to the salvage of ships sunk by submarines during the European war. Government experts here estimate that more than 90 per cent of the ships sunk at sea are in water 300 feet or less in depth. Navy department authorities say that the Stillson expedition is equipped with apparatus that makes salvage at 300 feet entirely possible.

HOW FARMERS ARE AIDED BY RURAL CREDITS BILL.

Procedure Necessary to Secure a Loan From the Government.

Here is what a farmer who needs money can do under the rural credits bill, which was signed recently by the president:

First, he must join what is to be known as a National Farm Loan association, paying in $5 for one of its shares for each $100 he wishes to borrow. He has one vote a share, but not to exceed ten votes in all.

Next, he applies to the association for the loan, giving his personal note therefor, secured by a first mortgage on his farm. If the association approves the loan it turns the note mortgage to a land bank. The land bank sends the amount of the loan to the association, which hands the money to the farmer. No commission, brokerage or rakeoff is charged the borrower.

No single loan is to be for less than $100 or more than $10,000, nor for less than five years or more than forty years. The loan must not exceed 60 per cent, and preferably should not go beyond 50 per cent of the market value of the land covered by the mortgage.

The borrower pays semiannually the interest on his note, plus an instalment of the principal. He must not be charged over 6 per cent interest.

Each National Farm Loan association must have at least ten members, and it cannot begin business with less than $20,000 in loans applied for.

It is illegal, under severe penalties, for any officer, committeeman or member to accept any commission, fee or perquisite of any kind for granting any loan. The only paid officer is a secretary-treasurer.

Money can be borrowed by this system in order to pay for agricultural land, equipment, fertilizers, live stock, buildings and improvement or to discharge a prior mortgage.

The land bank may charge the borrowing farmer only 1 per cent more than the rate it gets on its bonds. This margin of one point is to cover expenses and profits.

The Army and Navy Department of the Young Men's Christian associations announces that $500,000 will be required for its work in the camps of the troops on the Mexican border. Forty buildings, at a cost of from $2,000 to $2,500 each, will be needed it was stated. Of the amount needed $111,500 has already been received. Plainfield citizens being among the first to contribute for a building for the local troops, the amout sent by Plainfielders being $2,000.

NEW JERSEY INFANTRY ORGANIZATIONS WILL BE GIVEN COMPLETE SCHEDULE OF TRAINING

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 22.—A complete schedule of training for the infantry organizations of the New Jersey National Guard, which covers the period from the present up to the last of October, was issued from the office of Adjutant-General Alexander P. Gray, Jr., at the direction of Brigadier-General Edwin W. Hine, commanding the New Jersey troops. The program covers very comprehensively the work which is to be done by the infantry men in company, battalion, regimental and brigade drills and is so designed that the infantry men are all to get systematic work along exactly the same lines, a system of uniformity having been one of the aims of General Hine in the preparation of the order.

In the eighty-two days covered by the order, from July 24 until October 30, the men are to put in a total of 245 hours at drill. Accompanying the order is a program for the company instructions which is to be followed as nearly as possible by the company commanders in carrying on the work. Also appended to the order sent out is a time allotment for the various movements to be carried out in the drilling.

It was announced at the headquarters of the brigade that the fact that the program covers work until the last of October cannot be taken as a definite indication of the length of the stay of the men on the border here, but has been gotten up to cover that period of time if the troops are required here that long. All orders concerning the drilling hours of the men issued prior to this last order are revoked and the schedule calls for five hours drill each day covered in the program, from 7 in the morning until 10:30 and from 1:30 until 3.

Company drills are to take place Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from July 24 to August 6; Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from August 7 to October 2, and Wednesdays and Saturdays from October 3 to 30.

The battalion formation drills are set for Mondays and Fridays from August 7 until October 2, and on Tuesdays from October 3 until October 30. The regimental formations will be drilled every Monday and Friday from October 3 until October 30, and the brigade manoeuvres, which will not embrace the cavalry and artillery organizations, will take place every Saturday from October 3 until October 30. There is no work planned for Sundays, Labor Day or the last day of each month.

Estimated in hours the work is arranged as follows:

For the period between July 24 and August 6 there will be eleven days with five hours drill each day, a total of fifty-five hours.

For the period between August 7 and October 2 there will be thirty drill days with five hours each day, or a total of 150 hours.

For the period between October 3 until October 30 there will be eight days of five hours drill or forty hours.

A total of 245 hours of drill work is therefore provided.

The time allotments have been separated into a systematic scheme of work which covers practically every branch of the infantrymen's work in the field and drill. The plan follows:

Close order drills, 50 hours; extended order work, including arm, whistle and flag signals and simple combat exercises in attack and defense, 55 hours; advance, rear guard and flank guards, 10 hours; outposts, 10 hours; simple field fortifications, 10 hours; target practice as ordered, 75 hours; preliminary instruction and sighting drills, 20 hours; pitching shelter tent camp, 5 hours; individual cooking, 2 hours; first aid, 5 hours; leading wagon transportation, 3 hours.

The orders had not been any more than run off the typewriters when an orderly from the office of General T. J. Davis, commanding the Arizona district, arrived at headquarters with a message from the general requesting that such an order be gotten up and a copy forwarded to him. New Jersey preparedness was to the fore again and the orderly went back with a copy of the order.

General Hine and Major Alexander P. Gray, Jr., the adjutant-general, worked hard on the compilation of the order and it has received favorable comment from regular army officers who have seen it. The program covers thoroughly all branches of the training of infantrymen and should give the men a good, thorough training or as good a one as can be secured in that length of time.

More than 100 men are to be returned from the First Regiment to their homes in Newark as a result of the physical examinations just concluded. The First Regiment was only superficially examined at Sea Girt, and the rigid tests under which they have been put here caused the rejection of a large number. Three officers are to be sent back. They are Captain Thomas Barton Freeman, Company B; Captain James F. Lambe, Company E, and Lieutenant William Kolb, Company K.

The office of the brigade-adjutant has been named the Arizona madhouse by the force of clerks who round out its roster of inmates. It is the busiest place in the State, without any question. It is so busy that when one walks up to the door to enter the office Lieutenant Harry V. D. Moore, one of General Hine's aides, and the chief clerk in the office, yells "shut the door" before it is more than on a crack. Records show that a 20-quart water cooler is refilled seventeen times a day and that the orders are received and dispatched quicker than they can be counted.

Lieutenant John V. Hinchcliffe, who is by title an aide to General Hine, has refused to go into the office. He took a chance today and he declares that before he had been inside twenty seconds he was taking orders from privates, telephoning and writing letters at one time and trying to comprehend the import of two conversations, all at once. Hinchcliffe has been found very proficient in attending to matters in the city of Douglas. He makes the Hotel Gadsden his headquarters while in town and dispatches all orders for supplies and looking toward the comfort of General Hine from there. The management of the hotel very considerately opened one of the private offices for his use and supplied him with special messenger to run his errands.

It all went well until last night, when by mistake, Lieutenant Harry V. D. Moore took Hinchcliffe's horse and rode it home. When Hinchcliffe started home he had difficulty in mounting his horse. He worked hard before an admiring gang of Western cowpunchers and horsemen. Then he swallowed his wrath with a gulp and landed in camp half an hour later with the horse dangling behind from the end of a halter. It was hard for him to convince Moore that the latter could possibly have made such a mistake, but he finally agreed that he had taken Hinchcliffe's pony. Fortunately Moore didn't meet any of his friends on the way home and he was busy today teaching his horse to understand English, so that a mistake so frought with opportunities for embarrassment cannot happen again.

All of the men got a half holiday this afternoon. Instead of twenty men being on duty at the adjutant's office the force was cut down to ten after what men were needed had been recalled from their holiday siestas.

The commanders here are taking no chances through insufficient guard. Strong guards are put around every organization and at headquarters every night. No one is permitted to enter camp without first being recognized or his purpose proves to be legitimate.

Last night a Mexican, while attempting to get through the lines was arrested by a guard within a few feet of the tent of General Hine. The Mexican said he was going to his home in Pirtleville from town and followed the wrong path. He was detained in the Fifth Regiment guardhouse until this morning and then given his liberty.

Heavy mails keep coming into the boys in the ranks. Wagonloads of letters and parcels from friends and relatives back home are brought here every day and distributed by regiments. The folks back home are remembering the soldiers in royal style and every parcel is seized eagerly and taken to quarters for opening. The home papers are taken and read as rapidly as they can be secured, the men scanning every column for news of friends and familiar things.

All of the outfits were out for drill this morning. The artillerymen held standing gun drills and the infantry put in their regular session of work. The cavalry held troop drills. Following the drills the property inspections were held.

OPEN LETTER

Newark, N. J., July 24th, 1916

UNDER DATE OF JUNE 24th certain labor unions, consisting of the United Brewery Workmen of America, the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, and the Executive Board of the Stationary Firemen, issued an open letter in which they explained the condition of the machinists' strike in certain breweries at that time, and endeavored to show the injustice done to the breweries affected by the strike. They stated very distinctly that the issue was one of jurisdiction and that no boycott or action against any plant is justified under such conditions, as it was well established that the American Federation of Labor has always held that no such action should be taken on account of jurisdictional disputes.

THE SAME DISPUTE arose between the engineers and machinists in Elizabeth, and was referred to the Union County Central Labor Union by the brewers, engineers and machinists, and at a meeting of this Central Labor Union on July 20th they passed a resolution that the machinists in Elizabeth breweries should return to work until the controversy has been settled by the National Unions, in accordance with which the machinists returned to work the next day and have so continued.

THE RULING of the Union County Central Labor Union thus confirms the position taken by the United Brewery Workmen of America, and it is manifestly unjust that any employer should be criticised as unfair when conforming to the ruling of the governing bodies of the union. The ruling of the Union County Central Labor Union is conclusive that our position is correct, that the question as to whether engineers or machinists should do certain work is one of jurisdiction for American Federation of Labor—and not for us—to pass upon.

FRANKLIN MURPHY FOR SENATOR

A Manufacturer to Represent A Manufacturing State In the United States Senate

To the Voters of New Jersey:

THERE is truth in the saying "Experience Is the Best Teacher." This has been proved times without number.

THERE is truth, also, in the saying that the best guide to the future is the experience of the past.

NEW JERSEY voters will elect a United States Senator this fall. The man chosen will represent the State for six years from next March 4—six momentous years, fraught with great possibilities for intelligent service.

MUCH of this service will be devoted to the readjustment of industrial and commercial conditions which is sure to follow the close of the European war. Prudence dictates that during such a period New Jersey should have

A Manufacturer to Represent a Manufacturing State in the United States Senate.

NO man whose name has been mentioned for this high office is so well qualified for the position as FRANKLIN MURPHY.

EXPERIENCE as a manufacturer has taught him how to meet and deal with large industrial and commercial problems.

EXPERIENCE as an employer has taught him what is necessary for the best interests of the employe and how to hold the respect and good will of his fellow workers. In this connection it might be said that in all his business career MR. MURPHY has never had any difficulty with his employes. An indication of the satisfactory relations which exist is shown in the fact that 110 of his older employes have been with him an average period of nineteen years each. Further evidence of the pleasant relations is found in the fact that the Murphy Company has had a profit-sharing system for employes since 1902; a pension system since 1908; contributes liberally to an employes' sick benefit fund and pays a death benefit of $250 to the family of any man who dies in its service.

EXPERIENCE gained as a legislator and as Governor of the State, coupled with his exceptionally wide acquaintance with public men of the nation, peculiarly equips FRANKLIN MURPHY to make an influential and useful member of the United States Senate.

A Vote for FRANKLIN MURPHY at the Republican Primaries, September 26, Means a Vote for

A Manufacturer to Represent A Manufacturing State In the United States Senate

THE END OF THE NATIONAL GUARD?

If those who are handling the affairs of the nation seek to provide for the future protection of the country they will do well to give their minds to a new plan of citizen soldiery, for it is not impossible that they are witnesses now to the end of the State militia system. They cannot but hear the murmur of complaints that comes from Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and other border States where militiamen are mobilized, and they must know that once these men are relieved from national duty they will never be found in service again except in time of actual warfare. The lesson they are learning is being learned by other men, and most of the popularity of the State military guards will be lost before the Mexican muddle is finally settled.

Criticism of Wilson and of the War Department is hardly fair, for they are but carrying out the will of the people in an emergency. Our border must be policed if we are to prevent war with Mexico. Who was there to call for this duty but the business men, young and old, who had volunteered for service in State militia organizations? They made up the only body of trained, or semi-trained men in the country. They were subject to call, and when the need came they were forced to go. Mr. Wilson is but performing a duty as clear as their own.

However it is hardship. Most of those who were pressed into service left families, business, and many will return to find their savings swept away, their jobs gone and hope for the future destroyed. They will be forced to begin all over again at a late year in life. The guardsman cannot complain in the present emergency, however. He can only demand that his country shall not call for such sacrifices in the future.

Little hope is left that the militiamen will be home before the first of next year. This is admitted by those in charge of the War Department. Meanwhile wives and children are suffering; some from lack of love and some from hunger. There are hundreds of thousands of men who could do police duty on the border without any great personal sacrifices. The trouble is they were not ready in the moment of need.

• • • • • •

There are not many events in the government of a State important enough to provoke a special legislative session, but it seems that one is necessary in New Jersey this summer. Unless a state of war actually exists between the United States and Mexico the militiamen now serving on the border are not eligible to vote. Some States will hold that the state of war exists, but there is no possibility of prying such a decision from Attorney-General Westcott, of New Jersey. As a Wilson leader and a candidate with the implied indorsement and support of Wilson, he will be the last to admit war, even when it comes. The principal Wilson issue is that he has kept the country at peace during his administration and for Mr. Westcott to hold that war exists would be to campaign against his own leader and against himself. The only course open is for Governor Fielder to call a special session of the lawmakers that they may authorize New Jersey militiamen to cast their ballots by mail in the coming elections.

The selection of J. F. MacArt to take charge of the Y. M. C. A. building fund campaign in the fall is an excellent start in this work. Mr. MacArt proved an efficient director in the membership campaign, and he made many friends in Plainfield who will be glad to serve under him again. With "Mac" leading, there will be enthusiasm from the beginning.

Plainfield Theatre.

Heralded by more extensive advertising than has ever been devoted to a theatrical attraction visiting Plainfield, "The Birth of a Nation" will begin its three days' engagement at the Plainfield Theatre with performances at 2:15 and 8:15 today. The spectacle will remain the rest of this week with presentations twice daily at the same hours and the advance sale indicates six capacity audiences. The management of the Plainfield Theatre is anxious to impress upon local playgoers that the Griffith spectacle will be presented on the same scale of massiveness and grandeur that marked its record-smashing engagement in Plainfield last season. A symphony orchestra of twenty-five is carried by the Griffith touring organization, together with a carload of electrical and stage equipment. The playhouse has been completely renovated and redecorated and extensive alterations have been made to provide the Griffith projection experts with the facilities necessary for the proper staging of the spectacle. The company's elaborate projecting equipment will be housed in a large asbestos booth on the ground floor to permit a direct "throw" to the screen. The first half of the great picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil War, which came to a close at Appomattox just fifty years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's Theatre live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpeting regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heartache and pathos of the stricken South are shown.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Her.

Ah, how I loved her graceful lines;
She was a beauty, that I vow.
How for her my poor old heart pines,
My tale of grief you must allow.
Last summer I did spend with her,
I loved her with a passion mad;
In my spare hours I would not stir
Away from her; I had it bad.
She had me lashed right to the mast,
I'll tell you that is true, by heck.
The trouble was she was too fast,
And now she is a total wreck.

How I yearn for the days gone by,
The passing years cannot atone
I can't forget her, though I try—
That motor boat I used to own.

Uncle Abner

Hank Purdy has his boots half-soled with a beefsteak that his daughter cooked for him last week. She has been taking a correspondence school course in culinary art.

Hod Renfrew told his son, Willie, that he wanted him to grow up to be as good a man as his father is. Willie wil probably be able to do this without much effort.

Almost any feller can think up seventeen good excuses why he hasn't got time to beat a carpet.

The distance of years lends considerable enchantment to the old-fashioned cookin' after all.

In this world a feller, in order to git along has got to do something or somebody.

There ain't no feller who kin be more pleasanter or more solicitous about your health than the one who is about to ask you to endorse a note fer him.

Suspenders.

Another great national institution is threatened by the faddists who can never let well enough alone. Tailoring experts having been goaded into it by the scions of high society, who have frowned upon the suspender and say that within a very short time it will be obsolete.

This seems to be striking a blow at the very essence of freedom and liberty for which this great country is more or less noted throughout the world. By the aid of suspenders this country has accomplished a great deal. All the great buildings, all the immense bridges and all the public works have been erected by men who wore suspenders. Without the suspenders what could they have accomplished? Echo answers: "What?"

If those men had gone about holding their clothing on with one hand and with but one other hand with which to work, would this country be where it is today? Hardly.

Nothing gives a working man more confidence and more power to do great things than a good pair of suspenders. Suspenders have been the main support of this nation for many, many years. Most men have to work with both hands. How could the dauntless fireman have courage to run up a ladder and rescue the chee-ild from a burning building unless he wore reliable suspenders?

As usual the reformers offer no substitute. They do not suggest whether the coming race of men shall fasten their clothing on with nails, library paste or clasps. They simply seek to tear down a great national institution without putting anything in its place.

Ever Hear These?

"Honest, Grace, I never use a thing for my complexion. It is just natural."

"Mag, you are the only woman I ever loved."

"I will be ready in five minutes, Henry. Don't be impatient."

"My daughter has had three offers from opera companies, but she prefers to stay right here at home and help her mother with the housework."

"Oh, yes, Wilson has offered me one or two places, but I don't caro to get mixed up in politics."

"I enjoyed my visit here very much and I think you have the finest town in the country, and I'm just dying to locate here."

"I can smoke or not, just as I please. No effort at all."

"Just hate to have my picture in the paper."

"There isn't a man in the world I would marry."

- Proctor's Theatre -

In the gallery of characters contributed to the screen by William S. Hart, "The Apostle of Vengeance," appearing at Proctors' today, ranks as one of the most impressive. The burden he is called upon to bear is heavy for the reason of a story which calls for quick shifts from brotherly love to a hate and then back again; and it is exceedingly difficult to make this convincing before the camera. Nevertheless, Mr. Hart, through his magnetism, succeeds in holding the intense interest of the spectotor throughout. Taken from among the feudists, when a boy and reared in New England by a gentle aunt, who hoped by making him a clergyman, to keep his hands free of blood, Dave Hudson (William S. Hart) is startled one day to receive a letter from a younger brother telling him that his father has been killed, his mother and baby brother wounded in a feud battle. He goes home to preach the Gospel and seek peace, only to find himself drawn into the strife through circumstances which make the man in him override the preacher. But after he has triumphed in physical combat over a stalwart mountaineer, he finds himself confronted with another situation, in which nothing less than the taking of life seems adequate to the crime that has been committed. But this time he wins a greater victory than before in conquering himself and leaving vengeance to his God. Then comes the answer to his prayer for peace and his own happiness. The latest Keystone comedy is also shown today in addition to other interesting subjects. On Friday by special arrangement Virginia Pearson is seen in "The Good For Nothing Brat," and several comedy subjects are shown, while on Saturday Mabel Taliafero is starred in "The Snowbird," a romantic Metro offering, and Winifred Greenwood and Ed. Coxen appear in "The Profligate."

The Greatest Thing.

"What is the greatest thing in the world?" It was asked the scholar, and he gravely answered that learning is, for it comprehends all and promotes all. It was asked the artist, and he cried, "Art, for it combines matter and spirit, both at their best." The preacher solemnly declared, "Religion, because it is a light from heaven." The lawyer argued, "Justice, for it is the soul of peace and progress." "Money," said the banker; "it is the spring of all action." The young man full of hope and spirit cried, "Ambition." Out of his garnered wisdom the weary old toiler answered, "Content." The pair of lovers, hand in hand, lisped together, "Love." The mother with her baby at her breast smiled, "Sacrifice." The wild roisterer cried, "Pleasure." The wan invalid whispered, "Health." To a shambling, grinning fool was put the question. He simpered and said, "I don't know." And which, after all, is really the wisest of them all—from the scholar to the fool?—St. Joseph News Press.

MEDDLERS OUGHT TO BE ABLE TO SEE THAT SIGN

What Co. K. is Doing Besides Work

(By Staff Correspondend.)

Plainfield soldiers are today enjoying a basket of juicy peaches sent to camp by Marion Ackerman, of Crescent avenue. The gift was preceded by a letter to Private T. F. Harvey, and the boys had all cultivated appetites for the fruit when it arrived yesterday. Mr. Ackerman has taken a marked interest in the Queen City company, and the peaches, especially for the fact that they came from him, were greatly appreciated.

Privates Robert Lang and Charlie Van Benichoter have been appointed company barbers. Privates Millwater, Ellis, Weaver and Kiederling and Corp. McGolrick took a chance and are advertising the tonsorial parlors today. The hair cuts are the nearest things to the kind father used to turn out ever seen and the two barbers put enough flour on the victim's faces to cover up the hair they miss in the shaving operation. They're making themselves mighty useful, and providing they don't raise their prices (they've been doing practice work for nothing) they'll probably be kept busy.

Private Smith, the freshest rookie who ever came to Sea Girt, was initiated last night. Today he's as tame as the regimental cow. The initiation ceremonies consisted of routing him out of bed at 3 a.m., making him do some gymnastic stunts and then a ducking under the faucet.

Private Swabach has also been made a regular, via the initiation process. Other victims are being sought.

Musician Sharp has added a spotlight to his equipment for tormenting tent mates. His fellow soldiers had just about decided to throw him out for doing too much practice work on the bugle when he found the "spot," and every time an owl hooks or a frog croak at night he has to turn the light on to see what's under his bunk.

This one is contributed for the benefit of the clerks in the Plainfield postoffice: Company K and Sergeant Pearson, who "works at" letter carrying when he hasn't anything else to do, took a bath yesterday. Captain Peterson issued orders for a general turnout to the shower house and the sergeant had previously exhausted his supply of excuses, so he had to go along.

Private Meyers doesn't like cold water. At least that's the excuse he gave for not wanting to take a shower bath yesterday. It took ten soldiers to catch and hold him long enough to administer the water dose.

Lieutenant "Jim" Conklin took a night off last night and went to Asbury, where his wife is spending her vacation. Now the other fellows are wondering whether they can work the same excuse.

Private Charlie Schelien has been dubbed "Alkali Ike." He has been nursing a comedy toothache since arrival here and despite his threats to have it pulled he hasn't done anything about it yet. He's so close he wouldn't part with a molar.

Corporal Carman is organizing an Irish brigade. He's sore because no corned beef and cabbage has been served and threatens to get even. Among the recruits who have received commissions from him are "McCarthy" Clark, "Murphy" Ellis, "McCann" McGoldrick and "Scvhultse" Miller. Commander Carman has "Gilhooley" for his title. The only thing any of them would fight for is a square meal and Carman needs that most of any one in Sea Girt.

Musician Sharp's spotlight cast one unfortunate rookie into the arms of disgrace last night. The youth returned from Avon after taps and was trying to sneak into quarters between tents 4 and 5 when he tripped over a guy rope and sprawled out full length. The first to hear him was Sharp and he turned the spot on him just as Corporal McGoldrick rolled over.

Some more fun was had at the expense of Private Smith yesterday morning. Some of the men decided that the wind was blowing too strong for them while they were on the range and delegated Smith to get a "wind clock." Innocently the youth made application to Captain Peterson, who sent him to Lieutenant Conklin, who in turn sent him to Sergeant Apgar, who sent him to Sergeant Pearson, who sent him to Lieutenant Phillips, etc., until some one sent him to Lieutenant-Adjutant Littell. He's still looking for him. That is, he was when last seen.

Privates Schelien and Harvey claim that they saw a shark while in the ocean yesterday morning. Since then Colonel Redding has put a ban on ocean dips and these two soldiers are getting the blame for it all. They're now willing to admit the "shark" might have been a log, hoping by so doing that they will get the bathing privilege back and also get in the good graces of the rest of the camp.

Since Mess Sergeant Glover left camp Sergeant Pearson has been delegated to the mess tent. He's feeding the boys up well trying to make a "rep" for himself.

There are many sore shoulders in the "K" camp today. All day yesterday was spent on the range and it's no fun taking the "kicks" of the rifles for an hour or more at practice. The wind blew a gale across the range all day and the men had considerable trouble getting near to the bullseye.

Private Bowe was caught kidnaping a quart of milk belonging to Private Pearsall. Inasmuch as Pearsall comes from Westfield where they have real "couws" he decided that Bowe could have the quart after all. Now the other men are keeping an eagle eye out for Pearsall's bottle each day.

Private Walig has take up laundry work in camp. He's been designated as "One Lung," which is supposed to be the name of a Chinese "washee."

Corporal Clark has organized a "corn cob pipe brigade." Eight men have enlisted and they already have been threatened with expulsion from camp if they don't throw the incense burners away.

The first sergeant held the entire company at attention yesterday morning for five minutes in order to punish a couple of misguided rookies.

Privates Scowe and Kiederling indulged in a wrestling match on the camp street last night. They did a lot of fussing but little wrestling.

In a particularly desolate region of the country two travelers came on a tumbledown shack in the midst of filth and barrenness. Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Tale of What Hid in An Old Trunk.

Pewit Put the Chest on His Shoulders.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JACK and Evelyn kept still as mice while daddy told them: "Once upon a time a poor countryman whose name was Pewit lived with his wife in the same town he was born in. One day he was plowing with his two oxen in the fields when he suddenly heard some one calling his name. Looking all about, he saw nothing but a bird that kept calling 'Pewit! Pewit!'

"Now, this conceited bird was a real pewit itself and, like the cuckoo, always called out its own name. But the countryman thought it was mocking him. So he picked up a big stone and threw it at the bird. Of course the bird flew away, safe and sound. But the stone fell on the head of one of the oxen and killed it.

"'What can one do with an odd one?' thought Pewit as he looked at the ox that was left.

"So he killed the other ox, skinned them both and set out for the next town to sell the hides to the tanner for as much as he could get.

"He knocked at the tanner's door. But before the door was opened through a window he saw the tanner's daughter hiding a friend of hers in an old chest. She seemed to be very secret about it, as if she wished nobody to see her.

"After awhile she opened the door. 'What do you want?' she asked Pewit.

"He told her he wanted to sell his two hides and discovered the tanner was not at home and that nobody ever made bargains but himself. Pewit said he would sell cheap and would not mind giving his hides for the old chest over in the corner. He meant the one he had seen the young woman hiding her friend in.

"Of course the girl would not agree to this. But they talked about it so long that at last the tanner himself came in and asked what all the talk was about. So Pewit told him the whole story and asked whether he might not have the old chest for the two hides.

"'Of course you can!' he cried. Then he scolded his daughter for saying no to such a good bargain.

"So the countryman put the chest on his shoulder and, in spite of what the tanner's daughter said, loaded it into his cart. And off home he drove with it," daddy finished.

"Oh, daddy, please tell us who was in the trunk?" cried Evelyn, who had much more curiosity about things than Jack had. But daddy smiled and kissed her good night.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel's Absence Begins to Arouse Suspicions in Fairport.

"Gaylord there is something mysterious about Mrs. Gordon's absence." The doctor looked up politely from his paper, keeping the tail of his eye on the paragraph he was reading. "No one knew she was going and now Ralph's mother is here taking care of the house and not a word is said about why she is gone or anything."

"Let me see," began the doctor with an amused smile on his face. "Is this the young woman who is so opposed to gossip; who deplored the fact that small towns furnished nothing to occupy the mind except the affairs of the neighbors?"

"I suppose you think I furnish a notable example of what I deplored. I guess I do. At any rate I am very much interested in the outcome of this unsuitable marriage." Olive sat down on the arm of her husband's chair.

"What is there about the fact that Mrs. Gordon is gone and the young man's mother is here taking care of her son to make you worry about their prospects?" laughed her husband.

"Do not be absurd, Gaylord. You have seen Ethel Gordon and you know how unsuited she is to make any man happy." Olive ran her fingers through her husband's thinning hair.

"Fortunately, what would make one man miserable will make another happy. Probably young Gordon chose the kind of a woman that he liked and I see no cause to worry about their affairs, especially on a surmise. When they take you into their confidence pour out your sympathy if it is needed." The doctor pinched his wife's ear.

"I am going over to call on the mother anyway. It is a shame to have her first visit to Fairport under such conditions."

"Have them over to tea, why don't you? I like the young fellow immensely and if your gloomy forebodings are true the more festivities the better, I should say."

"Bright idea!" Olive patted her husband's head. "I'll go over today and invite them."

When Olive rang the bell at the Gordon's the mother appeared and invited her in. She was plump and cheery and the two were soon chatting comfortably together.

"I came for a surprise visit and was myself surprised. I had no idea that Ethel was away. When I found Ralph alone I decided to stay and keep house for him till she returned. It seems quite like old times to have him coming home to his meals. How soon our children grow away from us," she added, holding out her hand to little Marjory who was seriously regarding the smiling stranger from the safe distance of her mother's knee.

"You must get acquainted with Mrs. Gordon, dear, for we are going to ask her to come over to our house to dinner tomorrow night."

"How kind of you. Ralph has said much about the friendly hospitality of the Fairport people, and I was regretting that Ethel's absence was going to deprive me of the pleasure of meeting them." There was real happiness in Mrs. Gordon's tone.

"We are kind to ourselves. We like your son very much and when I like a young man I always want to know his mother. I shall ask a few of the choice Fairport people to meet you. We have a very enjoyable little circle here," said Olive as she rose to go. "Tell your son we shall have dinner at six."

FASHION FAVORS FANS AGAIN.

By Mary Glynn.

Though almost a forgotten item of the evening outfit for two or three seasons, the fan, it appears, would again come into its own. It is strange, too, that this should be the case, because surely, ther is no more fascinating accessory of the dainty woman's toilette than this. True, not every woman can use this charming article to graceful advantage, and unless one can, it is better to omit it from the program. How unmistakably fascinating is the coquette with piquant features who can artfully manipulate this dainty item? There is a world of fascination about it that invariably is irresistible. How many times and how often has this same article been the means of making or marring mighty romances? When considered from this point, it is surprising that so useful and adaptable an accessory would at any time lose its popularity. Owing to the revived interest shown in this detail of woman's dress, many of the most beautiful fans have been designed. Exquisite pearl and ivory handles afford the finishing touch to a huge ostrich feather fan, which is made either in palm-leaf effect or the conventional collapsible type. These are shown in the most exquisite colors, either in one of two tones, and vary in size. The very newest and smartest fans are very large.

WASHABLE SUMMER FROCKS.

Washable Silk in Attractive Stripes and Plain Colors—Pongee and Tussah Well Represented.

By Mary Glynn.

To know that one has among the effects of one's summer wardrobe at least three washable dresses assures one of much relief. Fortunately the designers have had foresight enough to provide for this opening, and the result is that numerous exceedingly attractive summer frocks may be had. Among those most popular are the washable silk dresses. These generally, are developed on rather simple lines, following the shirtwaist dress effect. Extremely interesting striped patterns are shown in two color effects. What is most evident in the way of novelty in these frocks, is the fact that the skirts are invariably pleated, either side or box. Often the entire skirt is made to show one color predominating, yet when a step is taken the pleats fan out and the contrasting shade is evident. This arrangement is introduced in the waist also and proves very smart. Invariably the collar is low and the sleeves long and neatly cuffed. Other pretty models are shown in figured or printed voile, and this being a softer material, requires the dainty cordings or a boned drop skirt to give it the required amount of snap. A dainty lace collar rolls back from the neck and forms a "V" in front. Buttons galore are clustered here and there to afford suitable trimming. The hats and shoes are selected carefully so that there is no possible chance of exhibiting inconsistent combinations.

"MADEMOISELLE'S" MIDSUMMER FOOTWEAR.

"Mademoiselle" does not attempt to go through a day without three or four changes in footwear. Her sport shoes she selects with an eye for beauty as well as utility, and the result is that she has a pair of white buckskin with green or rose blazed kid tips and trimming, and a pair of high laced boots for golf or the morning hike. One very attractive debutante is wearing a pair of high white buckskin boots with snake skin trimming and these are most attractive and unusual. For afternoon "Mademoiselle" wears either smart kid pumps in white, gray, navy blue, or black, or else very dainty high kid button boots in any of these shades. These go exceptionally well with afternoon frocks, and the range of colors make it possible to have the shoes appropriate in color and style. The evening slippers are also important. These may be either a low headed kid or satin pump, or one of the dainty styles where button straps are featured. In a word, if "Mademoiselle" wishes she may have a seperate pair of shoes with every costume in her wardrobe.

Easy Money.

"Mrs. Blossom is all smiles this morning."

"Yes. She is going downtown to spend a rain check."

"What is that?"

"One she got from Mr. Blossom by crying."—Baltimore Sun.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Inflammations.

Counterirritation of the surface of the body is often a valuable means of relieving internal inflammatory conditions and of checking beginning illnesses of the inflammatory type. In such affections as common colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, stomach and bowel troubles counterirritation relieves congestion and pain.

There are various ways of producing reddening of the skin (counterirritation). The mustard plaster is probably the most satisfactory means of producing quick counterirritation of a large surface.

At the beginning of all diseases of the chest or of an intestinal tract counterirritation is a valuable treatment in conjunction with free cathartics (a dose of castor oil) and rest in bed. These methods should be carried out while waiting for the arrival of the medical attendant. It is rarely a physician can reach a patient before some time may have elapsed, and during this interval home treatment is advisable to relieve distress and pain.

PERONNE LONG A STRONG CITADEL

Captured by Wellington in War a Century Ago.

CALLED "THE IMPREGNABLE"

Name Stands High Among Cities of Courage in Franco-German War, During Which It Withstood Destructive Bombardment For Twelve Days. Ninety-four Miles North of Paris.

Peronne, the first important objective of the French and English when the allies' "big push" was inaugurated, is described by the National Geographic society as follows:

The important railway center of Peronne, rich with historic associations of ancient and medieval France, was a town of less than 5,000 people at the outbreak of the war, and it had little industrial or commercial significance, but for nearly 300 years it bore an honored nom de guerre, La Pucelle (the impregnable), this distinction having been accorded it in 1536, when the courageous woman, Marie Foure, also known as Catherine de Poix, successfully defended it against the imperial forces of Charles V., commanded by the Count of Nassau.

The title "impregnable" was dropped by the city in 1815, however, for in that year it was captured by the Duke of Wellington. Its name stands high among the cities of courage in the Franco-German war, during which it withstood a destructive bombardment of twelve days and only capitulated because the civil population was being decimated by smallpox.

Had Famous Castle.

The French maintained Peronne as a small military stronghold until ten years ago, when its fortifications were razed, but up to the time of the onward sweep of the Germans toward Paris in the summer of 1914 the four towered castle was still standing, and visitors were shown the cell in which, in the tenth century, the unhappy French king, Charles the Simple, posthumous son of Louis the Stammerer, was starved to death. Charles was kept a prisoner here by the treacherous Herbert, Count of Vermandois, who had promised to aid the sovereign against Rudolph, duke of Burgundy.

Peronne was the scene of another act of treachery against a French ruler 500 years later, when the "bourgeois king," Louis XI., trusting to the diplomacy of gold, visited Charles the Bold. Two days after Louis' arrival in Peronne on a mission of conciliation there came the news of a supposed massacre of the bishop and ducal governor of Liege. The rumor was false, but Charles, suspecting Louis of double dealing, threw the king in prison and kept him in a cell until he consented to sign the "Treaty of Peronne," insuring all Flanders freedom from the jurisdiction of the parlement in Paris.

Derided Their King.

"This treaty was the most humiliating episode in Louis' life, for the people of Picardy taught their tame jays and magpies to cry 'Peronne' and 'Perette' in derision of the sovereign. Thoroughly mortified, Louis determined to find a scapegoat, and Cardinal Jean Balue was the unhappy victim.

"Balue fled and joined Harancourt, bishop of Verdun, in revolt. Both were captured and Balue was kept a prisoner for eleven years, while Harancourt was confined in an iron cage like a wild beast for thirteen years.

"The history of Peronne goes back to the days of the Frankish king, Clovis II., who owned a villa here and gave it to his mayor of the palace, Erchinoaldus, founder of the monastery of St. Fursy in the seventh century. It received its charter from the French crown in 1209.

"The town is situated on the Somme river, ninety-four miles by rail north of Paris, and thirty-five miles east of Amiens. It is twenty miles by rail east of Fricourt, one of the first villages taken by the British in the offensive that began July 1."

FULTON'S U BOAT WORKED.

Experiment of 100 Years Ago Startled France and England.

Robert Fulton experimented with an undersea boat more than 100 years ago. This passage from his diary appears in the biography of Fulton, written by Alice Cray Sutcliffe:

"Second Experiment.—On 24th of August, 1800, I plunged into the basin at Havre to the depth of fifteen feet, having with me two people and a lighted candle; we remained below the surface for the space of one hour without experiencing the slightest inconvenience."

Fulton tried to interest France in his invention, but without permanent success. Then he tried England, for whom he sunk a French vessel by torpedo. A storm of protest arose in England over the invention, for fear this new weapon of war might be used to destroy England's navy, so Fulton came to the United States.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

BARROW STATES HIS OPINION.

President Edward Barrow, of the International League, is by no means a "bashful" person when it comes to upholding the rights of the league of which he is the head. The Yankees are after Shocker, Miller and Aragon, all players that rightfully belong to the New York team, but all of whom were "farmed out" to International League teams. The Yankees have been hit unusually hard by "Dame Misfortune" and Bill Donovan is anxious to get back some of the talent that he allowed to go, when injuries to his regular players were not so numerous. Barrow has decided that the Yanks will have to do without the players in question. While the head of the International League is, perhaps, correct in his interpretation of the principle of the agreement, still many people fail to see where his circuit is going to profit by its stubborn attitude. The Yanks, or any other team for that matter, is not compelled to send their players to International League clubs and it is highly probable that many of the major league managers, upon reading of the stand taken by President Barrow in this matter, will decide that it would be better to send their second string men elsewhere. It is difficult to realize wherein the International League is going to profit by the stand taken by its president.

THE YANKS ARE HUMBLED.

The Chicago White Sox turned the tables on the Yanks on Tuesday. The New Yorkers arrived in the Windy City full of ambition but with a very battered array of talent. Each one of the stars of the club was on the injured list and the pitching problem was one of the most distressing any New York manager has faced in years. Ray Caldwell was picked to open up the series. Ray was there with the speed, but his sense of sight was sadly off form. The atmosphere may have affected his work. At any rate, he is rightfully charged up with the larger part of the blame for a 13 to 8 defeat. Still, although the Yanks were humbled, they were able to retain their strangle hold on first place. If Bill Donovan succeeds in piloting this team to a pennant, he, and not George Stallings, will be the "Miracle Man" of baseball.

• • • • • •

SPEAKING OF STALLINGS.

Reference to George Stallings reminds us that Uncle Wilbert Robinson, of the Brooklyn team, has taken exception to some of Stallings' recent remarks, regarding the condition and calibre of the Brooklyn team. Manager Robinson is of the opinion that Stallings has a "gall" to say the things that he is supposed to have said. And, at that, the Southern leader, did say some pertinent things, stating, or rather, writing—for the article appeared under Stallings' signature—that Ollie O'Mara was the one big hole in the Dodger defense. This attitude as shown by Stallings seems to follow along the lines adopted by the noisy bleacherites who have been continually "picking on" the blonde shortstop for some time. Ollie should be given an opportunity to make good, but he will never get along if the fans decide not to allow him to do so.

STILL IN THE GAME.

Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian swimmer, still seems to have plenty of speed left in his system. His latest stunt of lowering the 100 yard record Sunday afternoon makes that fact a certainty. Last winter he came East to compete in the New York Athletic Club pool. In this pool he lost many short distance races. Aquatic sport followers informed Duke that he was no longer a star and that he had better quit. But the Hawaiian was determined that he was far from "through" and his latest performance has proved his assertion.

THE BREWERS STILL AT IT.

There is one baseball team in this country that plays "up to form" regularly and without interruption. That team is the Milwaukee, American Association, club. The team is a losing aggregation and newspapers in Milwaukee get out extra editions whenever the team wins more than two games in a row. It isn't that the club lacks the fighting spirit. On the contrary, the players seem to be fighting all the time. If they would devote only one-half the time they use up in fighting to a little study of baseball tactics, they might land in the second division. They are last now and are liable to fall out of the league soon.

LONGWOOD TENNIS TOURNEY.

"Williams, Behr, T. R. Pell, George M. Church, William J. Clothier, Watson M. Washburn, Fred B. Alexander, Nathaniel W. Niles and Walter Merrill Hall are mentioned as the most prominent candidates for Eastern team positions. If Behr and Pell play they will probably be paired in the doubles, for they are by far the strongest combination. Church is playing with Willis E. Davis in doubles and that combination could be broken up for the time if Dean Mathey, Church's former partner, were available. Mathey, however, is in camp at Plattsburg and cannot get away for the tourney. Williams and Washburn played together last year and might be paired again, but they would probably not be as formidable as Pell and Behr. If Behr refuses to take part perhaps Church and Pell would get together. They are experienced doubles players, but have not played together to any extent."—Newark News.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

This interesting letter was received at the office this morning and fans and managers would do well to give it careful consideration. It was written by the energetic leader of "one of the Plainfield A. C. teams" and speaks for itself.

"Sporting Editor:

"I would like to inform the public and baseball managers that the Plainfield A. C. team that plays on Saturdays is not the same team that plays under the same title, on Sundays. The Sunday team is a faster and much better combination than the one that plays on Saturdays. The "Saturday" team has assumed the name 'Plainfield A. C.' in order that other managers might think that it was the 'regular' P. A. C. club. The Sunday team has been known as the Plainfield A. C. for the past three years.

"To decide which team is the better, the manager and players of the Sunday team are willing to play the Saturday team at any time and at any place. We only demand that the regular lineup of the Saturday team be presented when we meet them. We will present our regular lineup. Thanking you for giving your valued space to this communication, I am,

"Yours in sport,

"SAM SEMER."

Russ Stewart has been heralded as the best pitcher in the City League. Russ deserves all the commendation that he can get as he has worked faithfully and to good advantage for his Netherwood boss. When a pitcher hurls ten or eleven successful league games in a "weekly" circuit, he has ability. Fans should realize that Stewart's feat is one that demands attention and that has earned for the East End team a firm grasp on first place honors.

Those Hebrew lads must have been naturalized. Until yesterday the baseball team, of which Joe Friedman is the leading light, was known as the "Hebrew A. C.' Now the club is called the "American All Stars." Whether the fact that the members of the squad have all been advanced to stardom, necessitated the change, we no not know. But there is one thing certain, the name of "Cahill," who has been doing a little pitching for the club, is by no means that of a Hebrew. That name would look more at home on the roster of the Shamrock A. C. team.

Sunday may see "Tune" Kline's return to the fold as a pitcher. Kline is by no means a "has-been" and may prove quite puzzling to the Tab batters. At any rate, time will tell.

Claude Hand was absent from the lineup of the Farmer A. C. team on Saturday. The fans hope that Claude has not decided to quit the game. The Farmers need all the help they can get. And Claude was of some little assistance to the team. His place at second seems to have been taken by Burns, the speed king. Burns is all right, but there are other players on the team that are not by any means "perfect."

Jimmy McCarthy is still with the Tabs. With the Farmers or some other team that is not overstocked with material, Jimmy would undoubtedly be a "regular." As it is, the Tabs use him whenever they know that a hit is a scarcity. Frank Brennan is also one of the dependables when hits are few.

Henny Alberts is hitting every time he gets the chance these days. Four hits out of four trips to the pan is not a bad record. Ty Cobb please note.

"Box" Apgar is no longer with Dunellen. "Box" has gone to Pennsylvania to take a position with a firm there. He will be missed by the Dunellen squad, although Eddie Bergen, who has been playing in the vicinity of first base, can easily resume his place behind the bat.

They say that Mal Eason, an umpire in the National League, is having a most successful season. That may be the truth, but some one ought to inform the New York writers that "Ump" Coriell always has a "big" season.

Fans should not forget that we are anxious to get their opinions on the subject of "What is a local player?"

DUNELLEN HARBORS CREDITABLE TEAM

Tommy Apgar Has Band That Commands Respect of Rivals.

The Dunellen baseball team is considered by many to be one of the best outfits in the City League and, up until recently, was mentioned as a possible pennant winner. Only the fact that Netherwood has been going along at such a fast pace, has prevented the Apgar club from seriously considering pennant possibilities.

The Maurer Oval clan, formerly the Saurer team, has on it Warry McLaughlin, one of the best pitchers in this section of New Jersey. Warry has been the mainstay of the team and has contributed largely to its advance toward the top. Before he joined the squad, the lads were not the terrors that they are now. With Eddie Bergen behind the bat and with such aggressive stars as Lou Brown, Jack Wilson, Johnny and Lou Dixon, George Trust and Eddie Gunzelman, the club has been the one team that has, at all times, commanded respect of its rivals. That fact has been established time and again. The Tabs were practically pushed out of the pennant race by the Dunellen team, while Netherwood was barely able to annex a win the last time that team played on Maurer Oval. The change from the name "Clinton Avenue" to that of "Dunellen" seems to have inspired the boys with new life. Had that life or spirit been imbued in the team before the middle of the season, Dunellen and not Netherwood might have been the league leading aggregation.

ROYALS AND TAB TEAM PLANS BIG CAMPAIGN

Rumors Afloat That Both Teams Will Employ High-class Pitchers.

All is in readiness for the first game of the scheduled series between the Royal Giants and the Tabs. The game will be played on Avon Oval on Sunday and it is expected that a large gathering of fans will be on hand to witness the opening of operations.

The manager of the Royals is Pete Simmons and Pete is the authority for any "official" statements made regarding the team he will put on the field on Sunday. Any announcement that the Royals have signed up "Stringbean" Williams or "Dick" Redding for the game with the Tabs is unfounded, as Pete says that it is not his intention to "buy up" the talent that there is. "Senor" Maiden may do the pitching and then, again, he may not. Tommy Washington, a Newark lad, who was always a members of the Royals, will probably catch. But, outside of the annexation of Washington, it is not expected that any outsiders will be included in the Royal lineup when hostilities commence next Sunday.

There is a report in circulation among followers of the destinies of the Royals, that the Tabs are going to use the battery of Matty Sheridan and Art Pickering. The report is without foundation. Mickey McFadden and Teeling are good enough.

MILWAUKEE BREWER AGGREGATION LOSES

Jack Martin Figures in Western Downfall and in Uprising.

Jim Bluejacket, the former Brookfed hurler, who is now a member of the Milwaukee American Association baseball team, was given his first chance to pitch for that club yesterday. Jim was not much of a success, although he lost a closely contested attraction, by the score of 7 to 6. Jack Bentley opposed Jim on the mound and was reached for only six hits, two of which were made by Jack Martin, the pride of Plainfield.

Martin, while the cause of the Brewer downfall, was the real reason for the closeness of the tilt. When the Brewers were behind he cracked out a single that scored Beall, evening things up. On another occasion Beall's double and Martin's single registered a Brewer run. However, Jack's "boot" of a grounder hit by Bentley allowed the pitcher a life. And Kraft's error on Cashion, coupled with Altizer's hit ended the game, Bentley scoring.

Buttons.

The Elizabethan era gave vogue to the button and buttonhole, two inventions which may fairly be regarded as important, since they did much to revolutionize dress. The original button was wholly a product of needlework, which was soon improved by the use of a wooden mold. The brass button is said to have been introduced by a Birmingham merchant in 1680. It took 200 years to improve on the method of sewing the cloth upon the covered button. Then an ingenious Dane hit upon the idea of making the button in two parts and clamping them together with the cloth between.

An Emerald Vase.

A vase cut from a single emerald has been preserved in the cathedral in Genoa for 600 years. It is the largest gem of the kind in the world, its diameter being twelve and a half inches and its height five and three-quarter inches. Every precaution is taken to insure safe keeping. Several locks must be opened to reach it, and the key of each lock is in the possession of a different man.

PROVIDE MANAGEMENT AS WELL AS PROPERTY

Many an intelligent man makes a will and then congratulates himself upon having done his whole duty by his family. He has done well, to be sure, but not well enough. Multitudes of inexperienced beneficiaries under a will have been seriously burdened and handicapped by the sudden acquisition of property the care of which they do not understand. POZIERES IS NOW DEATH CENTER OF EUROPE; BRITISH CALLED UPON TO FACE VERDUN VETERANS THERE

CAPTURED HEIGHTS WITH STRONG FORTIFICATIONS GIVE GENERAL HAIG'S MEN A NEW ADVANTAGE OVER ENEMY.

NEW BATTLE BETWEEN DESROYERS REPORTED

British Ambassador Denies That It Was English Vessel That Violated U. S. Neutrality Off Virginia [illegible] Monday Morning—Russian Troops Take Offen[illegible] Fighting.

London, July 28.—Pozieres has succeeded Verdun as the center of death and destruction. With the English in possession of German-made fortifications there, and the full force of the Allied drive in effect the Kaiser is bringing up men and guns from every other line to reinforce his armies and make an attempt to win back ground taken inch by inch at bloody cost.

Until now British troops fighting to push through in the Pozieres sector have been thrusting uphill. Today they have the advantage of fighting from above on an enemy on lower ground. They have the added advantage of attacking an enemy unaided by natural cover, and now ousted from the permanent steel and concrete constructed trenches perfected in the long months of the deadlock in the line.

Foremost among the disadvantages of Gen. Haig's position was the fact that the Germans are making superhuman effort to stem any further break in his lines. Reserves have been stripped from all along the remainder of the German front, to be massed against the British or used in desperate counter-attack. Special despatches from Verdun say the German attack there has waned into a mere ordinary assault, instead of the holocaust of flame from artillery with which the French fortress has been deluged during the last six months, with practically no concerted infantry attacks.

Presumably the vast array of guns that formerly poured an unceasing hail of shells toward Verdun are now being set up to oppose the further British thrust toward Bapaume, while the reserves which enabled the Crown Prince to flood the ground before Verdun with serried German ranks have been hurriedly transported here.

Experts agree that the Germans will make desperate attempt in concerted counter attacks to win back the ground wrung—inch by inch almost—from his soldiers by the British. An advance very much farther along the road from Pozieres to Bapaume by the British would menace the German troops in the angle of the line from Thiepval southeast, possibly forcing a retirement there.

Quiet in Mesopotamia.

The following report on the Mesopotamia campaign was issued by the War Office today:

"The Mesopotamia situation is quiet and unchanged. Two of our gunboats were fired on from the bank of the Eupharates River. Our boats replied, inflicting casualties. A naval officer and five men were wounded.

Report Another Naval Fight.

Amsterdam, July 28.—A damaged German torpedo boat has put into the harbor of Zeebrugge. It is reported to have participated in another naval fight between British and German patrol vessels, but no details have been received.

Was Not a British Warship.

Washington, July 28.—The Navy Department has received no further information from the captain of the battleship Louisiana about the mysterious English cruiser which is reported to have violated neutrality off the Virginia Capes early Monday morning. So far as the State Department is concerned the incident is closed by the denial of the British Ambassador that the ship in question was a British man of war.

Russian Troops Help France.

Paris, July 28.—French war statement:

"Russian troops fighting with the Allies on the western front have taken the offensive. A statement issued by the War Office today says that the Russians raided German trenches in the Champagne district, capturing prisoners. The German Crown Prince renewed his efforts on the Verdun front last night, but failed to obtain any advantage. On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans attacked French positions but the attacks were repulsed.

JAPANESE "BILLY" SUNDAY TO SPEAK AT TENT MEETING

Rev. K. S. Hiraide, widely known as the Japanese "Billy" Sunday, will speak tomorrow night at the gospel tent of the Christian and Missionary Alliance located on Watchung avenue, between West Front and Pearl streets, where evangelistic services are being held every evening except Monday.

Mr. Hiraide, who is a forceful speaker, will give the thrilling story of his conversion. He is at present doing evangelistic work in this country, and has been attracting large audiences. He was very successful in his work at Ocean Grove last summer. The service tomorrow night will begin at 8 o'clock and the public is cordially invited.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 75 degrees; 11 a. m., 80 degrees; 1 p. m., 78 degrees.

CITIZENS COMPLAIN OVER RECKLESS AUTO DRIVING

Citizens of Watchung are incensed over what they term the reckless driving of North Plainfield's new auto apparatus through the village. It is claimed that several times yesterday this apparatus was driven through that section at a rate of speed which endangered the lives of pedestrians. At Texier's bridge, it is said, the apparatus made such a sharp swerve that people were obliged to take to a footpath along the wing wall to escape being hit and thrown into Stony brook.

The affair was given in honor of Miss Mobus, whose marriage to John Betzold, of Millington, will take place in the near future. Miss Mobus received a large number of gifts. During the evening there was a program of vocal and instrumental music and refreshments were served.

Insure Against Disappointment, Give Standing Order Now for the Plainfield Daily Press

Owing to the shortage of news print paper throughout the United States, the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS will become non-returnable after July 31st. This means that no unsold copies of the DAILY PRESS will be accepted from newsdealers. Naturally newsdealers will order only sufficient copies of the DAILY PRESS to supply REGULAR CUSTOMERS.

If you have been in the habit of buying your copy of the Daily Press from a newsboy or newsdealer, or have been buying a copy three or four times a week, let us urge you to GIVE A STANDING ORDER NOW to have a copy of the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS delivered to your home or laid aside each night. By so doing you will make sure of securing the PRESS when you wish it.

Newspapers throughout the country have been putting this same rule into effect for months, but we have held off taking action hoping that conditions would improve. Such has not been the case, however. Not only has the price of news stock been advanced, but the paper mills are sending out notices to the effect that the supply may have to be curtailed at any time by the cutting in half of orders received from newspapers. We are therefore taking the above mentioned step in order to conserve our supplies.

R. A. MEEKER ON ROAD BUILDING

Answers Questions of Chairman Herbert in a Brief Letter.

NEED HEAVIER ROADS

No Such Thing as a Permanent Paving, He Says, as the Heavy Traffic Soon Wears Away the Strongest Binding.

In answer to a series of questions sent out recently by John W. Herbert, chairman of the State Commission on Road Legislation, Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, State Highway Engineer, has written the following brief letter on road building in this State:

Mr. John W. Herbert, Chairman
Commission on Road Legislation,
15 Exchange Place,
Jersey City, N. J.

Dear Sir: In reply to your questions I would say that on contracts let under State supervision, for the improvement of roads, we are and have been getting full value for the money expended. We are making a better selection of materials and we are bringing the construction up to the proper standard. The great obstacle in reaching this goal is the increased cost of adequate construction and the desire of the local officials to please as many of their constituents as possible.

The present law limiting the weight to 800 pounds per inch in width of tire, is liberal, and we can build roads to carry this weight; the heavier burden falls upon the taxpayers when they are called upon to build bridges enough to carry the above weight.

We have not on our statute books those provisions which would enable us to compel construction and maintenance of such roads as we have and can build. The people at large have not been educated up to the $25,000.00 per mile road, and until they are we will continue to have

Federation of Men's Bible Clubs Holds Annual Meeting and Discusses Plans.

Officers were elected and plans for the coming year were discussed at the annual meeting of the Federation of Men's Bible Clubs associated with the churches of the city and borough held at the Y. M. C. A. last night. Suggestions for strengthening the adult Bible classes were made and George H. Batchelor and A. C. Estes were named as a committee to consider these suggestions and if necessary co-operate with the Union County Sunday School Association for the purpose of conducting a rally in this city.

The federation decided to co-operate with the Church Co-operative Association in whatever way it can for the advancement of its interests. These officers were chosen for the coming year: President, George H. Batchelor; vice-president, A. H. Nielson; secretary, Theodore G. Davis; treasurer, E. F. Dorman.

FEAR ATTEMPT TO RAM DEUTSCHLAND

Captain Has Not Yet Lost Hope of Safe Arrival of Bremen.

Baltimore, Md., July 28.—Watchers aboard the German submarine freighter Deutschland want to see the ships of England go.

They fear that a plan is afoot to have vessels in ballast in the harbor follow the Deutschland out to the Capes, and "accidentally" ram her. This would save the allied patrol a big task, and, as one of the Germans put it, the Britisher could say, "Oh, I beg pardon! I will pay you damages."

This fear is believed to be one of the compelling motives behind orders to delay the Deutschland's departure.

The Bremen, however, is a vital factor. Stories that she has been captured brought the comment from a Deutschland official today:

"Bah, she is not lost until three or four weeks." And, he added that the Deutschland's sister ship is too clever to fall into the meshes of the allied patrol.

ORGANIZE STATE FOR COL. COLGATE

Leading Republicans Meet in Newark to Plan His Campaign.

TO NAME COMMITTEE

South Jersey Wants a Man From North Part of State—Workers Enthusiastic—No Factional Opposition in Sight.

Newark, July 28.—A State-wide campaign in behalf of the candidacy of Senator Austen Colgate for the Republican nomination for Governor was formally launched this afternoon at a conference of the Colgate workers in the Robert Treat Hotel. While work for Colgate had been [illegible] on for a long time in different sections of the State no definite steps to form a State organization had been taken up to yesterday. It was decided to form a Colgate campaign committee in the State, with representatives from each of the counties, the members of the committee to be announced later.

Frank J. Bock, former postmaster of Newark, who has been managing the Colgate campaign in conjunction with the officers of the Essex County Republican Committee, presided at the conference. There were about one hundred present. Many speeches were made and much enthusiasm developed. A number of the speakers said that the strongest argument that could be used in behalf of Col. Colgate was that he was the man the party had the best chance to win with, as he had no factional opposi-

TUTTLE ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

Declares That He Will Seek Congressional Honors at Fall Primaries.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Sea Girt, July 28.—Former Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., told a representative of the Daily Press today that he will positively be a candidate for Congress in the Fifth district at the coming primaries. He said that he would issue a formal statement in a few days.

The fact that Mr. Tuttle will again

enter the political arena this fall insures a very lively campaign throughout the Fifth district. He has many friends who believe that he will not only be successful in the primaries, but at the November election. It has been recently rumored that Mr. Tuttle would seek to regain his seat in Congress, but not until today was an authoritative statement to that effect forthcoming from the Westfield man.

PHILIP MILLWATER NOT ILL WITH PARALYSIS

Philip Millwater, of 735 South avenue, a cook with Company K, was called home from Sea Girt last night, by a message stating that his child had infantile paralysis. However, it developed that the youngster had fallen down a flight of stairs about a week ago and, at the time had shown no visible effects of the fall.

Later, one of the child's arms grew stiff and it was deemed wise to call Dr. Peter B. Cregar. Dr. Cregar stated that the child did not have infantile paralysis and called in Dr. John H. Carmen, who verified Dr. Cregar's opinion.

WHY AUXILIARY REQUIRES $1,000

Volunteer Association is Pledged to Aid Soldiers and Their Families.

THE NEEDS ARE MANY

Guardsmen at the Front Are Supplied With Delicacies While Their Dependents at Home Are Given Assistance.

As all Plainfielders and North Plainfielders are no doubt aware, Mayor Leighton Calkins last week appointed an executive committee of 100 citizens, which was subdivided into various other committees, the whole to be known as the Volunteers' Auxiliary of Plainfield and North Plainfield, whose mission is to relieve, if necessary, any families of soldiers belonging to various local National Guard organizations now at the border and also to furnish various articles of food and clothing to the soldiers themselves.

To carry on this work, the Volunteers' Auxiliary, headed by George P. Mellick, its president, are now asking the citizens of this community to contribute in sums of $1, $2, $5 or $10, a total amount of $1,000, in order to meet the expenses the Volunteers' Auxiliary has obligated itself to for the next three months.

Any person who contributes becomes a member of the Volunteers' Auxiliary at once, his or her name is published in the daily newspapers, but the amount of the donation is not given. A penny is acknowledged in the same way and as thankfully as ten dollars.

It might be well at this time to tell patriotic Plainfielders why $1,000 is needed and how it is to be spent.

In the first place $100 a month is sent to Captain Borden, of Troop D at Douglas, Arizona, to enable him to sweeten up the men's mess with extra delicacies, fruits, etc.

In the field, soldiers have no chance of substitution or commutation of rations. They must eat what is given them. In every company or troop of

CONTEST WILL OF MRS. L. D. SHEAFE

Grandnieces Ignored by Aunt Will Try to Have Instrument Declared Void.

New York, July 28.—Charging that the will and codicil of Mrs. Lucy D. Sheaf, aunt of Edward S. Krans, of 920 Park avenue, Plainfield, on file for probate in the surrogate's court today, is not the last will and codicil of the deceased, steps were taken to have the instrument set aside and have the courts declare that the deceased died intestate so that the $40,000 estate of personal property left by Mrs. Sheafe will revert to the heirs who were ignored in the will.

The contestants declare that at the time of the alleged execution of the will and codicil the testatrix was not of sound mind and that its alleged execution was brought about by fraud and undue influence through the activities of one Marion Chitty, a beneficiary and others whose names are at the present time unknown to the contestants.

The action has been started by Flora March Turner, of Pana, Ill., and Louise March Allen, of Oconee, Ill., both grandnieces, through their attorney Charles L. Greenhall, of New York. They demand a trial under the new surrgates' jury law, which will probably be granted by the court.

Mrs. Sheafe died on May 25 last. In her will among other bequests is one of $5,000 to Edward S. Krans, a nephew, of Plainfield. Marion Chitty, described as friend and companion," is left $10,000, but in the codicil the bequest to Mr. Krans is revoked and one of $5,000 to Frederick W. Douglass, another nephew, is increased to $10,000. Mrs. Sheafe directed that any contestant of her will was to lose his or her bequest, but the surrogate has declared such provision void.

TAX COLLECTOR TOWNSEND RECEIVES MEXICAN MONEY

Tax Collector William R. Townsend is today exhibiting a specimen of Mexican money which he received in this morning's mail from Trooper John Caufield, stationed at Douglas, Ariz., with Troop D, of Plainfield. The bill is the size of our dollar bills and bears the numebr five in its upper corners. Across the face of the paper is written "Chiuahua." Mr. Townsend has not been able to ascertain the value of the money.

Beside the letter from "Trooper Jack," Mr. Townsend received letters from Trooper A. R. Fisk and Quartermaster-Sergeant Sherman B. Joost, also members of Troop D. All write that they are in the best of health and getting lots of hard work. Members of the entire troop are enjoying their experiences and are well satisfied with camp life.

COMPANIES OF 2D REGIMENT ENGAGE IN A SHAM BATTLE WHICH AWAKENS COUNTRYSIDE

FARMERS HAVE BUSY TIME DODGING UNEXPECTED MOVEMENTS OF NEW JERSEY GUARDSMEN IN MIMIC WARFARE.

TROOPS WILL BE REVIEWED THIS AFTERNOON

Orders Given for Regiment to Break Camp Tomorrow Morning and Complete Work on Rifle Range—Governor and Mrs. Fielder Guests of Honor at Ball at Spring Lake.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 28.—Farmers hereabouts have had a busy time of it this morning dodging unexpected movements by the men of the Second Regiment, encamped here for a few weeks' tour of duty, for a sham battle has been in progress which has awakened the countryside as it has not been awakened in some years. The defending force consisted of the First or Trenton Battalion, commanded by Major John A. McCollough, and the attacking command was made up of two companies from the Third Battalion and the four companies of the First, the whole being commanded by Colonel Horace M. Reading. The maneuvre was worked out by Lieutenant Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, who has been acting as tactical officer since camp opened.

The maneuvre began last night, when Major McCollough marched his men out of camp and had them spend the night in their little shelter tents, a few miles from the camp ground. This morning they were up bright and early and assumed a defensive position, digging trenches, and preparing to repulse the enemy. Colonel Reading formed the six attacking companies shortly after 7 o'clock, and went on a still hunt. As soon as the outposts of the defensive army saw the enemy, they started blazing away with blank ammunition and the hundreds of rounds used wakened up the countryside.

For nearly four hours the maneuvre continued, and it was a tired group of men that returned to eat dinner at noon. No other military duty will be prescribed until the review by the Governor late this afternoon.

Tomorrow morning will be spent in breaking camp and in finishing the work on the rifle range which has been put back by rain during the week. The camp will be completely cleaned up, and all tentage and other equipment will be taken back to the armories. It is planned to have the regiment leave Sea Girt at 11 o'clock, so that the supply company of the Third Regiment, which is expected here early will find nothing but the bare ground when they arrive. In order to have the Third Regiment get all of the practice work which has fallen to the men of the Second, the latter command will even fill up the holes which have been dug for the incinerators at the various company streets, and these will all have to be reconstructed.

Governor and Mrs. James F. Fielder last night were the guests of honor at a large ball given at the New Monmouth Hotel at Spring Lake. They were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Duggan, of Trenton, and the members of the staff, attired in their white uniforms, presented the guests. Colonel Frank M. Taylor, the Governor's personal aide, was in charge, assisted by Lieutenant Colonel William Gray Schauffler, surgeon general, Lieutenant Colonel William Libbey, Captain George Perkins and Captain Sackett M. Dickinson. Included among the visitors were pratically all the well known summer people from the upper New Jersey shore. Following the reception dancing was continued until an early hour this morning.

The Governor and members of his staff were up bright and early this morning, however, and took a horseback ride to get ready for the review this afternoon.

General Quincy O'M. Gilmore, for many years in command of the brigade of which the Second and Third Regiments formed a part, has been a visitor in camp for the last two days. General Gilmore, who formerly lived at Princeton, is now a resident of New York, and while here is the guest of Colonel Reading.

FINE ATTRACTIONS FOR COMING SEASON

Many Broadway Successes Will Be Presented at the Plainfield Theatre.

The Plainfield Theatre presented an attractive appearance to the crowds who witnessed "The Birth of a Nation" yesterday, the playhouse having been repainted from dressing-rooms to ceiling since its closing the latter part of June. Announcement was made last evening by Manager Shannon that when the new fall season opens an entire new set of scenery for the vaudeville attractions will be installed and the stage property will be added to with new furniture and carpets.

After the completion of the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," tomorrow night, the theatre will again be closed for a number of weeks during which time additional repairs will be made to the building. Among the attractions booked for the coming season are "Fair and Warmer," Selwyn's famous farce; "The Boomerang," David Belasco's; "Just for Tonight," new Selwyn hit; "Katinka," Arthur Hammerstein's musical hit; "Step This Way," with Lew Fields; "Very Good Eddie," the Casino success; "Coat Tales," with Tom Wise and Louise Dresser; "The Moral Code," new Cohan-Harris show; "Pom-Pom," with Mitzi Hajos; "Cheating Sheaters," with Marjorie Rambeau; the Dolly Sisters in "His Bridal Night;" "Upstairs and Down," New Morosco play; "The Flame," Richard Walton Tully's new play; "The Two Johns," soon to be seen on Broadway, and "Common Clay."

NO NEW PARALYSIS CASES, MILTON LEWIS IMPROVING

No new cases of infantile paralysis have developed in Plainfield since yesterday. Milton Lewis, the young son of Max Lewis, of West Third street, who was at one time in the city to develop the disease, is steadily improving and his complete recovery is looked for.

The Board of Health, however, is not relaxing its efforts and is bringing violators of the sanitary code into court every day. The quarantine is being kept up and will be until all danger is over.

HEALTH BOARD SAYS IT IS HELPLESS

Cannot Prevent Draining of Water From Tier's Pond.

In order that the public may have a clear understanding of the responsibility of the Board of Health in regard to the condition of Green brook and Tier's pond, the following statement was made this morning:

"Several complaints having been received by the Board of Health of late, the matter was investigated and the corporation counsel consulted. The water has drained off the pond, leaving the sediment exposed and killing some fish. As a result the odor was decidedly unpleasant and the residents in the vicinity put in a complaint in the hope that the Board of Health would be able to give them relief.

"The heavy rains of the past few days have changed the situation; the dead fish have been washed away and a quantity of water is flowing over the dam. However, when the rain subsides, the pond will undoubtedly be in the same condition as before, as it is the intention of the owner of the water rights to keep the gates open and allow the pond to dry. Any dead fish or decaying matter will be removed, but beyond this, there is no action the Board of Health can take. While the situation is unquestionably disagreeable to those who live in the vicinity, it is only temporary and is not dangerous to health.

FRANCIS X. MOORE.

Francis X. Moore, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Moore, of 817 West Sixth street, died yesterday. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, and interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Wescott, Munger and Sinclair held a consultation yesterday and now they think it possible that Norma Palcanis, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Palcanis, of Russell road, is not ill with infantile paralysis. The child is still able to move her limbs and indications are that she is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Todd, who have been spending the past month in the borough, have returned to Bellvale, N. Y., for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Wheeler, who have been making their home here for the past year, have returned to Castleton, N. Y., for the remainder of the summer.

Since the announcement in last night's Daily Press that a fund was to be started for the $200 that the Rev. J. Madison Hare is trying to raise to help the New Jersey troops on the border, the people of Fanwood and Scotch Plains seem to favor such a plan. Many other towns are doing the same thing and local residents do not want to be left behind. The list of contributors will be printed each night, and a steadily growing list is expected. Mr. Hare is heartily in favor of the plan and hopes there will be a generous response.

SEA GIRT MECCA FOR POLITICIANS

Office-seekers and Leaders Flock to the "Little White House."

SITUATION DISCUSSED

Colgate, Wittpenn and Frelinghuysen Among Those Present—Senator Martine Expected — Union County Well Represented.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 28.—Politicians from central New Jersey flocked to Sea Girt today on every train, and by autoomobile, to pay their respects to Governor Fielder on the third Governor's Day of the present summer. Incidentally an opportunity was afforded to gossip about politics and it is expected that by the time the men scatter to their homes late this afternoon, a good line will have been secured on the situation in Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Somerset and Union counties.

Two candidates for Governor were on hand with the early arrivals, and former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who is opposing Franklin Murphy for the United States Senatorship in the Republican ranks, accepted the Governor's invitation to be present. Then Senator James E. Martine sent word by a Union county friend that he would be here if his official duties at Washington would permit, and as he has been campaigning throughout the State, it is confidentally expected that the "Farmer Orator" will arrive some time during the afternoon. Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, whose name is frequently mentioned as that of a possible candidate for United States Senator, also hails from Mercer county, and was invited to be here today.

The two Gubernatorial candidates here were Colonel Austen Colgate, whose military duties as deputy adjutant-general have kept him in camp most of the time, and H. Otto Wittpenn, naval officer of the Port of New York, who is summering at Avon, and has not missed a Governor's Day this year.

In addition to the civilian visitors, Governor Fielder had the officers of the regiment as his luncheon guests, and while they were eating the regimental band furnished music.

From Union county a group of those who accepted the Governor's invitation and arrived early included Assemblyman William N. Runyon, Charles L. Morgan and Arthur N. Pierson, State Senator Carlton B. Fierce, County Tax Commissioner Lloyd Thompson and William A. Coddington, District Court Judge Abe J. David, former Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., and Arthur D. Tuttle, Dr. Frank Moore, head of the Rahway Reformatory; County Register Frank H. Smith, County Clerk Abram P. Morris, Sheriff George C. Otto, Joseph B. McDonough, of Linden; Dr. Stephen Jackson Keefe, O. L. Dosch, John H. Whelan, A. S. Crane and P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth, and John W. Clift, Assistant Secretary of the Senate, of Summit.

William L. Saunders, a member of Secretary Daniels' Naval Advisory Board, came down from North Plainfield, as did Conservation Commissioner Henry Crofut White, to represent Somerset and Middlesex county visitors included H. Brewster Willis, county superintendent of schools; James Neilson and J. Kearney Rice, of New Brunswick, and W. P. Runyon, of Perth Amboy. Sheriff Edward F. Boughton, County Clerk Bernard M. Gannon, Judge Peter F. Daly and Senator William E. Florance were also here from Middlesex.

CAPITAL STOCK OF P. S. C. INCREASED TO $50,000,000

The stockholders of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey at a meeting Wednesday in the Public Service Terminal, Newark, authorized an increase in the capital stock of the corporation, as recommendded by the directors, from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

The directors recommended the stock increase at their monthly meeting June 20, and at that time placed the Public Service stock on an eight per cent. basis by declaring a quarterly dividend of two per cent. The stock was previously on a seven per cent. basis. It was announced at that time that no definite plans had been made for issuing the new stock and none will be offered in the immediate future.

Obituary Gems.

When John Sherman of New Haven, preacher, mathematician, almanac maker and father of twenty-six children, heard of the death of his good friend Jonathan Mitchell, a Harvard pastor, he explained (after due thought and many poetic pangs):

Here lies the darling of his time.
Mitchell expired in his prime.
Who, four years short of forty-seven,
Was found full ripe and plucked for heaven.

When Thomas Dudley, father of the first American poetess, Anne Bradstreet, came to his deathbed he showed where his daughter had received her surprising gift by composing such farewell lines as:

Dim eyes, deaf ears, cold stomach shew
My dissolution is in view.
Eleven times seven near lived have I,
And now God calls I willing die.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

HUGH HASTINGS DIES IN HIS 62D YEAR

Former Well Known Plainfielder Passes Away in St. Vincent's Hospital.

Hugh Hastings, aged 62 years, a former well known resident of this city, and for many years State Historian for New York State, died yesterday in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York, following a long illness. Mr Hastings and his wife resided at The Seminary on West Seventh street for ten years, leaving here in 1908. On several occasions after leaving Plainfield he visited here where he had many friends.

Mr. Hastings was classed among the ablest political reporters of the country. From the time he was in his early twenties, until he gave up his work in the reporters' rank, he was on intimate terms and in constant association with the men who make and govern political affairs of the State and country. It was often said of him that no one in the State had as wide an acquaintance as he among men of prominence in political and governmental affairs.

He was born in New York city in 1855 and learned newspaper work when in his teens under his uncle, Hugh J. Hastings, who was for years editor of the Commercial Advertiser. He also worked on the Albany Press Knickerbocker, of which his father was the owner. In the late seventies and eighties he worked as a reporter on leading New York papers, and before he was twenty-five had achieved fame as an expert on financial matters. He was a member of the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion.

Mr. Hastings was correspondent for various Metropolitan newspapers and in 1895 he was appoined State Historian by Governor Levi P. Morton, and he held that position continuously until 1907, when he resigned to accept a place as Tax Commissioner under Mayor George B. McClellan. He ended his connection with the city government with the expiration of Mayor McClellan's term and passed two years traveling here and in Europe.

Mr. Hastings is survived by his widow, a brother, Coroner Warren S. Hastings, of Albany, and a sister, Mrs. George H. Boothby, of Brooklyn.

ORGANIZE STATE FOR COLGATE

tion and would poll not only the full party vote, but a larger independent vote than any other candidate and also draw to a considerable extent from the Democratic ranks.

A number of South Jerseymen present declared their belief that it was necessary to select a candidate from the Northern part of the State for Governor. They would rather win with a North Jersey man, they said, than lose with a South Jersey man.

Among those present were representatives of all elements in the party, ranging from oldline Republicans such as Col. Samuel D. Dickinson, formerly Secretary of State, to Bull Moosers. Col. Colgate himself was present, but did not take any part in the proceedings. After the conference the conferees were entertained at dinner at the hotel as guests of Mr. Bock.

"The one idea to bring home to the voters of New Jersey," said Mr. Bock, in opening the conference, "is that Col. Colgate is the strongest man who can be nominated. He is especially strong in Hudson, from which county the Democrats are going to choose their candidate, with the idea that he will have the advantage of the big Democratic vote there. By the same reasoning Colgate would have the advantage of the big Republican vote in his home county of Essex.

"Senator Colgate has in his own county no opposition that is worthy of the name, whereas in Atlantic, the home county of his principal opponent for nomination, there exists in the party a hopeless split which, if the Atlantic candidate be nominated, will have its effect upon the result at the general election in November. This is a serious thing for Republicans to consider. Let us remember we have a candidate with a long record of faithful public service and an unimpeachable reputation."

In the course of the conference Herbert W. Taylor, chairman of the Republican County Committee of Essex, branded as "utterly false" statements that have been put forth to the effect that serious disaffection exists in that committee over the Colgate candidacy.

"I am glad to have this opportunity," he said, "to tell you gentlemen from the different parts of the State that of our committee of some eight hundred members, elective and advisory, I have heard of only two who have come out publicly against Senator Colgate. The committee looked over the situation very carefully and indorsed candidates for Governor and United States Senator because it believed them to be the best available men for these high offices. The fact that both candidates happen to come from the same county does not in any way affect the merits of either. In this connection it may be noted that the Democrats now have a Governor from Hudson County, a United States Senator from Union—all from the northern part of this State."

Another speaker from Essex was Charles C. Pilgrim, Speaker of the House of Assembly, who has been campaigning with Senator Colgate in different parts of the State.

"I am struck," he said, "with the strong Colgate sentiment I have heard expressed in the various sections and now repeated here. In my opinion this is the proper time to launch campaigns. On account of the law of reaction it is not always wise to launch a campaign away ahead of time and try to win by going about and saying that you are going to win."

Among he speakers from South Jersey were Charles H. Folwell, of Burlington County, editor of the Mt. Holly Mirror; Harry M. Humphries, of Camden County, son-in-law of David Baird; William F. Kelly, also of Camden County, and Charles H. Fort, of Burlington County, who all stated that in their opinion, Col. Colgate would be the strongest candidate and that to insure victory the party should nominate a man from North Jersey. They admitted that Senator Edge had a good many of the politicians with him in the southern tier of counties, but declared the Colgate sentiment among the voters was rapidly growing stronger. Mr. Folwell confidentaly predicted that Burlington County would give Colgate a considerable plurality over Edge.

Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler and former Assemblyman Hervey S. Moore reported from Mercer County that Colgate was rapidly gaining strength there and that a strong organization was being formed to boost his candidacy. They expressed a belief that he would carry the county if the proper work were done.

Others who lauded Senator Colgate and spoke encouraging words of his candidacy were Thomas P. Alworth, treasurer of the Essex County Republican Committee; former Assemblyman Theodore L. Bierck, Daniel Fitzhenry, Thomas H. Brown and Joseph H. Smith, all of Hudson County; William Mackay, candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator in Bergen County; Henry Hume and William Scisco, of Monmouth County; Harry H. Banker and William Kline, of Middlesex County; Freeholder Charles Hesler, of Morris County; James W. Stoddard, of Passaic County; Allen S. Page, of Sussex County, editor of the Sussex Register; Charles Jewett, of Essex County, and Allan R. Trimble of Union County.

It was reported that in Hudson, Essex and certain other counties house to house canvasses have been started in behalf of Senator Colgate.

RECORD IS HIRED BY THE STRIKERS

Drags Prudential Matter Into His Campaign for Governor.

Lakewood, July 28.—Calling for a legislative investigation of the Prudential Life Insurance Company by the Legislature next winter, George L. Record, in his campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, last night addressed a large audience in the Lakewood Theatre. Charles Hecht presided. Many Republicans from adjoining parts of Ocean county attended.

Record's speech was considered specially interesting in view of the fact that the striking agents of the Prudential Life Insurance Company had just engaged him as their counsel in proceedings before the New York State Board of Mediation which was planning a preliminary inquiry into the strike of 2,000 Prudential agents.

"It has always been a public belief," said Record in his address last night, "that the Prudential millions have been used extensively in financing the enterprises of a little group of millionaires in Newark and Philadelphia who have been the promoters of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and other similar public utilities.

"The immediate cause of the strike of the Prudential Life Insurance Company agents is the attempt of the company to prevent the formation of an association or union among the 14,000 agents of the company scattered throughout the country. Men active in the formation of this union have been discharged and the agents have been individually taken before the officers of the company and offered the choice of a discharge or a pledge not to join any union. The striking employes allege a steady diminution in their wages by successive orders of the company's officials during the last two or three years.

"Where so many millions are at stake and the interests of poor and defenseless people are involved the whole matter becomes a proper subject of politics."

MEEKER ON ROAD BUILDING

failures on our heavy traffic roads.

Heavier Roads Are Needed.

We are passing through the same stages that the railroads passed through. The writer's first experience in railroad construction was in the days of the 60-pound rail; this was found to be too light and the 72-pound rail was substituted; this in turn gave way to the 80-pound rail, and, as soon as the mills learned how to roll them, to the 90 and 100-pound rail. Today 110-pound and even 140-pound rails are being used. There has been a great deal said about the money that has been wasted on road construction. Some undoubtedly has, but the larger percentage has more than paid for itself by facilitating transportation. The writer as a boy had to learn the tables in the old table book; one he recalls distinctly, namely, twenty-two hundred weight makes one ton or load. With the improvement of our roads this was quadrupled and the horses were in better condition than ever before. Surely the taxpayers got something for their money when four times the load was hauled with less wear on horses and wagons. With the coming of the motor the loads have been more than doubled, hence our roads should be more than twice as strong to bear the increased burden. This increased expenditure should be charged principally to betterments and not to repair, following the practice of our railroads.

Our State is reverting to the turnpike era of the development of internal intercourse, with the accompanying improvement of abutting property that was so marked during the first half of the nineteenth century, and which gave way, after a bitter struggle, to the railroads. The much discussed question of alignment and grade was given due consideration by the builders of the turnpikes. The lines of the old turnpikes are today the best in the State, though not enough attention was given to grades.

In order to obtain the best results physically and financially the design, construction and maintenance of our roads must be entrusted to those trained to this class of work. These men should and must be selected for their fitness, experience and training. We have, in this State, many well equipped engineers and supervisors who can and will build and maintain our roads in first-class condition if they are unhampered. In other words, take road construction and repair out of politics entirely. Let each man charged with construction, and above all, the maintenance of our roads, know that his tenure of office depends solely upon the condition of the particular portion confided to his care and New Jersey will once more occupy the position she so long and justly held.

No Paving Is Permanent.

In drafting any road law the adjective "permanent" should never be used in describing any road. There is no permanent pavement known. The Appian Way, so often referred to by writers and speakers as an example of permanent pavement, is not safe and convenient for travel, and, for a greater portion of its length, is impassable. Granite block, under moderate traffic has mained in usable, though not good, condition for thirty years; under heavy traffic fifteen is a fair average. Brick, bituminous concrete, and Portland cement concrete, in the order named, will yield an effective service of from fifteen to five years, if carefully maintained. At the end of these periods a reserve must be available to replace the first pavement upon the old foundation. These figures refer only to roads called upon to bear the heavy, intense traffic of our through lines. In this connection the writer was talking to a paving material man who, in lauding the durability of his product, said "it has been down five years and has carried a traffic of nine hundred tons per day of twelve hours, with little sign of wear." He was rather taken back when I showed him some of our traffic counts showing a tonnage of over nine thousand during the same period. The greatly increasing traffic, far heavier than any other country roads are called upon to bear, is the cause of the breaking of many of our roads, hence it is necessary that ours should be stronger than those of any other State in the Union.

Yours truly,
R. A. MEEKER.
State Highway Engineer.

AUXILIARY NEEDS ARE MANY

the army, they have a troop fund, which comes from drawing less than their regular allowance of rations, the saving being turned into money.

The second source of obtaining money when on peace duty is from the troop or army post exchange—which sells ice cream, soda, sandwiches, etc.,—the profits from which are divided pro rata among the troops at a post.

But when serving in the field, as the Troop D boys are now doing on the border, the rations are issued in kind. There can be no substitution. They must take the food that's issued or go without. Also there is no post exchange in the field.

The men's salaries of $18 a month are the only things available for extra food. Hence the need of a fund for delicacies.

The $100 a month that is sent to Captain Borden is little enough as there are over 100 men in the troop, which would mean $1.00 a month per man for extras.

To show you that there can be little variation in army rations, one must realize that the army ration allowance is but 23 cents a day per man. Let any Plainfield housewife try and feed a husky, healthy, hungry-grown husband, or brother on that allowance and she will realize that there can be few delicacies thrown in.

A second need for money is in case a man is sick and goes to a hospital. The fund is available for many things.

The Volunteers' Auxiliary also pays out $60 a month for rental of the troop quarters on Putnam avenue while the troop is away.

The saddlers' and horseshowers' families have to be paid a certain sum a month to make up the deficiency between their old wages and their army wages.

Then there are some mothers and wives who are practically destitute. Their sons and husbands were their sole support and when the man patriotically volunteered to serve his country, this support was cut off. Those mothers, wives and families the Volunteers' Auxiliary have obligated themselves to look after, while their bread winner is away.

All told, at least $300 a month for the next three months is needed and that is the reason the Volunteers' Auxiliary is asking for an emergency fund of $1,000 from patriotic Plainfielders—not charitable Plainfielders.

No contribution is so small that it will not be of service.

All contributions should be sent to E. F. Feickert, treasurer of the Volunteers' Auxiliary, care of State Trust Company.

These past few days the following persons have sent in contributions, which are hereby gratefully acknowledged:

Mrs. M. L. Mead, Mrs. Louisa L. Riley, Mrs. John M. Whiton, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. D. C. Ivins, Rev. B. M. Bogan, Dr. W. H. Murray, George M. Holstein, F. C. Colton, A. J. Gavett, George P. Mellick, Florence Tweedy, M. E. C. The total amount received to date is now $469.

ABSOLUTE DECREE OF DIVORCE FOR LESLIE DODGE

Chancellor Walker has signed a final decree of absolute divorce in the case of C. Leslie Dodge and Marcella S. Dodge, of this city. The petition filed by Mr. Dodge set forth that his wife deserted him at Plainfield in 1912 and that she refused to live here, insisting that she and her husband make their home in Bayonne with her parents. This Mr. Dodge refused to do and the divorce case followed. Counselor Robert Newton Crane represented Mr. Dodge.

HACKENSASK GOLF.

There were scores all the way from 73 to 298 yesterday in the annual tournament of the Carpet Trade Golf Association, held on the links of the Hackensack Golf Club. Horace T. Cook, of Trenton, who is remembered for the hard match he gave Walter J. Travis in a tourney at Lakewood a year or two ago, whose identity as a golf celebrity is unfortunately sunk in the broad address "New York," contributed the physical exercise. As a matter of fact Mr. Murphy was not the only one to so disappoint himself, only it so happened that he was in better physical condition than the others, and had his evolutions been checked up for a long distance championship in club swinging it is a moral certainty that he would have established a new world's record.

GOVERNMENT TO AID ROAD WORK

Will Contribute $912,000 for Use in Rebuilding New Jersey Roads.

BENEFIT TO MILITIA

If Egan Good Roads Bill Is Passed, $7,000,000 Will Be Available for Improvement of the State's Highways.

That the road conditions in New Jersey are not what they should be and that the road system in this State is considered very important not only locally but to the national government as well as to the people of the entire country is evidenced by the fact that the Federal Government has decided to contribute $912,000 for use in the upbuilding of the system. This sum added to the $7,000,000 provided in the Egan Good Roads Bill which will in all probability be passed by referendum in November, will give to the State for highway purposes, a total of almost $8,000,000.

Co-operation between the Federal Government and the various States in the matter of highway improvement has begun. It was fostered by the realization of the necessity of good roads not alone for pleasure and business purposes but more particularly for military purposes. In the next five years $150,000,000 will be expended upon arterial roads selected by the highway authorities and subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture. This plan became a concrete proposition when the two important national road bills were merged, passed and signed by President Wilson.

The effect of this gigantic appropriation by the national government will be a very important factor in restoring the State of New Jersey to its former position and title, "Queen of Roads States," according to the opinion of George E. Blakeslee, author of the "Egan Good Roads Bill," and one of the best informed men upon this subject, in New Jersey. He said:

"Nothing that the National Government has ever done in its co-operating with the States has been more constructive and progressive than this latest move. Here is a proposition, based upon the same plan now before the people of New Jersey, where the entire country will be enabled to build up a system of perfect highways without a cent of added expense to the taxpayers.

"The one-hundred and fifty millions of dollars to be distributed by the Federal Government will, like New Jersey's seven millions, be obtained from sources of revenues already in vogue and without placing added burden upon anyone. The money that is now being paid by automobilists in taxes and other incidentals are devoted to the repair of little patches of roads everywhere. The constructive plan to be placed in effect under the provisions of the new measures is to devote this money to a solid fund which will permit the reconstruction of entire systems of roads. The same monies now spent for senseless little jobs which are extravagant and practically useless, the money will give us systems over which it will be genuine delight to travel.

"The military advantages of the rebuilding and extensions of our road systems are inestimable. Great armies regardless of equipment may be moved rapidly and speedily in every direction while now the movement of military forces is a very grave and great problem because of the lack of expediency in the matter of maintaining the highway systems."

G. N. Y., for the benefit of the thousands of destitute wives and children of men now at the border. A feature of the affair will be a flag drill by sixteen hundred young women, dressed in red, white and blue costumes and formed so as to make an American flage the size of a city block. "Ted" Barron's new song, "L-i-b-e-r-t-y" will be sung by the flag girls and copies will be sold to the spectators as an additional contribution to the fund of the $50,000 which Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's committee has been trying to raise through the sale of tickets to the benefit.

GOOD POLITICS.

In insisting upon the enactment of the federal child labor bill at the present session of Congress, President Wilson is defying the Southern Senators and many of their most influential constituents, but he can well afford this risk, says the Newark News. No matter how greatly the passage of such a law may incense the cotton mill owners of the South, it will not lose Mr. Wilson a single electoral vote from a Southern State. The South will remain solid from instinct and tradition. And, furthermore, since the Republicans in the Senate are expected to give practically unanimous support to the bill, which is backed by mill owners of the East, who are already debarred by State laws from availing themselves of low-priced child labor, the South would gain nothing by deserting the President.

President Wilson recognizes fully what some Democratic leaders fail to realize, that in order to be elected he must poll more than the normal Democratic vote. His vote in 1912 was less by 1,311,444 than the combined vote of Taft and Roosevelt, while on the total vote cast for President, including Socialist, Prohibition and Socialist-Labor, he was 2,450,504 behind. There will be no such division of the opposition forces this year and fewer chances for success of a candidate who fails to secure a majority vote.

It is unnecessary to question the sincerity of the President's belief in the principle of the bill in order to credit him with perceiving the political advantage to be gained from its enactment. The Progressive platform of 1912 declared that "the supreme duty of the National Government is the conservation of human resources through an enlarged measure of social and industrial justice" and pledged the members of the party to "work unceasingly" among other things for "the prohibition of child labor." If President Wilson can claim to his credit a law abolishing child labor everywhere within the United States he will make a strong bid for the aid of those voters who are still interested in the triumph of social and industrial justice and who have been left politically homeless by the dissolution of the Progressive party.

With the gradual dissipation of the war clouds that have been darkening our national horizon, the thoughts of the people will again turn to those domestic problems that had been for the time obscured by the demands for preparedness and appeals to latent Americanism. There is some evidence that the people have begun to recover from their hysteria and are beginning to question whether after all there is but one issue at stake at the coming election. To many of these President Wilson's success in the way of child labor legislation will make a stronger appeal than big appropriations for the army and navy.

Whether the Hon. George L. Record is attempting to make political capital out of his relation to the Prudential strikers, or is merely using his privileges as a candidate for public office to help in the winning of a law suit is not exactly clear, but he is certainly playing strange politics. In an address at Lakewood last night Mr. Record put forth a plea for the strikers, and declared that their fight should be made the fight of every voter in the State of New Jersey. If he has merely hit upon this subject as a reform upon which to ride into public office he must have been ill-advised, for the men of New Jersey are not likely to become stirred over the wrongs done a few thousand men who were discharged from good jobs because they plotted against the company that gave them bread. Their cause may be a just one, but if Mr. Record seeks to reform New Jersey politics, let him begin in New Jersey, and not in the law courts of New York, where he is appearing as a paid counsel.

The prompt investigation into causes of Wednesday's flood by Mayor Calkins and other officials of the city indicates that an effort will be made to prevent a reoccurrence of the damage. For some time Green brook has been a menace to property in Plainfield, and there should be a way to guard against its overflow here. At the next meeting of the Council a detailed report will probably be made, so that citizens will understand the real situation, and know the source from which relief should come.

The note that went to England yesterday protesting against the British boycott and against the black-listing of American firms leaves nothing for British imagination, according to reports from Washington. It is time that President Wilson began to show some firmness in his dealings with King George. The British have always been willing to arbitrate differences with this country, but there can be nothing to arbitrate unless our rights are asserted.

Plainfield Theatre.

Capacity business continues to be the rule at the Plainfield Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation" is playing a three days' engagement. The demand for seats has far surpassed the expectations of the management and as the engagement progresses it becomes apparent that patrons who wait to attend the final performances are courting the same fate that befell hundreds who were crowded out on the last day of the spectacle's engagement in Plainfield last season. Those who can possibly do so should purchase tickets today and attend one of the early performances.

It should be borne in mind that the Griffith spectacle is being presented exactly as it was seen last season. The complete symphony orchestra is carried by the company and likewise the realistic stage effects and the perfected devices. The projection is from the rear of the orchestra floor, the same as last season, and the company is using its own special screen. Mr. Griffith has repeatedly stated that he will never permit the showing of his masterpiece except in first-class theatres and at prices prevailing in those playhouses for the best attractions.

This being the case, this may be the last opportunity of local people to witness the production. Mr. Griffith is now devoting part of his attention to his new production, "The Mother and the Law," and should the demands of the new offering be too heavy upon the producer's time, he will withdraw "The Birth of a Nation" from the road. Whatever may be the opinions of playgoers as to Mr. Griffith's direct connection with "The Birth of a Nation," the fact is that each touring organization presenting the spectacle operates under his personal supervision.

TRUSTEES WILL NOT MEET.

On account of the Kings Daughters Day Nursery being closed, there will be no trustee meeting the first Thursday in August of the Plainfield City Union, of Kings Daughters, but the first Thursday of September the Union will meet as usual at 10 a. m. at 502 West Front street. The milk station is open every day for mothers to get their milk supply.

Proctor's Theatre

By special arrangement with the Fox Company the management of Proctor's local theatre today presents Virginia Pearson in "Hypocrisy." Like some of the other recent subjects from the William Fox studios, "Hypocrisy" contains a pleasing amount of comedy relief, although in the main it is a domestic drama descriptive of the folly of a young wife, and of a certain portion of high society which lives by bluff and hypocrisy. Miss Pearson makes a beautiful appearance and her work in comedy slutations is excellent. Director Kenean Buel deserves special praise for his introduction of comedy relief and his use of such commonplace situations as the first attempts of a young wife to cook, the presence of bill collectors outside the apartment of a social parasite, the appearance of a mule in an outdoor love making scene and the forlorn aspect of a justice of the peace roused at midnight to perform a marriage, show considerable skill and capture the audience without difficulty. In addition today several comedy features are shown and Margaret Gibson is also seen in a dramatic feature entitled "The Good-For-Nothing Brat."

On Saturday Mabel Talliaferro is starred in "The Snowbird." Unusual scenery in this subject adds attractiveness to a well told story, the greater part of the picture being made up in the winter mountains, scenery representing and well representing the Canadian woods. This interest in this feature is strong and is carried logically through the five reels. On Saturday also, Edward Coxen and Winnifred Greenwood appear in "The Profligate," a well told dramatic subject, and Orral Humphrey is starred in a Beauty comedy, entitled "The Day's Work."

CAPT. PETERSON SOLVES SHARK PROBLEM

(By Staff Correspondend.)

Arthur Dow, formerly quartermaster-sergeant of Company K, visited camp yesterday and tested the chow served at supper mess. According to Dow, who is spending a two weeks' vacation at Asbury Park, the menue was fit for the most particular summer boarder.

First Sergeant George Apgar has earned the title of being the busiest man in camp. He's on the job from morning till night and has been handling his duties in a commendable fashion.

Company K will probably have to visit Sea Girt again for a day during the next month. Time wouldn't permit the men to finish work on the rifle range and as a consequence a majority of the officers and many privates will have to come back here to finish up.

The soldiers are all nursing cases of swollen jaws. The right side of every man's face bore a lump almost as big as an apple last night as a result of rifle practice.

Trenton's mascot got friendly with Privates "Les" Sharp and "Hub" Reynolds in the Y. M. C. A. tent yesterday, and all efforts on the part of the Trentonians to get it back to headquarters proved futile. Reynolds and Sharp occupied their time feeding it newspapers, despite the reported high cost of paper, and the animal apparently realized it was getting an expensive meal. Several times the Trenton youth detailed to escort it tried to chase it back to the company street, but the goat went out one door of the Y. M. C. A. tent and in another. When Sharp and Reynolds got ready to go "Billy" accompanied them.

Private Bird has been doing kitchen duty since last Saturday. As an assistant to Cooks Horton and Millwater he has proven himself invaluable.

Captain Peterson declares he has solved the shark problem, that is, the reason the maneaters are invading our waters. He claims they are looking for Shark River and haven't been able to locate it. The "Cap" also says women need have no fear for the sharks while in bathing for they're maneaters.

Corporal Clark, commander of the Corncob Pipe Brigade, has lost his pipe. It's one safe bet he didn't lose it on the camp grounds or some one would have smelled it long before now.

Nearly had a fire in camp last night. Privates Reynolds, Kiederling, Clark, Miller and Milliken came in a "little" late and the whole bunch decided to assist Reynolds to carry out an order which he had to put a log of wood on the incinerator fire before going to bed. When the gang got through there were a dozen or more logs piled up and when this wood pile got started the flames reached nearly over to the cook tent. All hands turned out and prevented any damage, however. Sergeant Apgar went scouting for Reynolds, but the midget had hid himself away behind an axe and after an hour's hunt the "serg" gave the job up as a bad one.

Private Willard took the morning off yesterday to write letters. He says he only wrote one but the scarcity of writing paper and ink in the Y. M. C. A. tent after he had finished either makes him out a fabricator or else the "one" was a mighty lengthy epistle.

Private Dense, who is one of the veterans in Company K camp life, is sore because his name never appeared in the newspapers in the whole four years he has spent in camp. The fellows are all scouting grounds for a write-up in Dense's behalf, and 'tis rumored that he has a whole lot coming to him.

Private Tunison tried to prove the power of the National Guard authority the other day while the company was on a hike. Tunison was attacked by a vicious dog (at least he looked kind of bad to Tunison, but others say he wouldn't bite a bone) and ran toward the animal's mistress, shouting: "I'm a soldier and I'm protected by the National Guard. If that dog bites (lots of the teeth chattering and trembling) you'll be made to suffer for it. In the name of the National Guard call him off."

Lieutenant Littell and Major Hall entertained a number of fellow officers and rookies on the front platform of the Y. M. C. A. tent yesterday morning with a dance number, executed to the strains of the regimental band rehearsing nearby. Littell says he doesn't profess to be a Vernon Castle and no one who saw him yesterday morning would accuse him of harboring aspirations along this line.

Private Hort has become the artful dodger of the camp. According to his superiors (and he has many of them, for he only enlisted a short time before leaving for camp) Hort finds more ways of getting out of doing things than any other individual in the guard.

General Quigley O'Malley Gilmore, of Trenton, formerly of the Second Regiment, who was instrumental in organizing Company K in Plainfield, is the guest of Colonel Reading. The general greeted all the Plainfielders in camp yesterday and was especially interested in the growth of Company K.

Plainfield soldiers went to Belmar last night looking for a mascot but came home without one. Private Kiederling was given a cat by a pretty miss but the animal took a chunk out of his "complexion" and he let it go. The only other suitable candidate cited was a cow and the conductor on the trolley car wouldn't let the privates aboard with the milker and they didn't quite fancy walking back with her.

The judge suspended sentence of $10 over the heads of each on the condition that they purchase galvanized garbage pails and clean their yards.

DEVILED SCALLOPS.—Pour boiling water over a pint of scallops and let them stand three minutes, then drain and cut in squares. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and pepper. Blend with butter until smooth, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-quarters of a cupful of thin cream and stir until it boils. Boil three minutes, remove from fire, add yolks of two eggs well beaten and the scallops. Put in buttered shells or ramekins, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until brown.

Salt Pork With Milk Gravy.—Take several slices of salt pork cut rather thin and put them in cold water. When the water comes to a boil turn it off and let the pork fry. While it is frying take a little cold water and stir a little flour or cornstarch into it until smooth, then pour milk into the hot fat, after removing the pork, and when it comes to a boil stir in the flour and water.

Japanese Eggs.—Three cupfuls of cooked rice, six fresh eggs, a cupful of milk. Place rice in a baking dish with cover, make six small depressions—one in center and five in circle around it—drop an egg in each, season with pepper and salt, pour milk over, cover the baker and cook in moderate oven for about fifteen minutes.

Crab Meat au Gratin.—To a pound of flaked crab meat add half a pint of thick cream sauce. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of curry powder. Mix well and place on a flat dish that has been evenly coated with butter. Cover with breadcrumbs and grated Parmesan cheese, pour on a little melted butter and brown in a quick oven or under a gas broiler.

Hot Salmon Souchet.—Cut the salmon in slices about a quarter of an inch thick and put them in a saute pan with enough fish stock to cover them. If you have no fish stock cover the fish with water, add a sliced onion, a bunch of herbs, four or five small peppercorns and a pinch of salt. Bring to a boil, then let it simmer very gently for seven or eight minutes, remove the salmon into another saute pan, then strain and clarify the stock, allowing for each quart four whites and shells of eggs.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Clodhopper Won Himself A Princess.

"I will have you for my husband."

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THE children came dashing in from the garden to hear daddy's bedtime story. So he told them about Hans Clodhopper, a silly chap who went along with his two wise brothers to win the king's daughter.

"All along the road Hans kept finding things," daddy began. "'This sand is so fine you can hardly hold it!' cried he, showing his brothers a handful. And he stuffed his pockets with it. But his brothers rode on and got to the king's palace an hour before Hans did. Here all the suitors for the princess were lined up in two rows so close they could have torn each other's clothes off. All the townspeople had come to see the princess receive her lovers.

"'No good! Away with him!' cried the princess as one after another came before her so bashful they lost the power of speech.

"Now, came Hans' brother's turn, the one who knew the dictionary by heart. But standing in the row so long had made him quite forget it. The floor creaked and the ceiling was made of looking glass, so that he saw himself standing on his head. At every window sat three clerks and an alderman, who wrote down all that was said so it might be printed in the newspaper.

"'It is terribly hot here,' is all the wise brother could think of to say.

"'That is because we are roasting cockerels today,' said the princess.

"Bah, there he stood! He wanted to say something clever and witty, but no words came to him, he who knew the whole dictionary.

"Then came the other brother's turn. 'There's a fearful heat here,' said he. 'We're roasting cockerels,' replied she.

"'What did—what?' he stammered. And 'What did—what?' wrote the three clerks and the alderman for the newspapers.

"'Away with him!' cried the king's daughter.

"Then Hans Clodhopper stepped up. 'It's very convenient of you to be roasting cockerels, because I can also roast my crow,' said he, holding up a dead crow he had found by the roadside. 'I have no pot to roast it in,' said the princess. 'I have!' cried Hans Clodhopper, holding up a wooden shoe he had found on the way. 'Where shall we get drippings to baste our meal?' asked she. And Hans pulled a handful of sand from his pocket and poured it over the crow. 'You have something to say for yourself! I will have you for a husband!' cried the king's daughter. And when the three clerks and the alderman snickered Hans Clodhopper threw the rest of his sand in their faces. 'I'll try to learn how to do that!' cried the princess.

"So Hans Clodhopper gained a crown, a queen and became king."

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Meets Dick's Mother and Learns That Dawdling Is a Bad Habit.

"Is this Mrs. Morton? My name is Gordon. I live next to your son in Fairport." Ethel stretched out her hand.

"I have heard my daughter-in-law speak of you." The old lady took the dainty hand in her capacious palm. "I got a letter from her this morning. She said you were away and that your husband's mother was keeping house for him. It is nice that he does not have to be alone." Mrs. Morton looked at her sharply, for Nell had said that the "little butterfly had flown away, no one knew where."

Ethel could not hide a startled look when she heard this news. She had been picturing Ralph as lonely and longing for her return. Had he sent for his mother? Aloud she said:

"I came over to see if anyone was going to town today. I want to send these letters. I am not used to living so far from the postoffice."

"You can get used to most anything, if you have to," was the grim reply.

"Come right in and sit by the stove while I ask if anyone is going to town. It is a lovely day, but not warm enough to stand still out of doors and be comfortable." She led the way to the sunny living room.

"Father says he will be going in toward night. Did you bring your letters with you?" asked Mrs. Morton when she returned. She sat down in the sunny window and began sewing carpet rags.

"I never saw anybody sew carpet rags before." Ethel leaned forward and picked up a ball of the sewed rags. Did you make this carpet?" she looked at the floor covering.

"Oh, yes, I have made all the carpets we ever had."

"Isn't it lots of work?" asked Ethel, replacing the ball in the basket.

"I am not afraid of work. No one who does not do some useful thing in the world has a right to cumber the ground." She looked over the top of her glasses to see how Ethel took the thrust.

"Making carpets is only one way of being useful, you know," laughed the girl.

"Yes, I should hate to confine myself to one thing. That is why I like housework. There is so much variety in it." The old lady stabbed at her needle several times ineffectually.

"Let me thread your needle," volunteered Ethel. "Your daughter-in-law said you were a great worker, and that you had taught her a great deal about work."

"Yes, girls are not brought up the way they used to be. They do not know much about work or any useful knowledge. It is a pity, for the greatest happiness comes in doing things and knowing that you do them well."

"Not everyone has your vigor. Work makes me tired," replied Ethel.

"That is because you have never used your muscles. You would get hardened to it in a few weeks and really enjoy it." Again the old lady eyed the girl.

"If I may I shall come over here and let you tell me what I should do. I have trouble knowing what to do with my time," said Ethel rising.

"Dawdling is the most wearisome, useless thing that a person can do. It is soul-destroying besides. It eats the good out of life like dry rot. By all means learn to do something useful."

"I'll come, you'll see," replied the girl gaily as she took her leave.

"Childhood is the bough, where slumbered
Birds and blossom many-numbered;
Aye, that bough with snows incumbered.

Gather then each flower that grows,
When the young heart overflows,
To embalm that tent of snows."
—Longfellow's "Maidenhood."

Parental Training By Examples.

My father taught me to avoid each vice by setting a mark on it by examples. Whenever he would exhort me to live a thrifty, frugal life, contented with what he had saved for me, he would say, "Do you not see how hard it is for the son of Albius to live and how needy Barrus is a signal warning to prevent anyone from wasting his inheritance?" If he would deter me from dishonorable love, he would say, "Do not be like Sectanus;" to save me from an adulterous passion when I might enjoy an unforbidden love, he used to say, "Trebonius' exposure was not creditable." Thus he molded my boyhood by these words.—Horace.

Parent-Teacher Association.

The organization of parents is the grandest trust company which history will have to record of this century, for if the parents of this country combine to make homes what they should be, who dares limit the power for truth and righteousness which, as a nation we may become? "The standard of a nation's greatness is set in its homes."—Child-Welfare Magazine.

The Young Mother.

Is it a hard thing to acquire of the mother that she shall devote herself so closely to her child? Let her remember that motherhood is her business now. She has had her school life, she has had society, she has had literature, she has had wifehood; now she is a mother, pledged by the sacredness and the infinite impart of this new calling to self-abnegation, to the highest good of the child to whom she stands as creator and provider.—Elizabeth Powell Bond.

Vacation Reading.

The fact that a boy prefers Alger or Henty to Scott, or even that a girl gives some of her time to reading Mary Jane Holmes need not be looked upon as a calamity. True, we could wish them better employed, but aside from the possible waste of time, results from such occasional reading are not likely to be highly injurious. The appetite for this cheap emotionalism appears and usually disappears without working permanent harm. Capable librarians are coming to realize this fact and instead of banishing all books of the Alger-Henty type, are tactfully endeavoring to regulate the circulation. The result is that where the librarian has any degree of co-operation from the home a great deal is accomplished by way of compromise, and sandwiched in between two semi-worthless books the boy reads one really good one.

If teachers, librarians and parents are to remedy this evil, then, it is not to be done by any prejudiced wholesale condemnation of books of which we are largely ignorant, but by intelligent recognition of the thread of value in the thinnest adventure story in which our boys delight, as well as by the ability and willingness to point out, in a manner far removed from preaching, the practical and substantial values and delights that come from an acquaintance with true literature. Intelligent, tactful, sympathetic supervision of boys' and girls' reading may well claim the attention of all interested in cultivating a love for literature.—The Chautauquan.

What to Feed the Baby.

The foods children need before the fifth year are as follows:

Until 9 months old—Milk (pure).

From 9 months to 1 year—Milk, gruel (cereal), broth (chicken or mutton).

Until 1¼ years—The same, and rice, bread, apple (baked or as a sauce).

From 1¼ to 1½ years—The same as earlier, but with the introduction of a little butter and greater variety in gruels and some variety in fruit (that must be sweet and without skin or seeds, as pared peach).

From 1½ to 2½ years—The foods permitted earlier and potato (baked), egg (soft cooked) and orange-juice.

From 2½ to 3½ years—As before but with digestible, young, fresh vegetables, as pease, beans, squash and every few days a little meat (chicken, chop, steak, roast tender).

Until 5 years—The same but with egg and meat on alternate days and light desserts, as custard, tapioca, gelatin.

THE COSTUME BLOUSE OF A DRESSY AFFAIR.

Black net top lace in a bold, effective rose pattern, is laid over flesh pink chiffon, in this costume blouse from a Fifth Avenue specialty shop. Black satin ribbon is run between the two materials below the bust line, and the fitted cuffs which add so much of style and formality to the loose blouse, are also of black satin. Vest and collar are of cream crossbarred net and as a final touch are added two velvet revers—a touch of black velvet this summer being the favored fancy of Madame Mode.

NOVEL BEACH SETS A FAD.

Unique Combinations Introduced in These Modish and Practical Affairs.

By Mary Glynn.

Never a season goes by without its useful and attractive novelties, and yet, since this has been a year of practical items it is interesting to note that just occasionally a really clever novelty may be found showing some new tendency in a type of garment. Possibly the only type of garment which has any chance to display novel tendencies this year is the sport costume. Though most of the sport suits and dresses are shown with extremely simple lines and in tussah, pongee, wool, or silk jersey, there is some detail which invariably takes away the strict severeness. Usually this is introduced in a manner that softens the entire outfit. Particularly interesting was a sport outfit seen recently developed in tan tussah with three-quarter-length box-coat, loosely belted at the waistline. Broad, graduating bands of rose green and orange bands of tussah formed a broad and effective border on the lower part of the coat, the collar and cuffs. These same colors were introduced in the "beach set," which consisted of basket, hat, and neck-cushion. All three were trimmed with narrow white fringe, this lending a peculiar, yet attractive finishing touch.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

THE LEAGUE IS THRIVING.

When the City League was organized many followers of the national pastime in this city openly expressed the opinion that the circuit would "blow-up" before long. But, somehow, it seems that all these predictions went astray and that the league is now going along in a flourishing fashion. The support given the circuit by local fandom, while not of the very best, has been exceptionally good and has exceeded expectations. This city, while always a fairly good baseball centre, has declined in that respect during the past few years. In the olden days the fans were content to go watch a baseball game and as a result the attendance figures at some of the better attractions—or rather the "only" star event—were high. In these advanced times the fans do not want to witness a game of baseball; they want to play the game. Consequently, the "large" crowds that formerly attended baseball games can now be seen "hitting homers," "stealing second" and "catching flies." That's revolution for you.

• • • • • •

THE YANKEES ARE SLIPPING.

The inevitable has happened. The Yankees, owners of the largest baseball disability list in the world, are slipping. They are sinking quickly, but surely, into the mire, as a result of the fact that they have been unable to secure the services of the several minor league stars that they were after. The New Yorkers still cling to the top, but the margin is a scant one, being but one-half a game. The Red Sox are running close on the Yanks' heels and it is the consensus of opinion that the Boston boys will pass the New Yorkers before long.

• • • • • •

GOLF AT ELKWANOK.

T. S. Wheeler was the local contestant in the President's Cup play at the Elkwanok Golf Club the other day. While the local golfer did not qualify after the first round of play, his score was by no means a poor one, all things being considered. The renowned Max Marston, while able to return a better card, admitted that the recent rains had made the green rather difficult on which to play. That there will be keen competition in this tourney or competition for the cup is the firm conviction of golf followers throughout the country. With such stars as Max Marston, Hamilton Kerr and John Ward on the list as competitors, the keenest kind of rivalry is anticipated.

• • • • • •

MATHEWSON'S RECEPTION.

New York fans were "with" Matty from the start to the finish of that baseball game Wednesday. The fact that the Giants lost did not seem to trouble the fans in the least. It was Matty's day and the fans were there to see Matty win. And Christy did. The camera men were on hand and took pictures of "Mugsy" and "Matty." One fan was heard to remark that Matty would supplant McGraw at the termination of the present contract of each. Matty has two years to go with Cincinnati and McGraw has two years more with the Giants. That remark may not be so much out of place after all.

• • • • • •

HERZOG AND SALLEE.

The annexation of Herzog and Sallee has caused a lot of talk among Giant rooters. There can be no question but that Herzog has helped the New Yorkers considerably, but just where "Slim's" great work of rendering aid comes in, we cannot see. Perhaps he will get started shortly. But the Giants purchased him with the understanding that he get started at once.

DAVE SHEAN SUCCESSFUL.

"Providence is again showing the way in the International League pennant chase. The Grays had a big lead a few weeks ago, but injuries made it necessary for Davie Shean to use a number of substitutes, and Buffalo and Toronto succeeded in getting ahead of the Rhode Island aggregation. The Grays went into the lead when such a thing was entirely unexpected. The champion Bisons went up against the tail-end Rochester Hustlers in a double-header and the Flower City aggregation surprised all hands by annexing both parts of the bargain bill. Montreal held Toronto to a tie and the Grays vanquished Richmond. This combination of events landed the Providence aggregation on the top perch once more."—Exchange.

GRIFFEN PLAYING WELL.

"It seems to be the consensus of opinion up Boston way that Clarence J. Griffen, the California tennis player, is playing better tennis this year than ever before. Griffen went through two rounds of the Longwood tourney with decisive victories over R. Norris Williams and Theodore R. Pell, two of the best players in the East. Williams gave him a petty tough game, but against Pell the Westerner had things his own way most of the time. The last set went to deuce, but it was due rather to errors on the part of Griffen than to a brace by Pell. William M. Johnston, national champion, is playing pretty good tennis, too, in the same tourney, and possibly the Bostonians will see the two Californians fighting it out for the title. There are more rounds to come, of course, and some other good players left, but none has shown as fine tennis this year or with as high a stand in the national ranking."—Newark News.

CITY LEAGUE SEASON APPROACHES END WITH NETHERWOOD SAFELY ON TOP

Games Next Saturday.

T. A. B. S. vs. Baptists.
Netherwoods vs. Hopes.
Dunellen vs. Farmers.

Another section of the City League race will be contested on the various diamonds tomorrow afternoon. The Netherwood team will take on the Hope Chapel aggregation in the weekly tilt and will attempt to make certain its grasp on first place. The East Siders can yet be beaten and no one realizes this fact more than the rival managers, of whom Manager Britt Martin, of Hope, is one. Britt will lead his men against the possible champions determined to win at all costs. The Hopes have a fighting chance and Martin believes that a "fighting chance" demands a little "fighting spirit." The Tabs are by no means entirely out of the race and by defeating the Baptists they can make their chances of giving Netherwood a good battle, more certain. The Baptists, with whom the Tabs are scheduled to cross bats, are very anxious to keep out of the cellar. Therefore it is necessary that they do their best in the tilt on the morrow.

Lest we forget, the Farmers battle with Dunellen at the renowned Maurer Oval tomorrow. While there is not one man in a thousand that expects to see the Farmers trounced, still the unexpected very often happens. Then, too, there is the possibility that Warry McLaughlin will undertake to pitch a "no hit" game. That's only a suggestion, but still, if Warry is at all inclined to hurl a battle entirely free from hits as far as his work is concerned, the Farmers are the boys who would prove the easiest victims. On the other hand, there are one or two men on the lowly squad, that are as good as they come in baseball. Joe Morley is one of the best all-around men we have ever seen. And we are thankful we can say that we have had our eyesight for eighteen years.

KENNEL CLUB ARRANGES BEST SHOW OF SEASON

One of Judges at First Annual Show Will Officiate in September.

It is an interesting fact that one of the men chosen as a judge at the fifth annual show of the Plainfield Kennel Club was a judge at the first show held by the club, Dr. J. E. De Mund is the man in question. He was a judge of Russian wolfhounds, Irish wolfhounds, Scottish deerhounds, greyhounds and whippets at the first show. At that affair he, assisted by MaMjor J. M. Taylor and J. Willoughby Mitchell, Esq., judged the unclassified specials and local classes.

It is also of interest to note that Edmund L. Mackenzie, president of the club, was chairman of the first Bench Show Committee. The affair was under the direction of E. M. Oldham, of New York city. The fourth annual show held on October 12, 1912, attracted considerable attention, many entries being received. The list of judges at that show included the names of Edmund L. Mackenzie and Clinton Wilmerding, of this city. The other officials were were non-residents of this city.

WESTFIELD OUTFIT AT PARKER FIELD

Manville Team Will Be Present at Hyde Oval.

The Westfield Athletic nine will come to this city tomorrow afternoon, prepared to do battle with the Royal Giants. The Westfield team has graced local diamonds before and has been beaten in each of the last three visits made to this city. However, the manager of the team has assured Pete Simmons, leader of the Royal Giants, that his clan will be well fortified for tomorrow's battle with the Royals. The game will be played on Parker Field and will give the fans a chance to get a good look at the Royals before they enter the fray on Sunday. Official information states that Sidney Butler will do the hurling for the Royals, with Condict behind the bat.

The Manville team will also come to this city tomorrow. The Manville nine will do battle with the St. Joseph's team on Hyde Oval. The "Saints" will have Eddie Conshay on the mound with Andy McDonough behind the bat. This will be the first meeting between the Manville and St. Joseph teams.

"IPSU" FOR OLDRING.

JACK MARTIN OUT OF BREWER LINEUP

Local Lad Said to Be Managing Team in Absence of Clark.

Jack Martin is out of the game again and Stutz is at short. No reason has been assigned for Jack's removal from the lineup of the Milwaukee team, but those who are in a position to know state that the local lad is managing the aggregation in the absence of Harry Clark, the official leader of the club. Clark has taken a trip to Burlington, Wis., to hold a conference with Al Timme, the president of the club.

The Brewers have been going from bad to worse and the fact that they have been making such a poor showing, has preyed upon the mind of the president of the organization, Al Timme. Mr. Timme has been suffering from a heart ailment and the fact that his team has been going so badly has been a big disappointment to him. He has expended plenty of money on the club, but has not been able to get results. In the absence of Clark, the Brewers won and, if Jack Martin really was the manager on that day, much credit is due him. It is not often that the Brewers win a game.

T. S. WHEELER DEFEATS E. M. POND, OF RUTLAND

Max Marston, of Baltusrol, and C. P. Eddy, of Arcola, Win.

In the second round of match play for the first President's cup at Ekwanok Country Club yesterday the gallery elected to follow the match between B. M. Marsden, of Baltusrol, and C. P. Eddyl, of Arcola. For six holes only indifferent golf was in evidence, but after that Mr. Marston played one stroke better than par and won by 5 up and 4 to play.

T. S. Wheeler, of the Plainfield Country Club, defeated E. M. Pond, of Rutland, 1 up. Mr. Wheeler finished in "fourth sixteen."

As the gallery came toward the club house Gilman Tiffany, of Mohawk, and W. Parker Seeley, of Brooklawn, were playing the seventeenth and the latter was 1 up. They had played indifferently going out, but each was a little above par on the last nine. The seventeenth was halved, and each played to the right of the last green in two. Mr. Tiffany then made his four and Mr. Seeley missed a four foot putt, which would have made him 35 for the nine holes and given him the match.

Going to the extra holes both showed the strain, but the gallery had a treat. The first was halved. Mr. Tiffany holed a long putt for a four at the second, only to see Mr. Seeley duplicate the feat. They proceeded to the twenty-first hole, where Mr. Tiffany ad te better of the argument.

Arrangements have been made by the committee in charge of the coming show of the Plainfield Kennel Club to give a portion of the receipts taken in at the show to the Volunteers' Auxiliary. This step is in accordance with the spirit of generosity that has prompted many in this city to give some little financial aid to a worthy cause.

The publicity agent of the show announced this morning that there would be a special baggage car attached to the 8:15 train from Jersey City. This will provide ample accommodations for the many entries from New York city and vicinity.

RETURNED FROM FISHING TRIP.

Chief of Police Patrick Kiely returned last night from a three days' fishing trip with several friends, to Barnegat Bay. The trip was made by automobile and coming home yesterday the high waters caused by the storm delayed them. To prove that they really had a fishing trip they brought home several specimens and a number are eating fresh fish on Friday.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD TO ENTERTAIN DUNELLEN

Semi-Professional Nine From Dunellen to Invade Village Precincts.

The Dunellen baseball club, an independent team, will journey to South Plainfield on Sunday afternoon in order that hostilities between the two outfits might be declared on. The Dunellen aggregation has been having a fairly successful season and it is the hope of the manager that his club will continue to win a fair percentage of the games in which they engage.

The South Plainfield team will present its usual lineup, although the manager is endeavoring to secure a new pitcher for this battle. The man sought is Georeg Dolan, said to hail from Jersey City, but who is at present residing in South Plainfield. Dolan, if we remember correctly, is the young man who set the Parker Field League on fire for a day. Reilly will do the catching for the home team. The South Plainfield grounds can be easily reached. The game will commence at 3:30.

LEONARD AND WELSH.

Benny Leonard and Freddy Welsh will engage in a fistic encounter at Washington Park, Brooklyn, this evening. "Billy" Roche has been selected to referee the bout.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING GREATLY APPRECIATED

New Jersey Guardsmen Are Making Extensive Use of Structure on the Border.

The following extract from a letter sent by F. A. McCarl, field secretary of the Army and Navy Young Men's Christian Association, with headquarters at El Paso, Texas, to George A. Reeder, executive secretary in New York, in charge of the border work, will be of interest to Plainfielders:

"On reaching Douglas I went out to visit the association building there, in charge of B. T. Pest, physical director of the Newark (N. J.) Young Men's Christian Association, who has associated with him A. N. Eagles, of Orange, and C. E. Crissy, of Newark. I found the building crowded with soldiers and the Plainfield citizens, through whose generosity the Y. M. C. A. was able to put up this building, can be proud of their investment.

"It is a wooden structure, 40x80, with conveniences for writing, and is truly a social and recreation center. They are giving away from 2,500 to 3,000 sheets of paper a day there and I should say that seventy-five to ninety per cent. of the New Jersey men are making extensive use of the building. I heard many words of commendation and appreciation."

ACTION BY EDWIN GOULD.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 28.—Hearing was resumed before Surrogate Ostrander today in the proceedings seeking the removal of Mrs. Lida M. Fleitman, of New York, as adminstratrix of the estate of F. Augustus Heinze, the "Copper King," and one-time banker, who died in 1914. The proceedings were instituted by Edwin Gould of New York, who has a judgment of more than $1,000,000 against the estate. The judgment was obtained in an action to recover on a note alleged to have been given by Mr. Heinze. Mr. Gould alleges in his complaint that Mrs. Fleitman has claimed as hers personal property which Mr. Gould maintains should be a part of the assets of the Heinze estate.

TO TRY LONG SWIM.

New York, July 28.—Robert Dowling, the 19-year-old local long distance swimmer, who last summer covered the thirtyfour miles around Manhattan Island in 13 hours 45 minutes, tomorrow will attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook and back.

The one-way trip has only been accomplished so far by five men, and the record stands to the credit of George Meehan, of Boston, at 7 hours 18 minutes.

No swimmer has ever accomplished the task of covering the distance both ways. The feat is especially difficult because of tidal conditions, which makes it a test of speed, as well as of endurance. Success hinges upon the ability of the swimmer to complete the downward leg on the ebbing current, the upward on the flooding, for it is beyond human power to beat the tide once it has set in the direction opposite to the swimmer's course. This means holding a fast pace continuously for about fourteen hours.

LONG DISTANCE BOAT RACE.

New York, July 28.—All arrangements have been completed for the New York-to-New England power boat race, which is to have its start tomorrow from Whortleberry Island. The finish will be at the Boston Yacht Club station at Marblehead, Mass. The race will be the first of its kind for nearly seven years, and the New Yorkers who have planned it have made the conditions such that it will be a real contest from start to finish. A time limit of twenty hours has been placed on the express cruiser class, and a limt of forty hours on the cruising class. This means that the express cruisers, measuring not less than 35 feet on the water line and not over 70 feet, must make the 275 nautical miles, over the shoals and around Cape Cod to Marblehead, at a speed of better than fifteen miles an hour. The boats will race on time allowances figured by the American Power Boat Association.

IRISH M. P. ACCUSED.

London, July 28.—Accused of attempting by false pretences to obtain admission to the detention barracks at Knutsford, where Irish prisoners alleged to have been concerned in the recent rebellion are hld, Laurence Ginnell, Irish member of Parliament, was arraigned in the Bow street police court today for a hearing. Ginnell is well known for his sympathies with the Irish cause. When the excitement over the recent rebellion was at its height he addressed many questions in the House of Commons to ministers, and invariably alleged that his countrymen who had been arrested were mistreated.

STOKES MAY GET OUT, HE ADMITS

Does Not Like Expense of $20,000 in Seeking the Nomination.

Trenton, July 28.—It might be that former Governor E. C. Stokes will be willing to retire from the Senate race. If he receives from Newark the letter now in circulation asking him to forego his ambition to seek the Republican nomination for United States Senator this year, he will give it studied consideration. He admits that there is such a letter in circulation at least, says he understands there is, and that he has heard that it has been signed by a number of his good friends.

The appeal will have its basis on the necessity of an undivided party in one of the most important elections the State has had.

It has been estimated that the expense of the fight that Mr. Stokes would have to put would be about $20000. His opponents, former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and former Governor Franklin Murphy, it is contended, would make a strong fight. The expense of the campaign, it has been asserted, does not appeal to Mr. Stokes.

FIRE BOARD RECOMMENDS APPOINTMENT OF FOUR MEN

At a meeting of the Councilmanic fire board held last night it was decided to add four men to the local fire fighting force and the following appointments were recommended: Ray Schmidt, William J. Kelly, William C. Ryder and Carl Ulmer. The new men will probably begin their duties about August 1 and serve the usual six months' probationary period.

An informal discussion took place at the meeting as to limiting the height of buildings in Plainfield, but nothing was done definitely.

GUARDSMEN WILL GET FARE FROM BORDER HOME

Guardsmen on duty in Texas, Arizona or other border States who are discharged from the service for any reason will not be forced to pay their own fare back home as was announced early in the week. The following extract from army regulations was made public in Washington yesterday:

"When the enlisted man is discharged from the service except by way of punishment for an offense or is furloughed to the reserve he shall be entitled to transportation in kind and subsistence from the place of discharge or furlough to the place of his enlistment."

NO CURE KNOWN FOR INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Washington, July 28.—Warning was issued to the public yesterday by the Department of Agriculture to look with extreme suspicion upon any preparations put on the market and offered for sale as being effective for the treatment of infantile paralysis.

Department officials charged with the enforcement of the food and drug act, an announcement states, "expect the outbreak of infantile paralysis will tempt unscrupulous persons to offer for sale so called 'cures' or remedies for this dread malady. They, therefore, have issued special instructions to food and drug inspectors to be particularly alert for interstate shipments or importations of medicine, the makers of which allege that they will cure or alleviate this disease, for which at the present time no medicinal cure is known."

HEAT WAVE, BUT IT HASN'T HIT PLAINFIELD

Washington, July 28.—A "Bermuda high" is the official cause of the worst heat wave that has enveloped the country in fifteen years.

Translated from the cryptic language of the weather sharps, that means a great area of high pressure air has been mobilizing on the weather drill grounds in the Atlantic, off Bermuda, for the last month, and now has let go the full power of its offensive from the seaboard to the Rocky Mountains.

It has stood for weeks like a solid wall against heated currents, trying vainly to move out from the interior over the ocean, and now, as it swirls rapidly along, it is gathering heat and moisture from the tropics and sweeping them northward over the continent.

Chief Forecaster Frankenfeld said today that the heat wave had just begun and would continue for the rest of the week and probably longer.

Reports from the Middle West and Northwest declare that millions of dollars' worth of crops are endangered. The State Board of Agriculture of Nebraska reports that the Nebraska corn crops will suffer damage worth millions of dollars unless there is rain within a week.

$25,000,000 FOR DANISH ISLANDS

Uncle Sam Ready to Buy Them From Little Kingdom.

NEGOTIATIONS PROGRESSING

Treaty Must Be Ratified by Both Branches of Congress and by Authorities in Copenhagen—Our Rights in Greenland to Be Surrendered to the Danes.

A treaty for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States has been negotiated between the governments of Denmark and the United States and in the near future is to be submitted to the senate of the United States and to the two houses of the Danish parliament for approval, according to information from Copenhagen.

If the treaty is ratified as it stands in "project" form at present the United States will pay for the islands $25,000,000, and in addition will relinquish to Denmark the rights of the United States in Greenland. Greenland is a Danish possession, and the rights which the United States will abandon are merely rights of discovery, the scope of which is ill defined.

The United States will obtain from Denmark full possession of the islands of St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix or Santa Cruz, as it is better known. These islands lie about fifty miles off the east coast of Porto Rico. They are 142 square miles in area and support a population of 27,000 persons, nearly all the inhabitants of the islands being negroes, who live by the cultivation of sugar cane.

The Danish ministry has formally communicated to the United States its willingness to accept the terms offered by Secretary Lansing for the islands, and the treaty of cession will soon be signed at the state department by Secretary Lansing and Constantin Brun, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Denmark. It is assumed that the status of the islands of St. Croix, St. Thomas and St. John, should the treaty be ratified, will be similar to that of Porto Rico.

New Treaty Peculiar.

The new treaty is peculiar in that it will require action not only by the American senate and the Danish rigsdag, but by the United States house of representatives as well, since it will be necessary for the house to supply the needed appropriation of $25,000,000 to defray the expense of purchase.

It is understood that the people of the Danish West Indies islands are to have a voice in this question of cession and that the government has given notice that before it ratifies the treaty it would submit the question to the people of the islands.

It is stated further that the people on the islands are much in favor of the transfer to the United States and that the treaty is so framed that they are not called on to surrender Danish allegiance. They may remain Danes in fact and in name, while enjoying whatever advantages in a commercial way may result from a transfer of the islands to the United States.

It is stated that formal delivery of the territory and property ceded shall be made immediately after the payment by the United States of the sum of money stipulated in the treaty and that the cession, with the right of immediate possession, is to be deemed closed on the exchange of ratifications.

CLOSE CALL FOR FORTUNE.

Pennsylvania Woman Lucky by Margin of Only Three Hours.

By a three hour margin Mrs. William Gordon of Clifton Heights, Pa., fell heir to a fortune of from $80,000 to $100,000 through the death of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Perrine at Holmdel, N. J.

Mr. Perrine was Mrs. Gordon's father, and Mrs. Perrine was her stepmother. He and his wife had made wills leaving their property to each other, with the exception of $100 he left to his daughter. Mrs. Perrine's estate is $30,000, not including her jewels.

Both died the same day. Had Mr. Perrine died first his property would have gone to his wife and her heirs. She died first, however, and her estate passed to him. Three hours later he died, and as his sole heir the daughter now gets both estates.

BEQUESTS NOW LAPSE.

According to the provisions of the will of Charles G. Crawford, formerly of Plainfield, which was filed recently for probate in New York city, the widow and Edward J. Patterson, of this city, were named as executors. The entire estate is left to the widow. The bequests referred to in the will, among them that of the residuary estate to Muhlenberg Hospital, were contingent upon Mrs. Crawford dying before the testator, it is stated that inasmuch as she has survived him these bequests now lapse.

LITTLE GIRL RUN OVER.

Frank Handville, of 716 South avenue, reported to the police shortly before noon today that while driving an automobile owned by the Queen City Laundry he had accidently run over 2-year-old Bertha Walter, of 421 East Sixth street, in front of her home. The girl walked into the road from the sidewalk without seeing the approaching car, but Dr. Pratt, who was called, said that she had suffered nothing worse than bruises.

FAIRY LAND of EVANGELINE HEARS TRAMP of SOLDIERS PITCH THOUSANDS of TENTS AMID APPLEBLOSSOMS OF ACADIAN VILLAGES

INDUSTRIES FORGOTTEN in DORMANT DAYS SPURRED to LIFE by WAR'S DEMANDS

LIKE the Green Isle of Erin, the Land of Evangeline is the "home of the lost cause" and the scene of a real love romance which for self-sacrifice, heroism and devotion, as told in Longfellow's famous poem, ranks amongst the greatest love stories in world literature, and is accounted the most tragical and moving of them all.

The tramp of soldiers through Nova Scotia has completed a cycle of years and brought an awakening there which for a conservative country is portentious indeed. War's demands industrially have made her realize that she has been sleeping. Her cities and seaports fairly hum now and her merchants have unfamiliar prosperity.

Amid her "hundred miles of apple blossoms" are pitched the tents of khaki-clad men answering the call of their country and only resting within her gates until ordered "over seas." Government pay checks, war orders, bright crop prospects and a demand for her products have made the Nova Scotians happy.

Realizing that her sons and daughters are scattered over Canada and the United States, having given their brain and brawn to the development of both, Nova Scotia has inaugurated a "letter writing week," in which those who have stayed at home are writing to those who have migrated, asking them to return and visit the scenes of years gone by.

NOVA SCOTIAN NAMES HIGH IN ALL AMERICA

For generations Nova Scotia's sons have sought fortunes anywhere but at home. On both sides of the forty-ninth parallel those who have come from Acadia have written their names high. So high in fact that those who stayed at home have asked: "What might we not have had if we had kept the brains and energy that have gone from here?"

Boards of trade in every Nova Scotian city and town are now uniting to develop the riches unquestionably there and to give the coming generations an opportunity to express themselves in deeds at home rather than elsewhere. Industries long semi-dormant are spurred to capacity by the demands of war. New ones have been started. Campaigns are in swing to educate the farmers to use their land to the best advantage, to raise sheep, to do things others are doing elsewhere—in fact, to progress.

What bonnie Scotland's plains and hills, lakes and fells, battle fields and shrines were, and are yet, to England's myraid hosts of nature-lovers and tourists, such, for three quarters of a century, has been the "Land of Evangeline," in Nova Scotia, to tens of thousands of tourists from the United States and to many from other foreign countries.

In summer made golden with sunshine and magical with the loveliest beauties of Nature, the Land of Evangeline teems with absorbing historic romance. Small as its area is, it contains much of the magical, mystical beauty of Nature—so much romance of legend, tradition, heroism, faith and love.

QUAINT GRAND PRE CENTERS ROMANCE LAND

The Land of Evangeline is suffused with the imaginative beauty which the fancy weaves around moss-grown fortresses and ancient indecipherable tombstones; with the pathetic, wistful appeal to the heart which is awakened by relics that recall—

"Far-off, old, unhappy things
And battles long ago."

The magic of earth, the romance of pioneer life in the "forest primeval," of massacre, of warfare, of heroism, of self-sacrifice and devotion, and the poetry of the tragical love of a winsome Acadian maiden—these have transmitted the Land of Evangeline into a centre of compelling interest to nature-lovers, students of history, archaeology and literature, and to holiday seekers and tourists in general. They have made a perennial shrine of the quaint village of Grand Pre, which was the home of Evangeline, and its picturesque relics and environs, Evangeline's well, the site of the forge of Basil, the blacksmith, the house of Father Felician, the old willows (a group still standing), the site where stood the house in which "Boy Blue" was wedded on the night Coylon de Villiers massacred the British in the village of Melancon, 1747, the Basin of Mines and blue-crested Blomidon, standing stark, sheer and silent like a mighty sentinel of this real land of romance.

NOVA SCOTIA HAS MANY SOLDIERS NOW

PORTS ARE BUSY

HUNDRED MILES of APPLE BLOSSOMS

AN OX-MOBILE

PLEASANT FARMS GREET THE EYE

Then there are the pleasant meadow and village of Grand Pre, the town of Wolfville, which is the railway centre for American tourists visiting the home of Evangeline and its environs, the Annapolis Valley, the towns of Annapolis Royal and Digby, both picturesque and romantic, and the sequestered French Acadian settlement of Clare, where the ancient Norman customs and manners of dress still obtain. All these places are genuine shrines of thousands of tourists.

The illustrations to this article show, in part, the natural beauty of Grand Pre, the home of Evangeline. The Grand Pre Railway station is three miles east of Wolfville, an educational and summer resort centre on the line of the Dominion Atlantic Railway. The village of Grand Pre in the Acadian days lay in the fertile meadow. The original landscape remains practically unchanged. The older portions of the ancient dykes which reclaimed the salt marshes from the sea can still be seen. A visitor can still look upon the breeze-ruffled waters of the Basin of Minas and, perhaps, watch white winged boats glide over them with the gr[illegible] a gull in the air. He can still behold [illegible] Blomidon looming in the distance, dark, high-crested and silent, if the day is bright; forboding or ominous if the day is clouded.

In one part of the meadow stand what remains of the willows planted there by the original Acadians. Also to be seen is the well which some are pleased, through poetic sentiment, to name "Evangeline's Well," but which more likely was the source of the general water supply for the village. Only the reputed sites of the forge of Basil, the blacksmith, and of Father Felician are shown to the tourist. But he will be shown the real site of the village of Melancon, where the French under de Villers massacred a body of New England troops in the dead of winter, nine years before the expulsion of the Acadians. Portions of the church of St. Charles, including the foundations of the chimney and the fireplace built by the soldiers who were quartered in the church during the expulsion, were recently discovered. The lovely Evangeline herself, of course, and her pretty docile "bell-heifer" have long, long ago turned to dust. For her sad story and her tragic search for her lover, one must turn to Longfellow's celebrated poem, but the Land of Evangeline is by itself a little [illegible]d of wondrous enchantment.

PROVIDE MANAGEMENT AS WELL AS PROPERTY

Many an intelligent man makes a will and then congratulates himself upon having done his whole duty by his family. He has done well, to be sure, but not well enough. Multitudes of inexperienced beneficiaries under a will have been seriously burdened and handicapped by the sudden acquisition of property the care of which they do not understand. This difficulty may be obviated by appointing The Plainfield Trust Company as

FIVE KILLED BY AIR BOMBS ON ITALIAN COAST

Army of Czar Nears Lemberg, Capital of Galicia, and Main Obstacle Has Been Removed—German Lines Weakened by Taking Large Numbers of Men Away to Stop the British Advance.

Petrograd, July 29.—The Russians have scored new and enormous successes on a front of almost fifty miles, and by capturing the main obstacles in the path to Lemberg, capital of Galicia, fifty-five miles away, Petrograd officially announced today.

West of Lutsk the Austro-German lines have been broken and the Teutons are being pursued south after having lost 9,000 prisoners and many guns. It is believed the Austro German armies now will have to retire rapidly to the westward as they are in danger of being enveloped.

The Russians advanced so swiftly to Brody, General von Linsingen's army could not get away with its stores, and fires and explosions last night indicate they were destroyed. Brody is the most important station between Lemberg and Dubno on an excellent railroad, and is the key to a rich oil and mineral district. Thee War Office's night report says:

Longueval in British Hands.

London, July 29.—The British forces, after the fiercest fighting yet seen on the Somme, are now in full possession of the entire village of Longueval, it was officially announced today. The last German strongholds have been captured and maintained against fierce counter attacks.

The British forces registered two great successes during the the day. The other was the complete clearing of the Delvill Wood after attack and counter attack, all marked by a recklessness almost unparalleled.

Steamer Goes Ashore.

London, July 29.—The Norwegian steamer Locksley, bound from America to Norway with a cargo of cereals, has gone ashore on one of the Orkney Islands. It probably will be able to get off without serious damage. The cargo is being discharged.

Three Airships Raid England.

London, July 29.—The War Office today gave out the following statement:

"Three airships raided the East Coast at midnight. Thirty-two bombs weere dropped on Lincolnshire and Norfolk. The damage was immaterial. There were no casualties. Our anti-air craft guns drove off the airshps whch were hampered by the fog."

Ar Raid Over Italy.

Rome, July 29.—Five persons were killed and wounded in a new Austro-Hungarian air raid over the Italian coast, the Ministry of Marine announced today.

Steamer Escapes Submarine.

"A submarine attacked the Red Italia while proceeding to New York. The steamship opened fire and finally escaped."

A thorough investigation of the condition of the water courses through Plainfield is being made by members of the East End Civic Association, with a view to ascertaining the causes of the recent flood and that of last year, and suggesting possible remedies. Those in charge of the arrangements are leaving no stone unturned that will insure a large and enthusiastic demonstration. Carnegie Hall has been selected as the place where the faithful from far and near will gather to hear Mr. Hughes formally notified that he is the Presidential nominee on the Republican ticket. It will be the first general gathering of the clans, and the managers hope to make it a get-together affair which will bring all factions solidly behind the Hughes' ticket. The Progressives will be given an important role. The chief features of the program will be the notification address by Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, and the address of acceptance by Mr. Hughes. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the party leaders and invited guests will adjourn to the Hotel Astor, where Mr. Hughes will hold a public reception.

Insure Against Disappointment, Give Standing Order Now for the Plainfield Daily Press

O-ving to the shortage of news print paper throughout the United States, the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS will be one non-returnable after July 31st. This means that no un... copies of the DAILY PRESS will be accepted from newsdealers. Naturally newsdealers will order only suffi... copies of the DAILY PRESS to supply REGULAR CUSTOMERS.

...you have been in the habit of buying your copy of the Daily Press from a newsboy or newsdealer, or have been buying a copy three or four times a week, let us urge you to GIVE A STANDING ORDER to have a copy of the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS delivered to your home or laid aside each night. By so doing you will make sure of having the PRESS when you wish it.

Newspapers throughout the country have been putting this same into effect for months, but we have held off taking action hoping conditions would improve. Such has not been the case, however. Daily has the price of news stock been advanced, but the paper mills are sending out notices to the effect that the supply may have to be curtailed at any time by the cutting in half of orders received from newspapers. We are therefore taking the above mentioned step in order to conserve our supplies.

THRONG ATTENDS GOVERNOR'S DAY

Politicians Came by the Hundred From Five Counties.

UNION DELEGATION BIG

Frelinghuysen Sized Up as Strong Candidate in Gubernatorial Race—Significance Placed in Statement Issued by Ernest R. Ackerman.

(From Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 29.—Not in recent years has there been so large a gathering on Governor's Day at Sea Girt, as that which greeted Governor Fielder here yesterday afternoon, and watched him review the Second regiment. The politicians came by the hundreds from Union, Monmouth, Somerset, Middlesex and Mercer counties. Governor Fielder and his aides were kept busy trying to make them comfortable, and it was nearly seven o'clock before the last of the visitors departed.

There were candidates for every State office and among the Republicans plenty of men who are seeking legislative and county positions, but men from several counties declared that the President's party has as yet found no one to run for many of the minor positions.

It was generally noised around before the day was over that former Governor Edward C. Stokes was to announce that he would not be a candidate for United States Senator at a meeting in Newark last night, and discussion naturally turned to the effect on Joseph T. Frelinghuysen in his fight aginst former Governor Franklin Murphy. The general impression was that while Stokes would have gotten a good sized vote in Essex county, which would have cut into Murphy there, the failure of Stokes to enter the race had materially benefitted Mr Frelinghuysen elsewhere in the State Not a few of those present placed considerable significance in the statement issued on Thursday by former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, in which he declared in favor of Mr. Frelinghuysen. It was pointed out that Mr. Ackerman in the past has made a very careful study of the situation before taking a definite stand, and that he has usually sided with the Kean faction in the county in all his political moves. Many people went so far as to express the belief that Mr. Kean would be found on the Frelinghuysen side of the fence, and would be a candidate for United States Senator in 1919 to succeed William Hughes.

The Congressional fight in the Fifth district was also much under discussion, not only with the visitors from Union county, but from other counties nearby, the interest being created because of the opposition of the commuters in the district to John H. Capstick on account of his vote on the Lemore resolution. Former Congressman William E. Tuttle was in the crowd that attended the luncheon and he made the first definite statement regarding his position to the Daily Press representative, when he admitted that he would be a candidate.

"Yes," said Mr. Tuttle, when questioned about the matter. "I will be a candidate for Congress. I do not expect to be opposed at the primaries as I have been promised by persons in all factions of the Democratic party that they would support me, and would do all they could to prevent anyone coming out against me. This is true in Morris as well as Union county. I shall prepare a formal statement in a few days in which my program will be set forth."

Richard Boardman, of Plainfield, who will seek the nomination on the Republican ticket, was also a visitor and he spent his time shaking hands and getting acquainted with the men from Union county whom he had not met before. Former Congressman Charles N. Fowler, who is the other avowed candidate against Mr. Capstick, was not here, but he was not without supporters in the group of Union county men present.

That the Republican Assemblymen of last year would be re-nominated without oposition was the expression of all from Union county. On the Democratic side the only names that have been mentioned for the three places are Edward J. McGrath, a young lawyer of Elizabeth, and Dennis F. Hennesy, of the same city.

The Colgate campaign in Union county still seems to be in the air, as not one has yet been found according to Frank J. Bock, his campaign manager, to take charge of the fight there. It is expected that some one will be found within a few days The county Republican organization is apparently a unit for Walter E. Edge.

In the Third district Thomas J. Scully will undoubtedly be the Democratic candidate for Congress, although he protested yesterday afternoon that he had not withdrawn from the United States Senatorial fight. Mr. Scully was suffering from a badly swollen jaw, as a result of an ulcerated tooth, but he found opportunity to declare that if he did run he would be unopposed for the nomination. Robert Carson, who will seek the nomination against Mr. Scully, was also on hand, and felt quite confident that he would have little dif-

COUNTY HEALTH BOARDS CONFER

Representatives of Fourteen Communities Meet to Discuss Infantile Paralysis.

DR. KALLOCH SPEAKS

Committee Named to Take up Matter of Isolation Hospital With Freeholders—Plan to Erect Building at Elizabeth.

A joint meeting of health officials in Union county, representing Plainfield, Fanwood, Fanwood Township, Westfield, Elizabeth, Mountainside, Clarke Township, Rahway, Summit, Union, Roselle, Roselle Park, Cranford and Garwood, to the number of forty, was held in the town hall at Westfield last night when ways and means were discussed to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis.

A committee composed of Dr. John Drickell, of Rahway, Ronald Riblet, of Fanwood and Henry Miller, of Cranford, was appointed to take up with the Board of Freeholders the matter of establishing a temporary isolation hospital in case the paralysis epidemic becomes serious enough to warrant it. According to the plans of the committee as they will be presented to the Freeholders, the temporary hospital would be built on the grounds adjoining the Elizabeth isolation hospital with the provision that the Board could purchase the main structure if it saw fit. The Freeholders have promised to take action and have asked that the committee be appointed to tell them what the Boards of Health throughout the county want.

Dr. Parker Kallock, a member of the United States Public Health Service, and who is now one of those working to check the epidemic in New York city, made a very interesting address on "Town Quarantine and Town Protection," explaining the best methods to guard against paralysis and how to cope with it when it gets a foothold in a community.

A lecture was given by John Gettings, trolley superintendent of the Public Service Corporation, on the method of cleaning trolley cars. Following his talk those present offered a number of suggestions and Mr. Gettings promised to take advantage of them.

Meetings will be held as often as the occasion requires until all fear of a paralysis epidemic is over. At one of the first meetings it was decided to have a permanent organization to meet at frequent intervals and discuss general health questions of interest.

DEATH SUMMONS MRS. J. W. JACKSON

Well Known Resident Passes Away at Her Summer Home in Thousand Islands.

Mrs. James W. Jackson, aged about 85 years, of 113 Crescent avenue, died early this morning at her summer home in the Thousand Islands, where she and her husband had been since July 4. Mrs. Jackson had been in failing health for some time and her death was not wholly unexpected by the members of the family.

Mrs. Jackson was born in Orange county, N. Y., her maiden name being Susan Cox Weygant. She had been a resident of Plainfield for about forty years. She was a devout Christian woman and for many years had been especially active as a member of the First M. E. church, where she was interested in all the departments and a liberal contributor to the support of the church and denomination. Her death will be a distinct loss to both and will be deeply regretted by a large circle of friends by whom she was highly esteemed.

Beside a husband, Mrs. Jackson is survived by two daughters, Mrs. L. M. French, of North Plainfieeld, and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., of this city. The funeral arrangement will be announced later.

SECOND REGIMENT LEAVES SEA GIRT

Guardsmen Complete Week of Hard Practice at State Camp.

GOOD WORK BY CO. K

Third Regiment, of Camden, Arrives This Afternoon—Governor Fielder Reviews Troops Astride Colonel Colgate's Thoroughbred Steed.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 29.—Nearly nine hundred husky young Americans descended from the steps of a Pennsylvania Railroad train at the station here early this afternoon, formed into a dozen companies, and with their khaki clad bodies swinging along in perfect time to a military band marched past the Governor's cottage on to the big parade gound. It was the Third Regiment of Camden, commanded by Colonel Thomas D. Landon, of Bordentown, and the men were soon at work making a new camp where another had been torn down this morning.

Earlier in the day, 1,014 other young citizen-soldiers, with that confident swing that comes after a week of hard practice in the field, forming the Second Regiment, with headquarters at Trenton, and including Company K, of Plainfield, broke camp, and went to waiting trains to depart for their home stations. When they departed the big parade ground, which they took possession of a week ago, was left as bare as they had found it. Never before in the history of the State Guard has a command left Sea Girt after so strenuous a week of work as was the case with the Second Regiment. The command, recruited to nearly two hundred more than peace strength, with a newly formed machine gun company marching at the rear, was a living example of the efficiency which can be found in the National Guard, an organization which the officers say has been the plaything of politicians for many years, but which is at last being taken seriously.

The week which has just closed has not been one of pleasure for the departing guardsmen. That was quickly proven by merely questioning one or two of the departing troops. If any of the new men came here with an idea that they were to have a vacation at the State's expense their dreams were sudely shattered.

The regiment was up early this morning, and as soon as breakfast was over started breaking camp. It was only the work of a couple of hours to take down the tents, pack the mess equipment, and get ready to move out, and the first section started for Trenton soon after 11 o'clock, with the Union county section going the other way at about the same time.

The incoming regiment has headquarters in Camden, and Companies B, C, D, F and M are stationed at the armory there. Company A makes its station at Salem, E at Mount Holly, G at Ocean City, H at Asbury Park, I at Woodbury, K at Bridgeton and L at Atlantic City. Besides Colonel Landon the staff officers are Lieutenant Colonel Daniel T. Mathers, of Woodbury; Captain J. Walter Scott, of Camden, regimental adjutant, Captain Walter H. Leedom, of Camden, quartermaster, Captain Edmund du Bois, of Woodbury, commissionary, and Captain Charles B. Dubell, of Glassboro, chaplain.

Yesterday afternoon's review of the Second Regiment by Governor Fielder, while it had all the show features of reviews in the past proved to the spectators what New Jersey is doing in the preparedness movement. Only nine companies participated, two being on the rifle range, and one on guard duty, but they made a great showing as they marched past the Executive. Some of the impressiveness of the occasion was upset by the fact that the old gun which had done duty for saluting for many years went out of commission earlier in the week, and the only salutation Governor Fielder and his staff received was from the sirens of hundreds of automobiles which lined two sides of the field. The Governor rode in the conventional frock coat and silk hat, which he had firmly planted on his head against possible trouble with the freakish northeast wind which was blowing. He was accompanied by Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., and his full staff. With Colonel Mather, the Executive rode around the standing troops, the yellow and white Governor's flag flying in the breeze at the end of the long line of mounted officers who followed the leaders.

After the Governor had taken his position on the north side of the parade ground the band started up a lively tune, and the companies marched down the field in fine step as they passed the Executive. As soon as the Governor and his staff had completed the review and left the field the usual evening parade with its flag lowering ceremonies was gone through with, and the hard work of the encampment was completed, except for breaking camp this morning.

Last night the men were given a little more freedom than has been the case the earlier nights in the week, and many of them went to nearby resorts for the evening. But the large majority were ready to turn in, for the work started with the maneuvre at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and they were glad to finish the day's work.

An incident of the review that was known to but few, was the fact that

GOSSIP OF TROOP D CAMP ON THE BORDER; ONLY BATTLES THUS FAR HAVE BEEN WITH MOUSE AND FLY

FORMER PLAINFIELDER ON WAY INTO MEXICO VISITS BOYS FROM HOME—REINHART IS IN HOSPITAL CORPS.

JOE GALLAGHER TEMPORARILY ON SICK LIST

Saddler Updike Has Become Animal Trainer—Wanted Warren Ackerman to Go Into Vaudeville With Him—Severe Storm Blew Down Mess Tent and Bath Houses, But Hurt No One.

The following personal letter from a member of Troop D has been received by a friend in this city:

Douglas, Arizona, July 22.—Johnny Reinhart is back with Troop D. Joe Gallagher has not been feeling well of late, and as he does not obey orders of Sergeant Andrews to stay in his tent and rest I have been detailed as a guard to make him do so today and tomorrow. To quote Sergeant Andrews, "We can't spare good men." Two of the boys are competing for the affections of the same girl, and if you hear of a duel you will know the cause. Reinhart is working in the hospital corps nights, and the fellows in our tent are not getting any sleep. He sits up in bed and yells: "All right, Doc. This fellow will have to lose an arm! Paint it with iodine! Give him two little brown pills!" Chief Kiely's extradition papers will not be good for Johnny now, as he was across the border today in overalls and jumper with a reporter named Chaplain.

Young Kenny, who lives at 736 West Third street, called on the troop today. He is on his way to a town in Mexico for his health, but does not look like he needs to go anywhere for that purpose, and anyway Mexico isn't a very healthy place for Americans just now. He is only going about thirty miles below the border though. He is with a mining engineering corps. His father wrote him and told him we were here, so he spent four hours with us.

Five men lying on the floor of their tent resting on saddles, telling each other how brave they would be if they could only get into action were startled by a small field mouse this afternoon. John Logan beat a retreat through the back of the tent. One of the men who did not see the mouse tried to call Logan, but he couldn't hear. Said there was a rattlesnake in his bed.

The Troop captured and killed a large horsefly this morning. There were no causualities on our side. The enemy was found in Trooper Conway's cot. Conway was tired after a hard day's work—eating—and laid down to sleep. When he saw the horsefly he ran up the company street yelling for the corporal of the guard. He insisted there was a tarantula in his tent. The last seen of Jim he was carrying his dog toward the guard house, saying, "He certainly can't harm me tonight, because there will be 27 men guarding me."

Gordon Stuart has become one of the best horsemen in the camp. Frank Updike, the saddler, has become an animal trainer. He now has two gophers, an eagle and a small burro. When we break camp here he starts for 'Frisco with his vaudeville act. Warren Ackerman was asked to go along as announcer, but said that as soon as he could get back to Plainfield and his Mercer he was going to put on an act of his own. Reggy Roland is next in line for the job, but on account of his being in town, we cannot get a statement from him. Nelson Ramsey has become official engineer of the camp. Gus Fisk and Jim McLean are official trench diggers. "Boss" Andrews bought a new pair of high shoes so he is busy all morning polishing and lacing them. Turk Rigdter has an awful time mornings keeping the recruits from stealing pails and basins, so he cannot wash his face. Sergeant Ralston bought some hair tonic yesterday, trying to make 23 hairs grow on his upper lip instead of 14. Harris D. Rush has been appointed official photographer. He is kept busy, as all his work is done gratis.

A severe storm hit the camp last night, blowing mess flies and bathhouses all over the lot. Roger Mellick has become the best whip of the troop. Last night he drove 16 horses at one time, also all the men out of the tent, in his sleep.

Saturday afternoon and all day Sunday we enjoyed a rest. No drilling. We are all kept busy digging ditches on our time off.

Bill Williams spends eight hours a day blowing the bugle. He has become the best in camp and we are afraid he will be confiscated by headquarters.

The service will be in charge of the Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Gardiner.

A quartet composed of the Messrs. Charles P. Titsworth, Benjamin Whitford, Ernest Whitford and Roy Titsworth will render several selections during the service. The floral pieces already sent to the home are especially beautiful, many of them coming from relatives and friends of the deceased and all bearing silent testimony of the esteem in which Mr. Spicer was held.

The interment will take place in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, Nathan H. Randolph, Dr. Frank S. Wells, Albert Whitford, Joseph A. Hubbard and H. O. Newman.

YOUNG ITALIAN TRIES TO "SHOOT UP" FAMILY

Frank Ross, Incensed Over Arrest, Starts Trouble at Home and Gets Away.

Because he had been arrested at Fanwood earlier in the afternoon on suspicion of having committed a burglary at that place, Frank Ross, an eighteen-year-old Italian, went to his home on Terrill road, just over the Fanwood line, later and threatened to "shoot up" his family. Ross made a getaway when he found the police were on his trail, but a warrant is out for his arrest and he will probably be picked up today.

Ross, who has been in considerable trouble of late, was arrested by Marshal Logan at Fanwood and when searched a number of articles that were stolen from the Bond Varnish Company at that place several weeks ago were found on his person. He said that he had found them in the woods and was let go because of lack of evidence. He became so angered, however, over being arrested that he threatened harm to the members of his family. His father swore out a warrant against him this morning.

FANWOOD CHILD HAS INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Norma Polcanis, aged 3 years, of Fanwood, who several days ago was suspected of having infantile paralysis, is suffering from that disease according to Dr. F. W. Westcott, and as a member of the Board of Health he has established a rigid quarantine at the home. The case was first reported to Dr. Westcott by Dr. Robert Sinclair, of Westfield, the attending physician, and subsequent developments prove that the child has infantile paralysis.

SECOND REGIMENT'S LAST DAY IN CAMP

Many Plainfielders visited the camp yesterday inspecting particularly the Company K headquarters. In the afternoon a dress parade was held and more than 3,000 persons witnessed it.

Lieut. Conklin is still mourning over the fact that he could not get leave of absence from the camp grounds Thursday night. Captain Peterson beat him to it for the one officer's pass allowed each company and the "cap" gave Asbury Park the "once-over."

Fording streams is out of Corporal Miller's line, at least he says it is. While attempting to cross a narrow brook in the sham battle yesterday morning the "corp" took a header, getting in an extra bath at the same time.

Cook Millwater was called home yesterday morning by the illness of his child. His announcement came as a sad blow to the rest of the company with whom he was extremely popular, particularly as a cook. But Private Horton succeeds him and is taking care of the job in fine shape.

Private Bowe spent yesterday doing police duty. Contrary to the general belief that this is an assignment of some importance, it requires the candidate to pick up bits of paper and do plenty of small chores about the camp grounds. It is generally meted out as a punishment and Bowe's case was no exception to this rule.

All of the soldiers killed by Company K in the sham battle returned later in the morning yesterday and began firing at their slayers. All of which goes to show that they didn't do the killing right.

Commenting on the encampment today Captain Peterson, of Company K, said: "My one regret is that we can't spend another week here. Our men are just now hardened to real army life and another six days of drilling would work wonders. It has been one of the most profitable weeks I have ever spent here and although rain has interfered to some extent with our plans sufficient time was found for everything of a hardening up nature except qualification on the ranges. My men didn't get half finished in the time allotted and it will be necessary for us to use the ranges for a day on some future date. The sanitation in the camp has been remarkable this year and the food served is better than ever before. Not a single case of serious illness has come to my attention. Plainfield may well be proud of this delegation of sixty-nine men for it has covered itself with glory while at camp. The work has been hard but the boys were given to understand before leaving home that they shouldn't anticipate a week's vacation and I don't think any one of them did. If he did he got the surprise of his life."

It's one sure bet that the militiamen will keep good hours nights next week. All vow and declare they'll sleep for a month after getting home.

LONG BRANCH SHOW.

Philadelphia exhibitors had their innings at the Monmouth County Horse Show yesterday, Miss Constance Vauclain, Charles E. Coxe and William A. Lieber, all from the Quaker City, having won the first six harness classes on the programme. The prize for four-in-hands was the only one that got away from them. Among those accounted for was the Patten Challenge Cup for gig horses, a $500 trophy, competition, which has been a feature of the annual exhibition at Hollywood Park since 1911. It must be won three times by the same owner to become his property. Judging from yesterday's competition, the gig horse may become extinct before anybody clinches his title to the trophy.

BACK TO MINORS.

Roy Hartzell, for the last ten years one of the most efficient utility players in major league baseball, yesterday was released to the minor leagues by the New York Yankees. Hartzell was turned over to Baltimore, of the International League, in part payment for Elmer Miller, recently recalled by the Yankees.

Hartzell broke into major league baseball with St. Louis in 1904. He played with the Browns at third base, but his fielding versatility made him useful at almost every position on the diamond. He was traded to the Yankees for "Jimmy" Austin, and since joining the Yankees he has played every outfield and infield position.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD AND DUNELLENS CLASH

Dolan, of Jersey City, May Pitch for Villagers Tomorrow.

The South Plainfield baseball team has provded an excellent attraction for tomorrow, realizing that the Royal Giants-Tab game will furnish plenty of opposition. The Southern manager has booked the Dunellen Independents and expects to register a victory. The Dunellen team goes to South Plainfield with a "rep" that must be upheld, and the members of the team have promised to do their utmost to uphold that "rep."

Manager Hamilton, of the South Plainfield team, has signed up George Dolan, of Jersey City, to do the pitching for the villagers. Dolan, now a resident of South Plainfield, has already pitched a few games around these parts and has demonstrated that he ranks with the best of them.

MAX MARSTON WINS OVER N. S. CAMPBELL

T. S. Wheeler, of This City, Was Not Among the Contestants

It is not often that a golf gallery witnesses as pretty a shot as that which netted N. S. Campbell, of Agawam Hunt Club, a "one" at the eleventh hole in his match with Max R. Marston, of Balustrol, in the semi-final round of match play for the first Presidents' Cup at Ekwonak Country Club yesterday afternoon. The hole is 137 yards, and the cup is visible from the tee. The ball struck about five feet short of the pin and went in with one bounce.

The match was not devoid of features otherwise. Mr. Marston's total for the round was 75, and he won by 3 up and 1 to play. His opponent in the thirty-six hole final today will be Nathan W. Wheeler, of Brooklawn, formerly a member of the Yale golf team. Mr. Wheeler's match yesterday afternoon was against R. S. Worthington, of Shawnee, and he was going at about a 77 to win by 4 up and 3 to play.

T. S. Wheeler, of this city, was not among those who contested yesterday.

The best ball contest yesterday afternoon resulted in a tie at 74, between Hamilton K. Kerr, of Greenwich, and Gilman P. Tiffany, of Mohawk, as one pair, and C. H. Gardener, of Agawam, and C. B. Buxton, of Huntington Valley, as the other pair. On the play off Messrs. Kerr and Tiffany were victorious.

FREDDIE WELSH WINS.

The lightweight pugilistic crown still rests serenely on the brown of Freddie Welsh, of England. Before 15,000 people at Washington Park last night the Briton sprang the greatest surprise of his career to date when he decisively outboxed game little Benny Leonard, of Harlem, in a ten-round bout. The Welsh of last night differed greatly from the cautious, stalling mitt manipulator whom New York boxing fans have been accustomed to see go through ten-round mills on simply defensive tactics. So carefully trained that his flesh was pink and his muscles stood out prominently, he fought the best fight he has shown since he took the title from Willie Ritchie in London two years back.

OPEN LETTER

Newark, N. J., July 24th, 1916

UNDER DATE OF JUNE 24th certain labor unions, consisting of the United Brewery Workmen of America, the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, and the Executive Board of the Stationary Firemen, issued an open letter in which they explained the condition of the machinists' strike in certain breweries at that time, and endeavored to show the injustice done to the breweries affected by the strike. They stated very distinctly that the issue was one of jurisdiction and that no boycott or action against any plant is justified under such conditions, as it was well established that the American Federation of Labor has always held that no such action should be taken on account of jurisdictional disputes.

THE SAME DISPUTE arose between the engineers and machinists in Elizabeth, and was referred to the Union County Central Labor Union by the brewers, engineers and machinists, and at a meeting of this Central Labor Union on July 20th they passed a resolution that the machinists in Elizabeth breweries should return to work until the controversy has been settled by the National Unions, in accordance with which the machinists returned to work the next day and have so continued.

THE RULING of the Union County Central Labor Union thus confirms the position taken by the United Brewery Workmen of America, and it is manifestly unjust that any employer should be criticised as unfair when conforming to the ruling of the governing bodies of the union. The ruling of the Union County Central Labor Union is conclusive that our position is correct, that the question as to whether engineers or machinists should do certain work is one of jurisdiction for American Federation of Labor—and not for us—to pass upon.

THRONG AT GOVERNOR'S DAY

ficulty in defeating W. Burt's Havens, of Toms River, who was the candidate in 1914, when Mr. Scully won out.

Attorney-General John W. Wescott was the only one of the United States Senatorial candidates here, and he had a busy time of it shaking hands. Senator Martine was expected up from Washington, but failed to put in appearance.

Other visitors besides those mentioned last night included Republican State Chairman Newton A. K. Bugbee, General Dennis F. Collins, State Commissioner of Education Calvin N. Kendall, Mayor C. E. F. Hetrick, of Asbury Park, Vice Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis, Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen, Senator W. W. Lamonte, Prosecutor Alfred Stein of Union county, State Librarian John P. Dullard, former Senator Jonathan H. Blackwell of Trenton, Judge James P. Connolly of Elizabeth, and former Judge Adrian Lyon of Perth Amboy.

After the guests were seated under the marque tent, and before luncheon was served, Governor Fielder made an appeal for funds for the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League, as he has done on the two preceding days. He told of the needs of the men at the front, but the crowd was not so generous in proportion to its numbers as has been the case the past two weeks, $388.98 being given.

Other visitors from Union county were James J. McCann, John P. Owens, Jacob A. Fass, Jacob Abrams, A. E. Willard, Judge Walter L. Hetfield, Peter Floersch, Hyman Adelberg and William A. Coddington, of Plainfield; Frederick Conlin, of Westfield; County Clerk Abram P. Morris, James P. Kelly, Joseph Simons, of Elizabeth.

2D REGIMENT LEAVES SEA GIRT

Governor Fielder rode a horse belonging to Colonel Austen Colgate that has probably been used in more reviews than any other animal on the Sea Girt grounds. He is a seal brown, Pennsylvania bred animal named "Comet," and he has carried Governors Fort, Wilson and Fielder, General Leonard Wood, General Mills and Captain Boyd, who was killed in the Carrizal action, and numerous other distinguished regular army officers who have visited Sea Girt. Colonel Colgate is very proud of the horse, not only because of the distinguished men that have ridden him, but because of the fact that on three different occasions he has personally been able to ride him from Orange to Sea Girt in one day, a distance of sixty miles.

Westfield.

The entire local police force, four in number, have joined the Rifle club.

Flower Designs in Place of Initials

In one household where there are six girls, several have initials alike. They decided instead of using letters or monograms to mark their wash cloths and towels to use flowers that could be easily embroidered, and then each would be able to tell at a glance to whom the towel belonged and thus avoid confusion.

In these days of "swat the fly and kill the germs," the girls believe that each and every one should have an individual bath outfit.

To Have Variety.

Each selected a different flower and embroidered it in colors on the various articles. A pansy, geranium, nasturtium, forget-me-nots, daisy and a rose were selected. Though each one kept the flower first selected, she varied the colors and arrangement, and by doing this the towels were very pretty and so very different that it was a simple matter for each to distinguish her special towel at a glance.

The youngest girl usually worked her rose in cross stitch, sometimes the rose was yellow with brown leaves, and again it would be pink or blue with green leaves.

The others worked their flowers in satin outline, seed, darning stitch and French knots, and it would be hard to say which is the prettiest.

Crocheted Edge on Linen Parasols

We have had embroidered, painted and appliqued parasols, and also some very good-looking ones with inserts of filet crochet, but the very newest idea is much more simple and equally as pretty. On the edge of linen parasols a narrow edging of crochet is worked, usually in coarse white thread.

Open the parasol, then place a piece of adhesive tape over the forefinger of your left hand, to protect it from the crochet needle. Then take the crochet needle and cotton and work any simple pattern that you know around the edge.

It only takes a short time to ornament a parasol in this manner, and when finished you will find yourself the possessor of the very latest in parasols.

Georgette Crepe

There is hardly a woman who does not know Georgette crepe. It needs no description to introduce it, for it has been used for blouses, frocks, chaperaux, underthings and negligees and really scarcely an item of milady's needs can be mentioned without remembering some beautiful garment carried out in this diaphanous yet durable material.

There is no material that can be substituted for it. The new material created by Rodier is really a heavier crepe, with all the charm and character of the former, but of a richer quality, especially fashioned for wear in the winter.

Y. M. C. A. WORK IN VALPARAISO

Interesting Phase of Movement in Which Local Association Has Part.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A., as part of its work, is helping, through a special fund, to support the work for young men and boys in Valparaiso, Chile. The following letter from Mr. Turner, Plainfield's South American secretary, gives an interesting view of one phase of the work:

"When the United States armored cruiser Tennessee arrived at Valparaiso, Chile, April 15, for a visit of several days, the Young Men's Christian Association sent out the following invitation:

"'You are invited to use the privileges of the Young Men's Christian Association. Bowling, billiards, tearoom, writing material, latest magazines, money changed, information given.'

"When the sailors left to go ashore an officer stood at the head of the gangstair and called: 'Go to the Y. M. C. A. They will change your money at $5.75.' Four hundred and fifty landed that afternoon. About 200 of them at once packed into the Association lobby to change their money into Chilean currency and to get information. Those who did not come to the association had had the exchange fixed by the announcement made on the boat, hence they were all given a square deal. A list of tariffs of public utilities, such as automobiles, coaches, theatres, roller-skating, street cars, and ascensers, was posted in the lobby. There was also a list of prices of postal cards and postage rates.

"The association has no dormitories and was not prepared to take care of the men during the night, but association men helped them to find suitable accommodations. By midnight all available beds were occupied, including twenty cots at the Seaman's Mission and a dozen at the Salvation Army. Many preferred to 'deck' on the gymnasium floor in the association rather than return to the ship. The following day blankets and mattresses were secured. Sunday night sixty-one slept at the rooms; Monday night, ninety-three; and on Tuesday night, 116, using chairs, ping-pong and billiard tables as well as the floor.

"There was an average of sixty sailors in the rooms all the time using the privileges and seeking information. Over 300 letters and postal cards were written. On Sunday evening a special song service and an evangelistic talk were attended by a fair number. The tea room served beefsteak, potatoes and onions, ham and eggs, coffee, tea, sandwiches, cakes chocolate, fruits, and all kinds of soft drinks, to hundreds day and night.

"Fifteen members of the association, including the president of the board, rendered volunteer service in taking care of the visitors, working until after midnight every night, and some even until time to go to their work in the morning. The sailors were very appreciative of what the association did for them. Many were extravagant in their thanks. Others spoke of the fine treatment they were receiving both at the association and elsewhere in Valparaiso."

MISS LAURA GUSTAFSON WILL BE THE SOLOIST

The half hour of music in the City Park which is given every Sunday afternoon at 5:15 drew a very large gathering last Sunday and a most interesting half hour was spent in singing. The soloist tomorrow afternoon will be the popular soprano soloist of the First Methodist church, Miss Laura E. Gustafson. Miss Gustafson possesses a beautiful colotura voice, which she uses to splendid advantage, and her singing always pleases her audiences.

She has been the soloist at many large concertts and recitals in New York and Brooklyn and the Recreation Committee is pleased to be able to announce her as the soloist at one of their open-air musicales. Last Sunday there were many people standing in the park, the committee wishes all to feel free to use the platform seats for this half hour. Come to this Community Musical tomorrow and enjoy the music in the cool of the afternoon in the coolest place in the city.

MANY PLANS FOR AUTOMOBILE GARAGES ARE FILED WITH BUILDING INSPECTOR

Expenditures Represented by This Week's Permits Aggregate $5,980, Making a Total of $577,395.00 for the Year.

The past seven days at the building inspector's office have been known as "garage week," because six of the eight permits filed and approved were for garages, and one for a tire repair shop and one for an extension. In all they represent an expenditure of $5,980. That brings the total for the month up to $80,230, and $577,395.00 for the year.

Leon Wolf, of 1203 Martine avenue, filed plans for the erection of a frame garage, 18x18x20. It will cost $600 and will be built by Jeremiah Manning. Charles T. Snyder is to erect a garage measuring 17x17x22 at his home, 681 Belvidere avenue, to cost $630. George Fischer drew the plans and Jeremiah Manning will do the carpenter work.

William H. Schaefer filed plans for a frame garage to cost $100 to be built at his home, 318 East Sixth street. It will measure 12x12x15. Charles P. Huston is to build a garage at 686 West Eighth street at a cost of $150. It will be of frame construction and built by Jeremiah Manning. Charles Zwaan will build a garage for himself at 216 Prescott place at a cost of $100, its mesurements to be 12x12x16. Alexander Milne will do the carpentry work and Alfred De Nise the masonry work on a garage and workshop to be erected for Charles W. Spicer at 417 Central avenue. It will be one story and measure 20x20x40.

Plans were filed for the erection of a brick building, the plans of which were printed exclusively by The Daily Press last Saturday, to be built on Fourth street, for Isabel Laing. It will be one story, 30x30x40. The estimated cost will be $1,500. The plans were drawn by George Fisher. W. H. Pangborn's Son, and Alexander Milne will do the work.

J. H. Jungclaus submitted plans for an extension to be built onto his home at 836 West Third street, at a cost of $1,900. It will be of frame construction and one story in height, while the measurements will be 25x14x40. George Forguson will do the work.

Plans are out but have not yet been filed with the building inspector for approval that will call for contracts running into many thousands of dollars. Probably the most extensive ones are those of the Bosch Magneto Company, of South avenue. Present indications are that the building of two one-story structures at the South avenue plant will cost close to $30,000. The plans are at present at the headquarters of the Bosch Company at Hartford, Conn.

One of the buildings is to be a power house and will measure 34x46 feet, while the other, measuring 38x80 feet, will be used as a storage room. Both of the building will be of re-enforced concrete construction and one story high. The architecture will be in conformity with the present buildings. The structures are to be erected on the northwest side of the concern's property, lengthwise along the railroad tracks.

The contract for the work has been let within the past few days to an out-of-town construction concern, and it is estimated that the improvements will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000.

From a reliable source it was learned today that work would be started as soon as the plans were completed and filed on a building in the rear of the Woodhull & Martin block on East Front street, to be used as a bakery. It will be of brick, fireproof construction, 60x30. It will be two stories and will have an elevator to be used in loading bread, flour, etc. When occupied it will be one of the most modern baking establishments in the city. The Zeek Baking Company is also working on plans for an addition to its plant on South avenue and it is said they will be ready in a few days.

The Hillside Realty Company has completed plans for the building of a structure on Putnam avenue, near Hillside, at a cost of $5,400. It will be of frame construction, two and one-half stories high, and contain eight rooms and bath. The measurements will be 26x36x26. Johnson Bussen, of Hartford, Conn., drew the plans and William Bird is the contractor.

William Abbott, of 134 North avenue, will soon start the construction of a garage at his home, to cost in the vicinity of $350. It will be 24x24x20. Dr. F. C. Ard, of Park avenue, has plans drawn for the erection of an extension to his office, the work to cost about $2,000.

AN EIGHT-ROOM COTTAGE

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

HERE is a very unique and picturesque cottage, having five good rooms on the first floor and three chambers and sleeping porch on the second floor. The arrangement of rooms is suited to an east or south frontage. This cottage was recently built at a cost of $3,000, exclusive of heating and plumbing, and the cost should not exceed $3,700 in any locality. The size is 31 feet in width and 27 feet 6 inches depth of main part with a kitchen extension of 12 feet and a front piazza extension of 10 feet. The main roof extends forward and back over the extensions and dormer windows with shed roof in front and rear giving full height to the center room and sleeping porch.

The arrangement of rooms is convenient with two bed rooms on the first floor, a good-sized living room with fireplace and a dining room connected with wide columned opening. The kitchen is well provided with cupboards and is ample in size.

The first story is 8 feet 6 inches in height and the second story is 8 feet high. Each chamber is provided with ample closets and additional space is provided for storage. The sleeping porch over kitchen is finished same as the second story rooms. Walls plastered and inclosed with glazed windows. The first story is finished in oak and the second story finished in birch with good hardwood floors throughout.

The exterior shows a cobblestone foundation and the chimney built of same, the first story is weatherboarded perpendicular with battens and the second story covered with stucco, giving a very pretty and artistic appearance. The roof is shingled and stained. All exterior trimmings and the first story boarding is to be stained brown with the window sash painted white. This design is well suited to a corner lot and makes an unusually pretty cottage.

IN THE SUBURBS

Dunellen.

Ground has been broken for a new house to be erected for George A. Herman on Lincoln avenue.

Work is being hustled by Contractor Charles G. Wrage and his employes on the three houses which he is building in Equator Park. Two have already been roofed in and the other is nearing that point.

A further big improvement has been made within the past week at the Brunson tract by the laying of concrete sidewalks along both the North avenue and Jefferson avenue frontages of that desirable piece of property.

Scotch Plains.

Building is practically at a standstill in Scotch Plains. No realty transfers have been filed in some time, and the only prospect the builders seem to have for the near future is the building of the eight-room addition to School No. 1. The only house in the course of construction at the present time is for John Haig that is being built by Albert Macauley.

Fanwood.

The H. C. Lockwood Company has reported a number of transfers of lots during the past few days to people coming mostly from New York. The majority of the persons acquiring the property intend to build in the near future. John Rahl will move from New York to his house on Midway avenue in another week, and A. D. Beeken has finished extensive alterations to his home on North avenue.

South Plainfield.

Building is very quiet in South Plainfield with little prospect of improvement in the fall.

PLANS READY FOR REMODELING STRUCTURE ON FRONT ST.

Architects are now working on plans that will be filed in the course of another week with Building Inspector Doane that will call for an expenditure of between $1,500 and $2,000 for the remodeling of the frame dwelling at 110 West Front street. Work is to be started as soon as the plans are approved and it is expected the building will be cempleted by September 1.

One of the principal changes will be the putting of a new front on the building. The rear of the structure will be extended toward Green brook and the additional room will be used as a kitchen for the lunchroom that will occupy the first floor. The second floor will be turned into a gents' furnishing shop and will be occupied by one of the local haberdashers.

BIDS OPENED FOR BUILDING ADDITION AT SCOTCH PLAINS

The Fanwood Township Board of Education has advertised bids to be opened on August 4 for the building of an eight-room addition at School No. 1, Scotch Plains. It will be two stories high and of brick. Repairs will be made to the main structure at the same time and the estimated cost of the entire work will be in the vicinity of $50,000.

Copies of the plans may be secured from Thomas Nichols, Springfield road, Scotch Plains. A bond of $10 will have to be supplied for their safe return.

BUILDING NOTES

Contractors have finished the erection of the Pittis block on East Front street, near Watchung avenue.

Work is being pushed forward rapidly on the house of Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and the dwelling will be completed early in the winter.

Work has been started tearing down the dwelling on Second street, opposite the Plainfield Theatre. An apartment building is to be erected on the site by a joint company composed of several local business men.

Daley Brothers moved today from East Front street to the former Sattel store on North avenue. The store has been remodeled.

Work has been completed redecorating the interior of the Plainfield Theatre.

VISCOS CO. WILL NOT BUILD AT FINDERNE

Labor Conditions Will Prevent Erection of Large Textile Plant.

Owing to labor conditions and because of its inability to make suitable arrangements with the Public Service Electric Company, one of the largest textile concerns of the country has given up its original plan of building at Finderne. Several months ago an option was filed for 205 acres of the Shaw estate at the latter place. Thomas Van Syckel also had an option on 300 acres in the immediate vicinity of the Shaw property.

These options were procured in the interest of the Viscos Company, which had been planning to build three large factories. Representatives of the Viscos Company upon investigating labor conditions in this vicinity found them unfavorable and they were also unable to secure a satisfactory agreement for electric power. It is understood that they would have used $150,000 worth of electric power a year and they wanted the same rate they were getting in other places where they had planned to build.

A NEW SPIRIT IN CIVIC BETTERMENT

Civic Improvement Has Been Lacking in Constructive Imagination.

Civic improvements should not necessarily mean the enhancement of a city's scheme of beautification through governmental action. It might be quite the contrary. The effort of the individual ought to signify as much in spirit, at least, as the concerted effort of a community. It is the individual spirit that is important. Let that spirit be given expression and its effect should be one of real value. It shows the need and leads the way.

The point, however, is this. According to noble Foster Hoggson, "efforts along the lines of least resistance, though highly laudible in themselves, most often are so thoroughly individual and disconnected that results little or no relationship between older building and new structures erected, or between the new structures themselves. And, of course, there is no unity of the whole.

The defect has been lack of co-operation; the failure to bring about concerted action of property owners in the improvements and beautification of their own holdings to harmonize with their surroundings. Certain European countries, in an effort to solve the problem, have created commissions not unlike our building departments, but which have broader scope and power, whose function it is to look the aesthetic as well as the practical phases of any proposed improvements in its larger relationsip to the neighboring setting and surroundings.

Here in America many of the larger cities have created town planning bodies. The move, at least, is constructive. That it is too late to undo much of the harm already suffered only adds emphasis to the need. The problem now is not so much to correct past mistakes of others—that cannot be done—as it is to soften the ugly scarifications, and plan for future growth. These organizations are concerned, for the most part, with the preservation of park areas and the creation of new parks, and occasionally new civic centres.

"It is the smalle cities and suburban towns that present greater opportunities. Here the larger aspects can be considered. They have not sinned beyond redemption. Still better, they want to be saved. The altered attitude of the last ten or fifteen years in regard to taxation imposed for civic improvements establishes that fact. It has not been many years since a proposal on the part of a municipality to expend any fair sum of money on parks, for instance, was met with most violent opposition. This is particularly true in one city in the Middle West that now boasts of the finest system of parks and drives in this country. Here the opposition at first was vitriolic.

"At the same time the downtown section of that city is about as ugly and unattractive as any of the numerous ugly and unattractive business districts in most American cities. No attention was paid to establishing a small park or breathing spot anywhere near the heart of the town, nor was any necessity seen for a civic centre.

"There has been and still is woeful lack of constructive imagination in connection with consistent and united and comprehensive civic improvement. It is not that we lack vision—because we do not—but we are apt to be satisfied with vision alone—to let the ideal picture in our minds satisfy our sense of need, rather than take action to transform it into an actuality."

A REMEDY.

The flood of Wednesday evening was very sudden, surprising and harrassing. Its cause a quick and heavy rainfall in Washington Valley. The dams did not burst and if they had the water retained behind them would not have been of sufficient volume to have caused the trouble. It is possible for a like condition to be repeated at any time. In the Scotch Plains notch on the Blue brook dam, just above the junction of Blue and Green brooks, is stored a small wooden snow plough and some small timber which were not washed over the top of the dam thus proving that Blue brook could not have been unusually high. There is every evidence, however, to show that Green brook was a raging, irresistible torrent. It seems also clear that the unusual and great volume of water which came from the Scotch Plains notch was more than could be carried off by Green brook. It overflooded the lands to a considerable depth in Scotch Plains, and crossed East Front street just above Terrill road, running from thence with a strong and deep current into Second street and the territory drained by Cedar brook. The rise at Coles' Hill prevented this water from running down East Front street. Green brook again jumped its banks between Netherwood and Farragut avenues, thus flooding the streets and doing damage to property in the First and Second wards of Plainfield. The East End should not be despondent because of this occurrence. It is high land, good soil, and desirable from every point of view as a residential section and it is sure to grow and to develop. What is the remedy?

First. It is important that all dams and obstructions of whatever character should be promptly removed from both Green and Cedar brooks.

Second. The present unfortunate situation should if possible be turned into an asset which may be realized by the creation of depressed streets or waterways, fifty to sixty feet wide, constructed along the natural flow of these high waters. High water is an exception, five years or more have elapsed without any floods and then we may have two or three within a year. The suggested depressed streets or waterways could be made places of beauty. They could be kept open and clean and large stretches could be utilized as playgrounds for children, because the average time that they would be covered with water to any depth would not be apt to be more than two or three days a year. Cedar brook especially could be wonderfully improved and particularly that part from North avenue to Terrill road; it could be made a place of attraction for the East End rather than a detriment. Similar depressed streets or waterways could be constructed from East Second street, near Terrill road, across to Green brook, and also from a point near Farragut road and Front street to Cedar brook. If it is not possible to confine these flood waters within Green brook, then it appears that these suggestions may prove to be a profitable and practical remedy.

The Portly Gent.

When any feller's fat
I want to tell you that
He gets so much good advice
That's free and without price.
And every friend he knows
Speaks of his adipose
In terms that are sarcastic,
And mentions cures most drastic.
They tell him he will croak;
That it's no idle joke
If he does not get wise
And go and exercise.
He starts in right away,
But when he skips a day
He finds that he weighs more
Than e'er he did before.
He frazzles in the heat;
His misery is complete.
When good old-fashioned summer
Puts him right on the hummer
Folks look at him askance
And don't grant him a chance
To live more than a year;
And that they shed a tear,
And say: "Goodby, dear one,
You're too fat by a ton."
But still in spite of that
The people who are fat
Live on.

A Wonderful Dog.

A friend of ours has a most remarkable dog. It is a hunting dog, also a fishing dog. Perhaps you have never heard of a fishing dog, but that doesn't hurt the story a bit.

When the men get out of an automobile with shot guns, the dog knows they are going after partridges and immediately gets busy chasing the birds. If they get out of the automobile with rifles, the dog knows they are after rabbits and starts out accordingly. It takes a wise dog to distinguish between a shot gun and a rifle.

The other day the hunters when they got out of the automobiles each one had a fishpole in his hands. The dog knew they were after fish and immediately started over the hill and disappeared from view. The men knew there was no water within ten miles of the spot where they stopped and wondered where the log could have gone.

In half an hour the dog returned and in his mouth he held a large piece of dried codfish, which he had stolen from a grocery store twelve miles away.

A Modern Courtship.

Hank annexed a motorcycle
Of the chugging, snorting kind;
Then he went and called for Sadie,
And she clambered on behind.

Through the streets they snorted,
Forty-seven miles an hour,
Scaring people, dogs and horses,
Always crowding on more power.

Sadie wrapped both arms around him
And she hung on for dear life,
Faster, faster, cutting through the Atmosphere just like a knife.

Jolting, jarring, popping, snapping,
Life the fourth day of July,
On the wings of John D.'s petrol
Did our Hank and Sadie fly.

Hank he hollered: "Honest, Sadie,
Ain't it what you might call bliss?
'Tis a cinch, my little lady,
I could ride through life like this."

"There ain't nothin' to prevent it,"
Screamed our Sadie in his ear,
But the motor was so noisy
Hank could not exactly hear.

Seven times did Sadie scream and
Try to make him understand;
Finally he got her answer,
And he blushed to beat the band.

Then he turned around to kiss her,
'Tis a foolish thing to do
When you're on a bumpy highway,
And you're hitting fifty-two.

Some time later they were rescued,
They were hanging in a tree;
Sadie, she was bruised and shaken,
Hank had just a busted knee.

In the hospital they married,
Showing that they still had spunk;
Then he sold his motorcycle
To a man who dealt in junk.

That was many moons ago and
Now on cycles they don't ride;
But they use a horseless carriage
With a cherub tucked inside.

THE SCIENTIST WHO PREDICTED A COLD SUMMER

NEW JERSEY ENCAMPMENT IS RECOVERING FROM TERRIFIC ELECTRIC AND WIND STORM

Guardsmen Have Been Busy Since Saturday Clearing up Debris and Repairing Damage to Camp.

(By Harry H. Kroh.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 24.—Out of the ruins of the terrific storm that swept the New Jersey encampment Saturday night the men are today trying to restore some semblance of order and comfort. The entire day yesterday was given over to clearing up the debris of the storm, and while the torn and tumbled tents are all up again so that the men have a place to sleep, there is considerable damage that will take a number of days to offset. It was the most terrific storm that had struck camp since the New Jersey boys came down, and while the natives promise more hair-raising exhbitions of lightning, wind and rain that of Saturday night was sufficiently severe to give the men a high respect for the weatherman that reigns over this end of the land.

With lightning-like rapidity the tively clear sky and shrieked through tively clear sky and chrieked through the camp with a fury that excusably struck terror into the hearts of the men, the most of whom were quartered under the tents. The flapping of the canvas sounded like a veritable cannonade with the crack of lightning, and the snap of thunder in accompaniment. Men, the greater number of them partially unclothed, sprang from under the tents at the first warning of the 80-mile gale. Gamely they clung to the tent ropes and tugged at them in an effort to keep the big pyramidal tents from collapsing. Their efforts were like those of pigmies compared to the relentless force of the winds and the gale took down tents as a mowing machine lays flat the grain.

Officers, surprised at the suddenness of the storm, sprang from their tents either to fight for their own possessions or to mingle with their men, advising and encouraging. Through the height of the confusion the men played their soldiering game to the last minute. They even joked while the lightning snapped and cracked about them. Willing hands sprang to the side of those caught under the mess of falling tentage and they ran here and there trying to recover clothing, furniture and other belongings that were picked up and carried away by the storm.

Patients in one of the big hospital tents had to be moved out through the worst of the storm when the tent collapsed, and a few minutes later lightning set fire to a kit bag in the field hospital tent. Two men, stunned by lightning, were thought to have been seriously injured or killed, but they recovered swiftly and are none the worse for the shock.

Company A, of the Fifth Regiment, felt the storm's effects more than any single unit in the camp. Only four of their tents were left standing in the company street when the storm had slackened in its fury, and the men had an opportunity to make a survey of the damage done. Company M, of Rutherford, also of the Fifth Regiment, was hit hard and its temporary commander, Lieutenant Kruitbosch, of Passaic, was cleaned out. His belongings were scattered over the camp before the four winds of the heavens and he has not received his effects yet.

Out along the country road bath houses were twisted and torn to pieces. Several of thes were torn loose completely and left lying high and dry in the middle of the street, the plumbing still standing, but twisted, into mis-shapen and freakish designs. With the exception of possibly five over the entire mile of camp site, there were no cook tents left standing and the heavy cook stoves in a number of them were lifted up and thrown out into the street. Huge army-guns with brakes were pushed back more than one hundred feet by the gale, and tables and chairs were taken through the sides of the tents and thrown two hundred feet across the fields.

Men worked all night attempting to get their tents up again, and details were kept at work policing the camp and looking out for valuable articles that had been scattered in all directions. Darkness interfered with their work, but before morning the camp had been fairly well reestablished or sufficiently to gice the men sleeping shelter.

Those men who are got needed today in the reconstruction work were sent out to the drill grounds for the first day's program of work as laid down in the three months' schedule which constituted an order sent out from brigade headquarters to all of the infantry outfits. The men worked at drill with a vim today and there is every indication that the old dissatisfaction with conditions here is wearing off slowly.

Major William A. Bryant, of the First Squaron Cavalry and Captain Samuel Bernard, the acting head of the provisional battalion of artillery, have been requested to formulate a schedule of work with a view to giving the men in their commands systematic training along the same progressive lines, but of a nature suitable, of course, to the respective branches of the service.

Physical examination in the First Regiment have led to the disbarment of about 125 men so far as can be learned. This number includes three line officers, who had various physical disabilities. The regular army inspectors are starting in this week on the first two troops of cavalry who were sent here, Troops B and C, of Newark, and the two battery outfits. How extensive the weeding out will be on the lists of the organization is only conjectural, but judging from the class of men enlisted there are number should not be high.

Brigadier-General Edwin H. Hine and Major Alexander F. Gray, Jr., went to Bisbee by automobile yesterday and inspected the slaughter houses which supply the New Jersey encampment with their meat. They watched the preparation of thee meat from the slaughtering of the cattle and pigs down to the point of shipment to the encampment at Douglas. Tovree & Company, a large establishment, have the contract for supplying the camp and no meat is more than twenty-four hours old when delivered here for cooking. None of it is ever frozen, but it is iced to keep it in the best possible condition.

General Hine and Major Gray expressed their surprises at the cleanliness and efficiency in the handling of the meat, and expressed their appreciation at the efforts being made to safeguard the health of the New Jerseymen by the careful and sanitary handling of their meat supply.

Douglas is entirely cleaned out of lumber and when more will be received is a question. The encampments have bought up every available board and the directions to the quartermaster's department to build permanent mess halls and kitchens must be held up pending the arrival of the lumber necessary for the work.

Church services for the entire brigade were held yesterday in the rear of the First Regiment. The Rev. James Madison Hare, Fourth, conducted the services. The scripture was read by Captain Warren P. Coon, of the First Regiment and Chaplain Charles W. Gulick, of the Fifth, preached. Chaplain Hare later in the day officiated at the Douglas Baptist church, where he was received by a crowded church.

The big dedication ceremony for the new home of the local Elks, which was to have been held on August 5, has been postponed until the 12th or the 15th of the month. Many New Jersey Elks have made the most of the fraternal privileges and are to take a prominent part in the dedication of the new home.

Something of a scare spread over the camp last night. A sentry on duty at one of the batteries attempted to halt an automobile that was slipping through camp without any lights lit, and was forced to fire after the occupants refused to heed a second order to stop. The shot was unavailing in stopping the fleeing motorists, but it roused the headquarters row and the batteries. Figures could be seen in the vicinity of the horse corrals, but what their purpose was could not be ascertained. It is believed they were possibly attempting to steal horses.

Plainfield Theatre.

Today's performances of "The Birth of a Nation" will afford playgoers of this city their final opportunity to witness the world famous spectacle in which D. W. Griffith has so skillfully blended the elements of classic opera and virile drama. The production is presented on the same elaborate scale that marked its first appearance here last season, the symphony orchestra and stage effects being especially noteworthy.

So much has been said and written concerning "The Birth of a Nation" that it seems superfluous to dwell upon its story or its unique qualities as a high class theatrical offering. Although film plays a prominent part in its construction, it is vastly more than a motion picture and it surpasses the drama of the legitimate stage to about the same degree that an electric arc outshines a candle glimmer.

The story of the big film opera, taken from "The Clansman," deals with the salient events of the Civil War and reconstruction periods and in its great battle scenes 18,000 people and 3,000 horses are seen. Among the historical personages and happenings depicted are President Lincoln signing his first call for volunteers, Sherman's march through Georgia, the battle of St. Petersburg, Lee and Grant at Appomatox, the assasination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Washington, and the banishment of the carpetbag schemers from the South by the Ku Klux Klan.

The spectacle was eight months in the making and cost $500,000.

- Proctor's Theatre -

A Metro offering is the headline attraction at Proctor's today, entitled "The Snowbird," featuring Mabel Taliaferro, and aside from a well told and well acted picture, this feature combines some of the most pleasing and gorgeous snow scenes ever presented on the screen, which at this time of the year will prove to lessen the thoughts of the oppressive heat which prevails outside of the theatre. Edwin Carewe, the director, appears as a French Canadian of education and mental attainments, living alone deep in the woods. He has inherited valuable land, half of which, through an arrangement made by his father, belongs to John Wheeler, an American banker. Wheeler's daughter, played by Mabel Taliaferro, is sought in marriage by Mitchell, a wealthy young idler, whom she detests, but who proposes to force her into marriage. He does this by getting her father so involved financially that he is in danger of prison unless he can prove his ownership of the Canadian lands. As Carteau, the Canadian, has the only proof of this in existence and refuses to give it up, Wheeler is lost. How Wheeler's daughter slips away to Canada, obtains entrance to Corteau cabin as a boy, how she finally persuades him to save her father, and the fate of Mitchell, is told in a gripping manner and will hold the intense interest of the patrons throughout its entirety. Today also, Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen appear in a pleasing comedy drama, entitled "The Profligate," and several comedy features are also shown.

On Tuesday, the inimitable comedian, now a Triangle star, De Wolf Hopper, is featured in a picturization of his greatest success, "Casey at the Bat." A prominent member of the cast in this production is no other than Frank Bennett, of Watchung, one of the most popular young men in this vicinity, who plays an important part. Mr. Bennett has hundreds of friends and admirers in this section of the State, and they will be pleased to learn that he is to appear at Proctor's in this splendid picture. There will be other pictures Tuesday in addition to the presentation of the eighth episode of "The Secret of the Submarine."

On Monday, by special request, Lillian Walker will be starred in a gripping Vitagraph feature, entitled "The Ordeal of Elizabeth."

PAGE COMING HOME.

London, July 29.—Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador to the Court of St. James, sails for the United States today on a month's leave of absence. While the primary purpose of his trip is to obtain a much-needed vacation, the first he has had in three years, it is understood also that he will confer with the State Department at Washington on the recent "blacklist" and other questions that have arisen between the United States and England as a result of the war. The Ambassador is accompanied on his trip by Mrs. Page.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES

The Road Situation in New Jersey.

The following Questionaire has been received from the State Commission on Road Legislation. It is framed with a view to arousing State-wide interest and discussion of different phases of this important topic of roads.

All the people of New Jersey are directly or indirectly concerned in good roads. The Commission, therefore, desires to enlist in its work, the unselfish and intelligent assistance of every person and organization in the State.

It is requested that individual citizens, companies or corporations communicate their views fully and frankly. Boards of trade, civic organizations, granges and other similar bodies are earnestly urged to acquaint their constituents with the subject matter of the questionaire, and to ask them also, to send their opinions directly to the Commission.

N. J. Commission on Road Legislation. Questionaire.

The main trunk highways of New Jersey are breaking down under the terrific strain to which they are subjected by modern traffic.

Many of the feeder roads to these trunk highways are in bad shape.

The roads running through the outlying districts of the State and connecting with these "feeders" have never been in satisfactory condition.

The construction of much needed new roads is coming to a standstill, the maintenance of old roads even at enormous expense is not keeping pace with the daily wear and tear of travel.

Transportation, which is the life blood of civilization and prosperity, is thereby hampered and the development and improvement of New Jersey is being retarded.

What is the trouble?

Does the fault lie with a tangled mass of unintelligible road laws?

Are we struggling hopelessly to administer the road laws in township, county and State by numerous, undefined and varied types of road organizations?

Are many of the employes of these road organizations indifferent, untrained or inefficient?

Do these employes, elected by the people or appointed for political reasons hold office for such short periods of time and under such conditions that they cannot become effective in their work?

Are we building and maintaining our roads by unsound or unbusiness-like measures of finance?

How much interest are we paying on bonds issued to build poor roads which have gone to pieces or will go to pieces before the bonds mature?

How much money have we saved in our funds to pay off these bonds at maturity?

Does our money go into roads or into unnecessary and wasteful charges?

Do we foolishly try to save money by building cheap roads that will last months when we ought to practice true economy by laying down roads that will last years?

Are we getting full and honest returns on every road contract into which we enter?

Are we selecting the right materials and the proper sort of road construction and maintenance for the several diversified localities of the State?

Should we limit the traffic on highways as to the weight of vehicles and load, and if so what should be the limit, and should we make regulations as to the width of tires?

In a word, do we have a scientific, efficient and far-sighted road policy capable of automatic expansion and application to meet increased growth and change of traffic conditions, or do we act only under the stress of necessity, striving to get good roads by passing an annual installment of road legislation?

The Good Roads Commission appointed to study road conditions in this State wants to find out the answers to the above questions, and to many others, which are pregnant with significance to the road situation in New Jersey.

In order to obtain the suggestions of as many people as possible in the State this list of questions has been sent to you in the hope that you will reply frankly and fully give your ideas on the subject.

Please bear in mind that the Commission is interested in every phase of the road situation, and is not committed to any preconceived ideas of road-construction, road-maintenance, road-administration, or road-finance.

It is believed, however, that there are certain fundamental principles of law, finance, administration and operation underlying this whole subject of good roads, and any help you will give by your careful thought and suggestions will greatly assist in discovering what these principles are and ultimately enable the Commission to apply them to New Jersey roads.

John W. Herbert, chairman, Commission on road legislation, N. J. State Chamber of Commerce, 15 Exchange place, Jersey City, N. J.

ABOUT THE SUMMER GLOVES.

Silk Gloves Replace Kid to Great Extent—Fancy Wrist Trimming and Gauntlet Effects Popular.

By Mary Glynn.

Since it is a fact that no well-dressed woman will venture into the street without being daintily or suitably gloved for an occasion, it behooves many to settle the problem most agreeably. It has been argued—and justly—that the kid glove is unbearable during the summer months. This no doubt is absolutely true, for there are many who suffer from fluent perspiration, which in itself is the ruination of kid gloves. There is a way of avoiding this, and one who is troubled in this manner may obtain relief if the proper care is taken. However, it stands to reason that kid gloves are not the most comfortable things during very warm weather, and so the silk gloves are substituted with equally good results. They are infinitely more comfortable, and very attractive. They are short, two-clasp effects that fasten at the wrists; also elbow length gloves in heavy silk. Other novelty styles are shown with touches of hand-embroidery in self or contrasting shades. These fit in beautifully as a finishing detail to a dainty summer outfit. Tucking is also a form of trimming introduced, also very narrow cording. The gauntlet wrist has had a long and popular run, though the latest improvement is the strap-closing, which affords one the opportunity to arrange the wrist portion in a trim neat manner. These have been accepted generally for motor as well as for street wear. They may be had in silk, in light or heavy-weight, in chamoisette, or washable kid. While white is worn more than anything else, the shades of gray, faun, brown and tan are also very popular and practical.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Plainfield Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders, is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Plainfield readers

Mrs. William E. Gardner, 322 E. Second street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered a great deal from rheumatic pains across my back. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action, and I was in a miserable condition for months. Nothing I tried seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's Drug Store. They seemed to take hold at once, removing the rheumatic pains and regulating the action of my kidneys. They improved my condition so much that I soon felt like a different person."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gardner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

"Hallo! See what I found."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Hans Clodhopper Rides on His Billygoat.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

ONE night after supper daddy told Jack and Evalyn this story: "There were once two brothers who made up their minds to marry the king's daughter. So each took two weeks to get prepared. One learned the dictionary by heart, hoping to please the princess, and the other learned how to run the state and embroider harnesses.

"'I shall win the princess,' said each. And their father gave each a handsome horse. The brother who learned the dictionary got a coal black horse, and the other who could embroider got a milk white one. Then they smeared the corners of their mouths so they could smile easily and started to gallop off to win the king's daughter.

"Just then up came Hans Clodhopper, the third brother, who had no talents like his elders! In fact, he was considered rather stupid. 'Where are you going in your fine clothes?' he asked his departing brothers.

"'To court to win the princess. Haven't you read the newspapers?'

"'Preserve us! Then I'll go, too!' cried Hans. 'Father, give me a horse. If the princess takes me, she takes me. If she doesn't take me, then I'll take her.'

"But the brothers and his father only laughed at him.

"'If I can't have a horse I'll take my billygoat!' cried Hans. So he straddled the billygoat, dug his heels into its sides and galloped off down the road. 'Here I come!' shouted Hans, singing till the air rang.

"The brothers rode on in silence, for each was planning pretty speeches to make when they reached the princess. 'Hallo!' shouted Hans Clodhopper. 'See what I found!' And he showed them a dead crow.

"'Will you give it to the princess?' asked his brothers.

"'That I will!' cried Hans. They rode on, and soon he shouted, 'See what I've found!' And he held up an old wooden shoe.

"'That for the king's daughter, too?' asked his brothers.

"'Yes, it is,' said Hans, digging his heels into his billygoat and riding past his brothers. 'Now, this is famous!' he soon shouted back to them.

"'What have you found now?' they wanted to know again. 'Won't the princess be delighted?' they said when Hans Clodhopper held up a handful of mice sand he had picked up out of the ditch.

"His brothers were much disgusted with Hans by this time and tried to ride on without him. But he dug his heels into his billygoat and kept well abreast of them on the dusty road," daddy finished the bedtime story.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. E. V. HOWARD

Ethel's High Opinion of Herself Gets Rough Treatment at the Hands of Mrs. Morton.

"You see I am as good as my word." Ethel smiled with satisfaction. "You do not approve of doing nothing, and as I had nothing to do, I thought I would come over and visit with you. I shall be sure to learn something. Perhaps I may hinder you though." There was a pretty childish grace in all her movements.

"I suppose all parasites are beautiful," thought the old lady. "No homely woman could succeed in making anyone think her a necessity when she was absolutely useless." Aloud she said: "No you will not hinder me. I shall go right on with my work, but seeing people work is not considered entertaining. However, I may be able to say something that will set you to thinking. That would be worth while."

"Do you mean that I never think?" The delightful smile beamed up into the old lady's face.

"You think you think, but your attention is given to trifles. You never get down to the inner meaning of things." Mrs. Morton leaned forward in her rocking chair and took one of the idle hands lying in her lap and spread it out in her palm. "I suppose you have been told that you have pretty hands." Ethel dimpled with pleasure. Praise was her meat and drink "Now, I would be ashamed to have such hands. They are so selfish; no one but a self-centered person could have hands like that." Ethel drew the offending member away. "On the other hand, I suppose you would be disgraced to have hands like mine." She spread out her large, capable hands with their infinite capacity for labor. "I am not ashamed of them if they are rough and out of shape. They have paid their way in the world. They have served."

"If you have beautiful hands it is your duty to take care of them." The smile had gone from Ethel's face.

"Beautiful hands are those that have done the most to add to the comfort and pleasure of the world," replied the old lady.

"I am sure it is a pleasure to look at beautiful hands; at least it is to those who have sense of the beautiful. I cannot see much merit in being ugly," flamed Ethel.

Mrs. Morton smiled grimly. "People have learned that they can serve and take care of their hands, too. Dick's wife has shapely hands, but she does not allow caring for her hands to be an object in life."

"Neither do I. I——"

"What is your object in life?" interrupted the old lady, peering at Ethel over her glasses.

"Why," began Ethel, at a loss how to reply, "I want to enjoy life and——"

"The only joy in life comes from doing something useful and doing it well," broke in the old lady.

"But everybody does not have to work. I never had to, and I have had a happy life," persisted Ethel.

"If you have been happy with your trivial thoughts and occupations it is because you are still a child When will you ever grow up and do a woman's work in the world?"

Ethel flushed angrily and rose to her feet.

"I am afraid you will not want to come to see me any more, my dear," said the old lady, almost sadly. "I tell you unpleasant truths. You think about what I have said. If you really think, you will never be satisfied to continue to live as you have done. Dolls do not think."

Mrs. Morton shook her head as she looked after Ethel's retreating figure and said: "And she went away sorrowful, for she has a great inheritance of selfishness."

VOGUE FOR CHIFFON AND CREPE FROCKS.

Either Material Well Adapted for Afternoon Wear—Styles Exceedingly Simple.

By Mary Glynn.

While it is true that the so-called sport outfit has been generally accepted for almost any occasion, it cannot be denied that there is also place for the afternoon frock of chiffon or georgette crepe. A frock of either of these materials is not only smart but exceptionally useful, and especially so if the design is simple. These fabrics may be adapted to any degree of dressiness, and the range of colors obtainable make it possible for one to choose a color that will prove most useful and becoming. For the informal shopping tour there is the frock of a sombre or dark shade. This may be worn at perfect ease during the morning, with simple and dainty white or ecru lace collar and cuffs. For afternoon wear the georgette frock that is slightly trimmed may be appropriately worn. In one particular case a decidedly charming effect was obtained by the inserts of polka-dot chiffon in the wide bands. The color combination was blue and white, and this was introduced in a gown of navy chiffon, with simple yoke of white silk net, and crushed girdle of navy satin, this unique touch of contrasting material afforded a distinctly attractive note. Smart, high-button boots of white kid, and a dashing chapeau of white glazed kid were details that completed the costume.

Raking 'Em Over

MATTY MUST CHANGE DISPOSITION.

We are not the author of the following, the article being a clipping from the Pittsburgh Leader:

"If Christy Mathewson is to succeed in Cincinnati, he must change his disposition. Big Six has been a wonderful pitcher and the constant praise by critics and fans has caused him to unconsciously adopt a disposition that is not advantageous to a managerial berth. It is 'Mathewson first' with him and he is not the kind of a fellow to listen to suggestions from his hirelings. The kind of a spirit Matty shows will not work well in Cincinnati, as the 'driving' kind will not succeed with fellows like Heinie Groh, Hal Chase, Tom Clarke and one or two others. It would profit Matty to study people more and meet the world with a different disposition, now that he is a manager. Christy was never a big favorite for his personal qualities, but for his ability. That hero worship stuff is good from the stands and he gets away with it, but it is personality that counts in handling a ball club. There is Matty's greatest care."

YANKEES STILL HANG ON.

Bill Donovan's boys still are hanging on to the flimsy lead they possess in the American League. It's a miracle that the lads have been able to retain their lead. Injury after injury has robbed the club of its stellar talent and the stubborn attitude of one or two of the minor league clubs has made the situation one of the worst Bill Donovan has had to face since he took over the reins of leadership. "Rube" Oldring acted the role of life-saver the day before yesterday. While Oldring's stunt did not increase the lead held by the Yanks, still it preserved that lead. And in these days of disability, Bill Donovan's boys need preservation.

JOE TINKER PAID, TOO.

Joseph Tinker has an excellent plan by means of which he can drain any treasury of its contents. Josephus does not have to resort to criminal tactics, either. All that he found it necessary to do when he first tried out the trick was to refuse to abide by a decision handed down by the singer of singers, "Umpire" Byron. Of course, Joseph's refusal did not take the form of a criminal offense, but, still President Tener, the "judge" in the case, plastered a $100 fine on Tinker and sent a bill to Owner Weeghman for $1,000. The fines will be paid. There can be no doubt about that fact. And there can be no doubt about the fact that Weeghman has already informed Tinker just how things stand in the club treasury. Also, Joe probably feels the loss of one hundred iron-men keenly. "The act will never be repeated," says an "exchange."

WHOM WILL HE SUE?

Announcement of the fact that Vim Campbell has sued the Newark Federals, is followed by a hint that Jimmy Johnstone, formerly an umpire in the "outlaw" organization, would do a little remonstrating, too, if he knew with whom he could remonstrate. It seems that Harry Sinclair and Pat Powers established a Federal Land and Improvement Company and also a Federal Baseball Company when they invaded Harrison. Which company is Jimmy going to sue? That's a fit question for our "Query Department."

AMATEUR BASEBALL SEASON.

This is one of the greatest seasons ever experienced by the amateur baseball player. The game, fostered by amateurs, has rapidly arisen to a prominent place on the calendar of sports and has aided rather than detracted from the interest in professional games.

SALLEE HAS YET TO SHINE.

When the Giants signed up Harry Sallee, the sheriff-pitcher of St. Louis, they secured a man of ability. They also secured a man who takes things seriously and who wants to win always. It probably has been impressed upon Slim's mind that it is up to him to pilot the New Yorks to a pennant. If Sallee has been informed of this fact, then his poor start with the Giants will prey on his sensitive mind. There is no doubt but that "Slim" will give the Giants all that is in him. One prominent sporting writer says that Sallee is "either a victor or a dub" before the game starts. Miller Huggins had the "time of his life" figuring out Sallee's state of mind. If the tall one once gets the notion that he is going to win with the Giants, then he is going to win. But if he gets the idea that the jinx is still with him, then he is going to be deadwood with the New York club. The metropolitan fans and sport writers should see to it that "Slim" rids his system of that ill-fated notion that he is being pursued by the "jinx." The sheriff can and will make good.

PHILLIES TAKE A BOOST.

"Pat Moran has been pulling a tough oar of late, as some of his heaviest sluggers have been on the crippled list. Gavvy Cravath sprung a bum foot and was forced out of the lineup, but he is ready to report as a regular now. Bert Niehoff was taken ill in Cincinnati and that shot another hole in Pat's lineup, but Bert is back again, while Fred Luderus is showing signs of getting out of the horrible slump he has been wallowing in all this season. With Cravath and Luderus getting back their war club attack, it will mean a big boost for the Phils. Pat Moran is not the kind of a fellow that is hunting for an alibi, as he takes a beating in silence, but there is a lot of deep stuff back of his statement of yesterday, 'The Phils never got worse breaks in their history.'"—Leader.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

The Dunellen baseball team is one that should enjoy a better standing than it does in the City League. The fact that the club numbers among its players such a worthy exponent of the pitching art as Warry McLaughlin has had considerable to do with the high standing of the team. Before Warry began his task of pitching for the Dunellen squad, the club was by no means a pennant contender and was not even a "dark horse." Now the outfit has put an end to the Tab pennant hopes and is due to climb at the expense of one or two of the weaker aggregations.

"Senor" Maiden is supposed to be enough of a pitcher to baffle the Tabs tomorrow. "Senor" is one of the most energetic players on the Royal team and does possess considerable ability. But he has had but little practice this season. And for a man, who has had as little practice as he to take up the task of pitching against a first class team, seems rather a dangerous stunt. No one doubts but that Maiden ranks with the best of them. But, on the other hand, the "best of them" do not go into a baseball game lacking in pitching practice. Sooner or later someone is going to realize "that it cannot be done."

Just why anyone should be of the opinion that the Tabs will use a "big league" catcher tomorrow we do not know. Francis Teeling is as good as they come. The managers of the numerous teams in this vicinity realize that Frank is one of the best catchers around these parts. And, still, they talk of hiring Artie Pickering.

Another "big bomb" in the form of an announcement that the Tabs will use Matty Sheridan or "Wuzzy" Fullerton tomorrow has been exploded. Both Sheridan and Fullerton have good pitching positions in Newark and we can see no reason why these fellows should give up these positions to accept a one-day engagement with the local Tabs.

Evidently, Sam Semer's challenge to the "Sunday P. A. C." has been in vain. According to reliable information, we learn that nothing definite has been done in the matter as yet. And no communications addressed to Samuel have reached this office. However, it is expected that the boys will attend to the matter without further discussion. And the battle should be one worth witnessing, too.

Tom McNulty, one of the best authorities on baseball, is of the opinion that if all the powder in the world were suddenly destroyed the young women would have to wash their faces more regularly. Thomas always was more or less of a "military" genius.

The "old game" is going into discard, boys. When such names as Herzog, Kauff, Sallee, Kocher, Middleton, Lobert and Schupp begin to gain prominence in Giant lineups, it is time that the fellows with such names as Doolan, Dooin, Burns, Doyle, McGraw, Rariden and McKechnie started something.

When we get that "Question and Answer Department" established on a firm basis we will have to begin to study all over again. Nevertheless, we hope the questions come in goodly numbers. We never studied mind-reading, hypnotism or palmistry, but still we believe there are other ways to acquire knowledge.

Fans, remember we are looking for essays on the subject, "My Favorite City League Player." While we did mention "essays," we would like to have the contributions short and "sweet."

BASEBALL

Chicago experters advise keeping an eye on the White Sox. Nothing doing. It's a waste of eyesight.

Ah, gravy! Manager Fielder Jones, of the Browns, points out that his team still has seventeen games to play with the Mackmen.

Not the least perplexing angle of the Cincinnati-New York trade was the fact that "Old Master" Mathewson asked to be traded to the Reds.

With Tommy Leach, Arthur Devlin and Charlie Dooin pastiming with their team, Rochester folk can have a regular "old home week" celebration.

If a baseball manager owned all the pastimers in the world he would still want "just one more winning pitcher" or "another good hitter," and he would win the pennant.

Rube Marquard, the Brooklyn twirler, has about abandoned hopes of duplicating last year's batting performance. In 1915 Rube hit for .109, or 50 points above his present average.

"Home Run" Baker had just reached 13 in the season's stolen base record when he crashed into the grandstand or fell into the Yanks' dugout, or met with some other disastrous mishap that put him out of the game.

Manager "Smiling Bill" Donovan will have to rely on his mascot and bat boy to bring home the pennant, if the Yankee's stars continue to fall by the wayside as a result of injuries.

"Buck" Herzog has certainly been the finest kind of trading material for the Giants. With the former Cincinnati pilot again in a Giant uniform, McGraw must be about ready to put over another big deal.

Members of the "pioneer society" are deeply interested in the work of Comrade Fred Beebe with the Cleveland Indians. Comrade Beebe must be the oldest pitcher wearing big yard spangles, since he was born December 31, the last day of the year.

American League records for the past fifteen years show that the Athletics top the league in the number of games won. Now they are trying to cinch the record in the number of games lost.

It is said the Pirates are willing to trade Max Carey if a club can be found that will take Maximilian and his four-ply contract, said contract being smeared with big figures calling for regular money.

Although it gets them nothing, Cleveland fans may find a little comfort in the old wheeze about "it's better to have been up there once than never to have been there at all."

Fred Luderus, the Phillies' first baseman, is said to hit the ball as hard as any man in the game. But the fielders won't allow Fred to hit 'em out far enough.

Captain Johnny Evers, of the Browns, would lead a fairly happy existence if it wasn't for baseball league presidents, baseball umpires and such.

GOLFERS GATHER.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 29.—Leading golfers of the West, representing clubs from every part of the territory lying between the Mississippi river and Salt Lake City, are gathering in Minneapolis today preparatory to the opening of the annual championship tournament of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association, which will get underway on the links of the Interlachen Club Monday morning. The large and high class entry list gives promise of one of the most successful tournaments ever conducted by the association. Alden Swift, of St. Joseph, Mo., winner of last year's tournament, will be on hand to defend his title.

NORTHWESTERN TENNIS.

St. Paul, Minn., July 29.—A splendid array of tennis talent appeared on the turf courts at Deephaven, Lake Minnetonka, today for the preliminary play in the twenty-seventh annual tournament to decide the championships of the Northwestern Lawn Tennis Association. Play will continue through the coming week. The titles in men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles will be determined. The winning team in the men's doubles will have the privilege of competing in the preliminary national doubles championship at Chicago next month.

DAWSON MAY TWIRL FOR ROYAL GIANTS

Pete Simmons Presents Strong Lineup, Containing Mostly Local Players.

The Royal Giants and the Tabs get together for the first time this season on Avon Oval tomorrow. The game will, undoubtedly, attract a large crowd, as both teams are acknowledged to be of high class calibre. The Tabs are in second place in the City League, while the Royals are known as the best colored team in this vicinity. The game will be started at 3:30 promptly and will, perhaps, be the first of a three or five game series.

Manager Pete Simmons, talking with a reporter of this paper, stated that he was perfectly willing to give out the line-up he intends to use tomorrow. Others interested in the welfare of the Royal team have noised it abroad that McDonald and Murphy, former Philadelphia Colored Giants pitchers, will be on the mound for the Royals tomorrow. There may be some truth in the rumor, but Pete Simmons did not mention their names. The only new men on the Royal team are Eddie Ford, a local player who has been spending the past few months at Princeton; James, at one time a member of the Royal Giants of New York city; Borden, a local player and member of the Royals when they played in the Manufacturers' League, and Joe Dawson, a pitcher, who hails from Rahway. Dawson is the man who will relieve "Senor" Maiden, if necessary, tmorrow. Dawson, a native of Rahway, has pitched for the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Colored Giants. He may not pitch here tomorrow, although Simmons has made an effort to secure him. Tommy Washington, the regular Royal catcher, will be on hand. Tommy has of late been pastiming around Newark. The line-up given us by Manager Pete Simmons is said by him to be official, with the exception of the pitching position. Dawson will be the pitcher, provided he is willing to come here. It was rumored yesterday that Fuller, of the "regular" Royal Giants would catch tomorrow. As Pete Simmons made no mention of the fact, we do not place much credence in the rumor.

The official Royal line-up follows. Inasmuch as we weere unable to get in touch with the Tab manager, we can give only his probable line-up.

Tabs—Teeling, catcher; Hannon, third base; Rosenson, shortstop; Denitzio, second base; Lee, first base; T. Denny, left field; O'Loughlin, centre field; Wahl, right field; McFadden, pitcher.

There may be changes in both lineups, but, inasmuch as we have received official notice from Pete Simmons regarding the team he will use, it is very probable that the Royal lineup, as given here, will be the same as that employed tomorrow.

"ED" WALSH A HERO.

"Ed" Walsh, pitchr for the White Sox, is being congratulated today on his ability as a life saver. While bathing in Lake Michigan at the foot of 50th street last night he rescuted two girls who had fallen into deep water from a raft which was overturned. Walsh first swam to shallow water with one girl, then returned and rescued the other as she was sinking a second time.

HOPES AT PARKER FIELD.

As a result of mutual agreement made between the managers of the Netherwood and Hope Chapel baseball teams, the leagee game scheduled to be played between these two teams today, will be run off on Parker Field, after a preliminary attraction between the Royal Giants and a Westfield team.

Queries--Comment--Answers

Note—This department, inaugurated about a year ago by one of the editorial staff of this newspaper, will be revived and will appear frequently during the coming months. However, if our readers do not send in their queries, there will be nothing for us to answer. This department will cover a wide range. All questions will be answered to the best of our ability. No fees are charged and the feature is run solely for the benefit of the public. It is not necessary that one, who desires to send in a query, be a constant reader of the Press. In sending in questions always accompany the questions with your name and address, not necessarily for publication but as an evidence of good faith. Address all communications to the Sporting Editor of this paper. The initials of the person submitting a query will be used, unless other instructions are given.

Query—Is Wade Killifer, the player acquired by the Giants in the recent deal with Cincinnati, a brother of Bill Killifer, of the Phillies?—"Fan."

Answer—Yes, Wade is William's younger brother and has been sent to Louisville, of the American Association.

The store's advertisement is the store's daily message to you—and there is not often a day in which there is not something new and interesting in that message.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

The Review of Reviews, of Plainfield and Its Business

The "Loyal" Plainfielder takes pride in the city's progress.

"Where do you live?" is frequently asked of travelers, and those travelers take pride, if they're loyal, in naming the city or town from which they came.

Plainfield "is" progressive; she's reached a period of decided progressiveness, preparedness

The government of our city is doing wonders, the marks of progressiveness of our Council stand out in bold relief. As a mark of efficiency, national attention is attracted here to our automobile manufacturing, machine shops and printing press works, and other great plants.

And they're not over-night promotions, either, these industries, but, they're substantial institutions that have been tried and found true, by many long years of successes, through good, bad and indifferent times, and again, results, Plainfield stands on the brink of a still greater prosperity, so prosperous that not a hint of its inefficiency in any direction can be pointed to by the most jealous rival of our city's progress.

Our city has been most fortunate in avoiding ever, serious labor troubles, serious business failures, serious calamities of any kind that have been noted so frequently in many directions throughout the land —well, all things to Plainfield, "Plainfield Right or Wrong," but, Plainfield's right.

Our Plainfield retail mercantile establishments, what of them? Barring a very few, they have been successful to an extent made possible by a combination of the conservative and the progressive; both must go hand in hand to bring about successful results, and so Plainfield can point with pride to her retail mercantile establishments.

May we especially point out the stores of the members of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield? Stores that have had uninterrupted growth for as long as the oldest inhabitant can remember. But, in all their growth, nothing has equaled that of the past year; and incidentally, nothing has equaled that of the present spring season.

"The Gilded Man."

The name "El Dorado," which dates back to the first part of the sixteenth century, is Spanish for "the gilded one" and an abbreviation for the "gilded man" (el hombre dorado). It was first applied to a native South American ruler or priest who, so early Spanish writers state, was gilded at a certain annual ceremony and then bathed in a lake near Santa Fe de Bogota, Colombia. The name next came to signify a legendary golden city, also called Manoa or Omoa, much sought after but never found. Later it was used to indicate a mythical country somewhere in South America where gold and precious stones were to be found in great abundance and for which many expeditions searched in vain, among them those of Ordaz, Orellana, Von Hutten, Quesada and Sir Walter Raleigh. Today El Dorado is used metaphorically to designate a place where wealth can be rapidly acquired.

German Colors.

The German flag would be a rainbow if it included all the colors of the various kingdoms, principalities or states of the German empire. The black and white and the eagle in the German flag are Prussian, and in the staff head corner is the canton, black, white and red, representative of the north German confederacy, which was established in 1867. The colors of Bavaria are blue and white; Hanover, yellow and white; Saxony, white and green; Wurttemberg, black and red; Mecklenburg-Strelitz, red, yellow and blue; Brunswick, blue and yellow; Saxe-Coburg Gotha, green and white; Schaumburg-Lippe, blue, red and white. The colors of Waldeck are black, red and yellow; Pomerania, blue and white; Baden, red and yellow; Hesse, red and white.—Washington Star.

How the Hearn August Sale Solves Buying Difficulties

A sale just a sale sounds very ordinary, doesn't it? But, when you consider, buying isn't really as simple, is it? You know how much careful shopping it requires, really to learn values. Just think, then, of shoppers—shoppers for stores—the buyers we mean—who buy months and months ahead. They must know not only the New York market—but almost the world market in order to buy to advantage. This year has been a particular test for careful buying—trade conditions have been so unsettled.

Now for years Hearn, West 14th St., New York, has had an unusual record in obtaining great values—one reason being that the Firm has always paid spot cash—often times in advance, to obtain special values so that we might offer unusual values to our customer. Then, too, Hearn's has always been noted among housekeepers for linens, blankets and towels. Suppose you were a buyer, knowing the reputation of our store—and especially of these departments and their special offerings, during the August Sale—wouldn't you feel it difficult—at least not just easy—to sustain this reputation?

Well, this year—in spite of the scarcity of linens—in spite of their continued soaring in price—our buyers months ago did make unusually heavy purchases. Prices have soared precisely as predicted. Now we are able to offer values in our August Sale that virtually seem all but impossible. Obviously this sale includes clearances, odd lots and summer stock that are always disposed at summer prices—often less than cost—but in order to offer the huge assortments that our store policy demands—these great purchases are always made for August Sale. Isn't it interesting to realize how carefully stores must and do plan months ahead for their patrons' exact needs?

This sale continues from July 31st to August 31st with the exception of Saturdays of course.

But, then, holidays only give rest to employes which inevitably result in better service. For, although this is an exceedingly rushed time in the whole store, year after year of continued huge numbers of patrons, has enabled us to plan and provide for this great volume of business. We are very proud to think that for sixteen years this Firm—the very first to do so—has given this whole holiday to its employes, and that no rush period, even our great August Sale is allowed to curtail these days of pleasure and rest for the employes. The modern store spirit seems to when real cooperation anyway.

This August Sale might truly be called a Housekeepers' Sale, because everything in dry goods, for housekeepers is included. Blankets, comfortables, linens, towels, cutlery and silverware—just the very things that are daily increasing in price—are offered at Hearn's very best values. That is enough to say for our customers—they know the dependability of these words and values. Then, of course, in all the other departments, special clearances and cut prices to clear, prevail.

Shopping in August sounds difficult—and it would be in most places. But in our store with electric fans to create continual breezes—many elevators near each department—wide aisles—and best of all, happy salespeople to help you with your purchases—even all day shopping is simple. Morning shoppers will be interested in the unusual "Morning Special." All the departments not in the August Sale offer exceptional values in their goods for these specials. You know our Restaurant on the third floor, don't you? Luncheon in the store saves time and energy. Rest rooms are here—all sorts of conveniences—hairdressing, manicuring, for the shopper—so that no matter the summer weather you can do your shopping—rest—and be quite refreshed to go home.

Getting to and from our store is so simple. Every mode of conveyance that rushed New York must have, comes near our store. There are subways—elevated—tubes all within a block or two—busses that pass the corner—surface cars that stop at our very door—After "please stop at Fifth Avenue," one always hears many say, "Stop at Hearn's, please." Have you noticed the cards saying, "This car transfers to Hearn's," in the cars? If you haven't, watch for them.

Never have we felt more pleased with values—than over the prices and quality of the merchandise in this, the Twenty-Fourth Annual August Sale. Just keep it in mind every day of August—except Saturdays, of course—special prices in all household dry goods. You may be needing new supplies of those very things in your house.

The Home of My Dreams

Every one has a "home of my dreams."

It is our ideal. Why not strive to make it real?

* * *

Homes differ as people differ. Often husband and wife do not have the same dream. They pull apart. They struggle good naturedly. Eventually the "dream home" comes—a softening of each dream and a harmony of both. At any rate it is "our home," and we live happily ever afterwards.

Perhaps some dreams are nightmares—some of these "home dreams." They may picture furniture and decorations that would shock to tears the soul of an artist. For these dreamers it is time to awake, to see, and to learn the kind of furniture that should go into "the house in good taste."

* * *

The House in Good Taste is a very plain house. A very comfortable house. A very restful house. A house where nothing clashes. A house of harmony, of repose, of balance, of beauty, of symmetry. Yet a house of originality, of charm, of individuality, of personality. A house to live in, to play in, to rest in, to sleep in, to love in, to work in, to grow in—and to dream in; the "home of my dreams."

* * *

Would you see this home? See the furniture in the WANAMAKER AUGUST SALE. See how good it is, how relatively inexpensive at its August prices. See how the individual pieces group themselves together, how they settle into place—in that dream home.

Monday is a Day of Courtesy opening the August Sale, on the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Galleries of the New Building.

JOHN WANAMAKER, New York

Naming a Famous Dish.

If you are a gourmet you like lobster. The man who made lobster a la Newburg famous refused to have his name go with it. He gave Delmonico the recipe, and Del gave the delicacy the name it bears today, while that of the benefactor is never heard outside of the little circle in which he lived.

Well, the creator of the dish was Benjamin Wenburg, a New York broker. He used to take his luncheons at Delmonico's downtown place, not many blocks from the Battery. When he told Del how to make lobster a la Newburg—it had no name then—Del put it on his bill and called it lobster a la Wenburg.

Wenburg got angry about it and told Delmonico if he didn't remove his name he would feed elsewhere. The big caterer reversed the first syllable, and the title has been what you have been accustomed to see ever since.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Whim of a Great Actor.

Salvini, the great Italian tragedian, made it a condition that none of his sons should act in Italy so long as he remained on the stage. So Gustavo was banished to the other countries of the continent and acted in Russia and Austria with some success. Alexander learned the English language and played in this country until he died at an early age. Tomaso is now an actor in Italy and is said to have inherited to a greater degree than any of his brothers the talents of his father.

Salvini was married twice; first to Clementine Cazzola, an eminent Italian actress, who died, leaving him three small children. Many years later he married an Englishwoman named Lottie Sharp, by whom he had two children. His grandchildren have attracted attention in art and other circles in Italy.—Argonaut.

How His Scheme Worked.

"That was a great scheme old Shrewdly worked."

"I didn't hear of it."

"He gave it out that the first of his eleven daughters to be married should have his entire fortune."

"What was the result?"

"Eleven elopements in one night. They can't determine which one was the first, so Shrewdly gets rid of the girls and keeps the fortune."—London Answers.

Political Issues.

Real political issues cannot be manufactured by the leaders of political parties, and the real ones cannot be evaded by political parties. The real political issues of the day declare themselves and come out of the depths of that deep which we call public opinion.—Garfield.

Proper Sign.

"I think, instead of tobacco stores having them, cut rate ticket offices ought to have wooden Indians as signs."

"Why so?"

"To show there is a scalping business going on inside."—Baltimore American.

Sort of a Warning.

A Mohammedan barber advertises as follows in the East Indian Picture Magazine: "Mahomed Osman, haircutter and clean shaver. Gentlemen's throats cut with very sharp razors with great care and skill. No irritating feeling afterwards. A trial solicited."

Malicious.

Youngleigh—Which is the better way to propose, orally or by letter? Cynicus—By letter, certainly. There's a chance that you might forget to mail it.—Exchange.

Feat of a Wild Boar.

The boar is a terrible enemy and also an alarmingly agile one. An English sportsman tells of a splendid escape made by one of these creatures in India.

This boar, which had been hard pressed, galloped into a nullah, a very sharp, deep cut, more like a narrow chasm than a ravine. Down this, along the bottom of it, he raced, followed by a man on a swift horse.

The banks on each side overhanging the boar were six feet or more in height. Suddenly the creature turned a sharp corner, which hid him from view. Then by a tremendous effort he scaled the bank and gained the top.

He turned short around, leaped the entire width of the nullah and landed safely on the other side, clearing both horse and rider as he jumped save for the man's pith helmet, which he knocked off. He had escaped by a narrow margin.

Sea Dips a Century Ago.

Seaside bathers can obtain their dips under easier conditions now than a century ago if Erridge in his history of Brighton draws a true picture of the morning scene at that popular resort toward the end of the eighteenth century.

"Each man," he says, "runs to a machine ladder as it is dragged out of the sea and scuffles who shall first set foot thereon. Some send their footmen and contend by proxy. Others go in boats or on horseback to meet the machines, so that a tolerably modest man has generally some hours for contemplation on the sand, to the detriment of his shoes as well as the diminution of his patience."

When impatient souls took to bathing from the beach without machines the town authorities fined them 5 guineas for each offense.—London Chronicle.

A Queer Creature.

Queer that while the male seal is a bull and the female a cow their youngster is not called a calf, but a pup.

Why "seal fisheries," too, when the seal is not a fish?

And why should the seal's breeding place be styled a rookery?

It looks as if this strange creature is only a fish in common parlance while at sea. On land (or ice) it is classed popularly with animals or birds.—Exchange.

A Glimpse of Heaven.

Paterfamilias—Well, Mr. Smith, I'm pleased to see you at our humble board for the first time. Now, is there any particular cut you fancy?

Prospective Son-in-law—Oh, no, thank you, I think—

Youngest Daughter of the House—Dad, aren't you going to ask Cissie? You know what a shindy she kicks up if she doesn't get first pick.—London Opinion.

The Beginning and End.

Fond Mother—It was at this point in the entrancing landscape that my daughter received a declaration and accepted. Friend—And tell us the rest of the romance. Fond Mother—Unfortunately that is all there was.—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

The Assent Sarcastic.

He (at the end of a fishing story)—My word, it was a monster! 'Pon my word, I never saw such a fish in my life! She—I don't believe you ever did!—London Mail.

Pertinent.

"I asked Arthur how old he thought I was, and he guessed right the very first time."

"Have you made up yet?"—Pittsburgh Press.

MIDSUMMER FROCKS

Show Hints of Autumn

By Hester Winthrop

A Lovely Frock of Bisque Tinted Soiree Silk with Corded Inserts of Cream Filet

Cartridge Pleat Pockets are the Feature in this Frock

The Yoke and Armhole on a Straight Line Give a Smart New Effect

A Novel Lingerie Frock Combining White and Pink Organdie in a New Banded Effect

Worth Favors the Banded Skirt -- Japanese Collars Drape Around the Neck -- Beads and Buttons Used for Trimming -- White and Colored Organdie In Combination -- Sleeves.

ABOUT the first of August one has a weather eye out for new ideas in dress, and the dainty summer frocks that appear at summer resorts and town restaurants are eagerly scanned for hints of what is to be. Of course, the autumn modes are pretty well settled by now, but the Powers that Be do not let them escape too rapidly from the mysterious hiding places from which they will emerge with a fine flourish when time for September openings has arrived.

But she who observes may read many valuable hints of what is to be in the midsummer models that are put out at this season. Women must have fresh, new frocks to replace those that a gay July has reduced to unwearableness, and of course a new frock, built since the new modes have developed, must partake more or less of coming styles. One notes a deal of trimming, shirrings of ribbon, buttons, tassels, bands of one fabric on another, rows and rows of silk stitching, tabs, scallops, little bows, metal threaded laces, smocking, feather-stitching— every sort of trimming that fancy can conjure up to add gaiety to woman's dress.

Silhouette Not Much Changed.

It is whispered that autumn will see a distinctly different silhouette, one of straight clinging lines after the Moyenage idea; but midsummer frocks continue to be close-bodiced and flaring in the skirt. Petticoats run with featherbone hoops distend skirt draperies and skirts are short enough to show the dainty slipper or buttoned boot to good advantage; althought the woman of conservative taste has definitely abandoned very short frocks. About five inches from the floor is the extreme limit of shortness now, in frocks for indoors, worn with pumps or slippers. Tailored costumes, worn with high buttoned boots, may be a bit shorter.

Silks And Cottons At Summer Affairs.

Fashion is very inconsistent this summer, where materials are concerned. The richest silks are used for sport frocks and skirts, and often one sees formal afternoon frocks of sheer cotton stuff—organdie or very fine handkerchief linen, dropped over petticoats of shimmering silk. Georgette and cotton voile appear side by side at afternoon affairs, the one having a silk weave, the other being all cotton; and at dances in the evening organdie frocks and pretty models of white cotton net intermingle with costumes of costly lace brocade and tulle. Very democratic is Dame Fashion in midsummer! But perhaps having surfeited herself with silk in sport togs and bathing suits, she turns with relief to simple, unostentatious little frocks of sheer cotton material. Two new silks for fall, however, are so beautiful that they must have a word of praise; and their popularity is assured with the end of August when even the prettiest of cotton dresses begin to look a bit passe and shivery. One of these silks is faille matinee, a shimmering, exquisite silk for dance frocks and blouses; the other is soiree, with a lustrous, satiny texture for handsome evening gowns and wraps. In the orchid and apricot shades soiree is especially lovely. Noting the many tone-shadings of this silk in the light, it is almost impossible to believe that one sees but a single color; and by candle-light the silk is even richer than by day.

The dance frock trimmed with filet bands is of bisque tinted soiree which shades to gold in certain lights. The filet lace is creamy in tone and is set into the silk with cordings of featherbone tubing, which give a very dainty flare. The drop skirt does not flare but is shirred in to a three-yard width over the tubing. Worth is using these band trimmings generously for autumn and no type of trimming is more graceful for a gathered skirt. Look closely and you will see that this skirt is not gathered directly at the waistline but two inches below, the full skirt, shirred over a cord, having a tiny heading at the top.

The wide girdle of this frock, draped softly around the waist and pulled into trimness by a double twist of gold-colored velvet ribbon, is stayed underneath by a fitted foundation carefully featherboned which gives the waist trimness. The little bodice is of cream-colored net over filet lace, the net having a corded edge and tiny heading. The puffed sleeve is particularly pretty and youthful with this style of gown. Tea roses are tucked in the girdle and tea roses trim the hat, made of tucked cream mousseline.

Worth Uses Band Trimmings.

When Worth deigns to build a lingerie frock, it is sure to be a masterpiece. After a Worth model is the afternoon dress of organdie, white, with bands of pink organdie set into the skirt with hemstitching. The hem is also of pink organdie and the sleeves are made like the skirt, falling loosely to the elbow. Simplicity itself is the surplice bodice with a deep, draped collar of pink organdie and the twin loops of pink picot-edged grosgrain ribbon with long ends falling at either side of a row of pink silk buttons give a note of smart emphasis to the simple costume. This frock is in the new ankle length, but reveals plainly the dainty boots of white washable kid which accompany the tub frock. Properly, with this pink and white costume, the hat is touched with black for contrast, velvet and velvet ribbon being used on pink straw.

Handkerchief linen in pink and white is combined in a very effective frock for midsummer wear, and here again, one sees the banded skirt trimming. There are two deep flounces, the upper one overlapping the lower at the knee, and each flounce has two four-inch bands of pink—at the edge and so near the edge-band that only half an inch of white shows between. The materials are set together by hemstitching. The bodice falls six inches below the waistline and is edged with a band of pink and pink runs around the neck and in a long tab down the front, hemstitched into the white handkerchief lawn of the frock. Dignity is given by a tall, flaring collar of white organdie which rises from the round neck at the back and the sleeves are elaborately puffed and banded with pink, with long, tight cuffs buttoned with pink buttons. The bodice is shirred at the waistline at the sides and a pink grosgrain ribbon runs under the shirring, emerging at back and front in belt effect.

Baby-Velvet In Bands And Bands.

The band trimming is evidenced again in a Worth afternoon frock for a young girl. The frock is of white silk net over flesh tinted taffeta, this taffeta foundation skirt having a flounce of lace from the knee which shows, petticoat fashion, below the full tulle skirt. The latter is trimmed with a very deep band of rose pink moire silk on which are stitched 24 rows of black velvet baby ribbon. Turned back cuffs and girdle are also of the rose moire with twelve rows of black ribbon, and at the neck is a draped Japanese collar, also bordered with rose moire and black ribbon. These big Japanese collars are a striking feature of autumn frocks and give a very smart neck finish. The steel blue silk frock pictured, has one of these Japanese collars, set in this instance on an upright band, around a well cut-out neck, so that the collar does not lie flat on the shoulders but seems to drape itself around the neck. There are several other interesting new hints in this steel blue frock, which by the bye, is built of the new soiree silk, referred to earlier on today's page. Note the yoke, bisecting the bodice, and the armhole on a level with this yoke, making a horizontal line across the bodice. The sleeves are gathered into wristbands, with pleated frills below, and more pleated frills run two-thirds around the skirt, set on under bands of bead and French knot embroidery. The corsage bouquet repeats the colors in this embroidery, steel gray, steel blue and salmon pink. A wide, shaped girdle gives the effect of a basque-bodice. With this new silk frock for autumn go steel blue silk stockings and pumps of black glazed kid.

Quaintly old fashioned is an afternoon gown of garnet faille matinee, with band trimmings of black velvet in three widths—quite like a frock of 1860 in color and trimming effect. The skirt is shirred around the waistline and again at the hips where there is a puffy pannier drapery. The tight little bodice has square tabs, edged with black velvet ribbon which fall over the skirt, and at the foot of the skirt are rows of the velvet ribbon, one row two inches wide, another an inch wide, a third half-an-inch wide—with the widest ribbon at the top. The effect is repeated in a turnover collar, the bands of ribbon running across at the back of the neck. This frock has bell sleeves squared off at the elbow and finished with rows of narrow velvet ribbon.

Pockets will play an important part in autumn costumes—even on afternoon frocks of formal character. The checked silk frock with pockets made of cartridge pleats at either hip is a model in point. This frock comes from Cheruit and combines blue and white checked taffeta and white Georgette crepe. The bodice has pockets also, set below groups of hand-run tucks which add fullness at the shoulder, and each breast pocket buttons with a silk-covered button. The cuffs button also, and so does the girdle. Plenty of buttons will give just the right finish to your new fall frock, for buttons are going to be immensely chic. Rather a graceful idea is the narrow sash of silk which is knotted once in front, holding down the gathered top of the skirt in trim lines over the hip, below the buttoned girdle. The bodice, edged with bands of the silk, opens over a shirred chemisette of white Georgette and a collar of the silk finishes the neck at the back.

Of First Importance is a Modish Handbag

OF incalculable value to the ensemble of the costume is the right sort of handbag. Have you never seen a smart tailored suit, accompanied by trig hat and veil and the very latest style in buttoned boots of pretty colored glazed kid utterly spoiled by a shabby, overused handbag? Or on the other hand, have you not been so fascinated with a stunning handbag, carried by the woman sitting opposite you in the subway that you never thought of noticing the rest of her costume? Yes, indeed, a handbag counts at least 25 points in importance in the entire costume and the woman who knows the value of correct finishing touches, never neglects her handbag.

In the first place, she owns several handbags. The day is gone when one faithful leather bag was one's constant companion every time one dressed to go out of doors. There must be the shopping handbag, the matinee and restaurant bag, the dainty calling bag, the sturdy sport reticule, the elaborate theatre and opera bag. These at least one must have; and to be very chic, there must be a bag to match every costume—just as one matches every costume, these days, with colored buttoned boots or pumps of blue or brown or tan or green glazed kid. Large and small bags one must possess also; large enough ones to carry home small parcels from the shops, or to hold tickets, extra handkerchiefs, smelling salts, etc., when traveling; and tiny enough purses to tuck into the sport skirt pocket when one goes golfing—for you never know when a tip to somebody or other may smooth things out immeasurably.

Beaded silk handbags are the Paris mandate for fall—for all use with formal or dressy costumes. Very dainty leather bags are carried, bags of saffian and pin seal with gilt mountings and tinted kid or shirred silk linings, but the beaded silk bag is much smarter and newer. Moire silk, brocade, heavy faille, soiree silk and a new silk called faille matinee, very lustrous and soft, are used for the new bags, and the beading incorporates itself with the lines of the bag, accentuating its shape. A very handsome model is a pouch-shaped bag almost covered with embroidery of steel and white beads and conventional designs and French knots worked with silk floss. From the bottom swings a tassel ornament of crystal beads. Moire ribbons form the handle and these run through gunmetal rings, which are sewed to the bag, instead of through the usual shirred casing. This bag is of taupe colored moire silk with embroidery in steel, crystal and black silk. The top is finished with a rolled edge whipped with heavy steel colored silk floss.

The Easily Peeped In Mirror Is A Feature Of The Restaurant Bag.

Bead Embroidered Reticules Are The Paris Craze.

Entirely new is a pocket bag, long and narrow with slits at the side. The bag does not open but one puts one's hands into a slit to draw out purse or vanity case. One of these bags, just from Paris, is of deep blue silk with beading in cut steel and crystal. A handsome, roomy bag with a wide, square frame is made of navy blue soiree silk and gold and black embroidery. A straight band of the embroidery fits inside the square frame and below is a full pouch of the plain blue silk.

One of the most interesting bags of the season was selected by Madame Paquin for her personal use at the Societe des Arts des Armeels—the profits of whose sales go to bereaved war widows and orphans. The bag is a dainty affair for theatre and restaurant use and is perfectly round, in pouch style. The upper half, drawn in by an elastic, is of white chiffon over white silk; the lower half is covered with roses made of white taffeta, blue faille ribbon and pink chiffon.

Bags and purses of Chinese brocade appeal to the woman who loves odd and picturesque belongings. Some of these bags, of deep blue brocade, with ivory rings through which is passed the cord handle, are extremely beautiful. There are others with wrought metal chains for handles, a ball of carved ivory at the end, over which the hand closes. Very pretty pocketbooks and small bags are made of colored glazed kid; one of these may be ordered in any particular color combination to match the costume. For general use the shirred bag of black moire silk, with cord or strap handle of the silk, and a covered frame, is in good taste, and these bags, dainty as they seem give a good deal of service. Of this sort is the restaurant bag, an adequately appointed affair with the mirror conveniently placed for a surreptitious peep.

A COVER FOR THE LAMPSHADE

A WOMAN who loves pretty, shaded lights, but does not wish to expose her handsome silk shades to fading summer suns and the breezes that blow through windows, has devised a clever way of both using and protecting her shades in summertime. It is a good deal of trouble to cover a wire lampshade frame with shirred silk and such shades cost a good bit—for a rough bungalow or summer camp cottage—so this woman packs her silk-covered shades in her trunks, filling them with folded garments so that they come to no harm; and then makes covers for them of colored silkoline—green or corncolored or rose, according to the cretonne colors in her living-room. She first cuts a big square of the silkoline and in the center cuts out a hole a little smaller than the circumference of the top of the shade. The outer corners of the square are rounded off into a big circle to correspond with the round opening at the center. The material around the center hole is turned over the top of the lampshade and tacked in place and the outer edge of the cover is rolled and whipped in cross-stitch effect with matching floss. The cover falls in circular, ripple effect over the shade and the thin silkoline, while not interfering with the light of the lamp and at the same time matching the room hangings, permits the tone of the silk shade to gleam through when the lamp is lighted at night, giving a very pretty effect.

ALLEN BEALS TO SPEAK AT FRESH AIR SERVICE

The services at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home tomorrow afternoon will be in charge of Allen E. Beals, whose work among the Boy Scouts of our city is so well known. Among the boys at the Home there is a very strong Scout organization and no doubt the boys will welcome this opportunity of hearing Mr. Beals. While the public has not been as free to come and visit the Home this season as in former years still the interest of the good Plainfield people in the Home has not been lacking, and it is to be hoped that they may have the opportunity of visiting the Home and hearing the children sing and recite before the season closes.

Services are held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, and adults will be made welcome at any or all of these services. Strange as it may seem, there has not been a child at the Home confined to his or her bed through illness during the entire season, this has never happened before in the eighteen years that Miss Curry has been connected with the work. It is to be hoped that these little people may be returned to their homes in New York free from any of the threatened epidemic of the infantile paralysis.

DONATIONS WANTED.

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild is greatly in need of flowers, fruit, fresh vegetables etc. Donations may be sent Monday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, Tuesday morning from 9 to 11, to the rooms of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, 10 Madison avenue, Babcock building. PLAINFIELD CHECKS

Many New York business men have formed the habit of using New York checks. There was a good reason for this when checks on Plainfield banks were subject to an exchange charge in that city, but this is no longer the case.

Checks on The Plainfield Trust Company are now collectible through the New York Clearing House and commuters are beginning to realize that it is to their advantage to keep their accounts with us and receive

WHY BURDEN A FRIEND?

SERVICE

Capital, $100,000

The average individual is no more fitted to handle an estate than he is to conduct a law suit or cure a disease. You hire a lawyer to do the one and a doctor to do the other.

Then why burden a friend, a business associate or a member of your family, with the responsibility of being your executor and trustee? Few men are familiar with the duties of trusteeship or with the investment of trust funds.

Name this responsible trust company instead; it is organized for the purpose; equipped to meet every emergency; to transact any business which may arise in connection with trust service; and it is permanent; unaffected by the hazards of human life.

GERMANS LAUNCH DOUBLE ASSAULT

Fail to Advance on Somme and Before Verdun, However.

FRANCIS JOSEPH DYING

Austrian Ruler Believed to Be Nearing End—England Siezes More U. S. Goods Bound for Neutral Ports as Contraband.

Paris, July 21.—Violent German attacks were launched last night in a double offensive on the Somme front and in the sector of Verdun. Not only were the German assaults repulsed but the French in a counter attack with hand grenades made progress on the right bank of the Meuse. Verdun front news of the repulse of the German attacks and of the French gain was contained in a statement issued by the War Office today. It said that the Germans drove home hard blows north of the Somme and that they delivered assaults on both sides of the Meuse river. However, the Teutons were unable to advance against the blows of artillery and machine gun fire of the French.

England Condemns U. S. Goods.

London, July 31.—The British prize court today condemned 3,000 bags of coffee and 14,665 barrels of oil shipped from America and intercepted by English naval forces. The coffee was part of the cargoes of the Swedish steamers Indiania and Synland.

DANGER FROM POWDER FLOATING TOWARD N. Y.

New York, July 31.—Fire Commissioner Adamson today issued the following: "Great danger lies in the possibility of careless handling of explosives that have floated to Manhattan Island and are still being washed up to the shore by the tide. We have received reports of children tampering with metal lined boxes of a stuff that looks like dirty brown spaghetti, but is really smokeless power. The police and fire departments are doing their best in close co-operation to prevent a series of small accidents following yesterday's explosion and the co-operation of the public is earnestly solicited. Persons find along the water front packages the do not understand or know to be dangerous should notify the police or the nearest fire company."

When seen today the local captain of the Salvation Army said that there is at present only three places they can hold meetings, Second street and Park avenue, West Front street at Madison avenue, and East Front street and Watchung avenue. "West Third street is the section of the city that needs the meetings worst," said the captain, "and we are going to try and get a permit."

Gavett and Corporation Counsel Reed. Messrs. A form of notice to contractors for bids was drafted and approved by the committee, which will submit the plans and specifications to the Council at the August meeting and present a resolution approving them tenatively, for the purpose of obtaining bids. Proposals will be advertised for on August 8th and will be received on September 5. The work will be let in four contracts, as the law requires; namely, for general construction, plumbing, steam heating and electrical work.

TWO GREEKS HELD ON LARCENY CHARGE

John Cramtraico and Gounors Katsona Held on Complaint of Satviors Cocalis.

John Cramtraico and Gounors Katsona, two Greeks living on the third floor of 110 West Front street, were remanded for a hearing until Wednesday morning when they were arraigned before City Judge William G. De Meza this morning on a charge of larceny, preferred against them by Sotirors Cocalis, who lives on the second floor of the same building. Cocalis alleges that some time Saturday morning the pair broke into his apartment and stole his vest with $110 and a gold watch in it, and also took $24 from the room of a Greek employed by him, boarding in the next room.

When Cocalis appealed to the police Saturday noon he had no clue as to the ones that broke into his room, but when Captain Flynn and Patrolman Walsh went to the place they detected an odor of burning cloth and after a search they found portions of the vest in a stove on the third floor, where the two accused Greeks have their quarters. Further search revealed the money in a shoe and the watch hidden in the bed. Crantraico and Katsona profess ignorance of the entire matter and have engaged counsel to defend them.

PICTURES OF JERSEY CITY EXPLOSION AT PROCTOR'S

Moving pictures of scenes at Black Tom and vicinity, where the terrific explosion took place early yesterday morning, will be shown in Proctor's Theatre tonight. The debris of the many carloads of explosives consigned to the entente allies and the pictures of the destroyed warehouses of the National Storage Company are included in the many scenes. The shock of the two explosions was felt here by hundreds of Plainfielders.

"MINISTRY AND MIRACLES OF CHRIST" AT HOPE CHAPEL

The first of the illustrated gospel hymns, that will now be a weekly feature as long as the lectures continues, was shown. As pictures illustrative of "Thow Out the Life Line" were projected on the screen, the hymn was sung by Thomas M. Jones. A duet was also sung by the Misses Eunice Eckert and Elizabeth Doig, and several selections were sung by a chorus choir.

POLICE TO KILL ALL STRAY DOGS AND CATS

All stray dogs and cats in the city of Plainfield have been doomed to death through a blanket order issued by Mayor Calkins this morning, and they will be executed as soon as caught. Members of the police department are to make a round up of the canines and felines during the week and it is expected that the number killed will run way into the hundreds. The dogs will be shot wherever found and without complaint, as those that are not licensed are not within the law, but cats are to be killed only on complaint. The police do not want to kill pets that are harmless. They ask that all persons who are annoyed by stray cats catch same and notify headquarters. A man will be sent to take the cat away and kill it.

3 ARRESTED FOR BIG EXPLOSION

Charged With Manslaughter for Allowing Lighter to Tie up During Night.

FELT IN PLAINFIELD

MacKenzie, Head of Storage Company, Says Damage is Near $15,000,000, All Covered by Insurance—Will Rebuild at Once.

Alexander Davidson, superintendent of the National Docks and Storage Company, of which Edmund L. MacKenzie, of this city, is president, is one of three men arrested on charges of manslaughter as a result of the gigantic explosion of yesterday morning on Black Tom Island. The warrants were served in Jersey City yesterday. They were sworn out by James Connelly, Jersey City Inspector of Combustibles. Albert M. Dickman, agent at the Black Tom dock for the Lehigh Valley railroad, and Theodore B. Johnson, head of the Johnson Lighterage and Towing Company, were also arrested.

The charge against them is that they were responsibile for the explosion and its loss of life and property because they permitted Lighter 24 to make a mooring for the night at the Lehigh dock. This lighter caught fire, according to the investigators, and sparks from it carried the blaze to the long train of cars loaded with dynamite and other explosives.

Many Plainfield people journeyed to Jersey City yesterday but were not rewarded as the streets leading to the burned district were carefully guarded by policemen, detectives and United States soldiers and no one was allowed to pass. The explosion, or rather both explosions, were plainly heard here, the first at 2:10 a. m., waking a large part of the population. No damage was done, so far as could be learned, and the only window reported broken in Plainfield was in one of the public schools.

When questioned by a Press reporter last night Mr. MacKenzie said that he could give no explanation of the cause of the fire.

"The National Storage Company has lived up to all Federal restrictions, and I am sure that the trouble was not due to any laxity," said Mr. MacKenzie. "We only recently installed a sprinkler system in our warehouses at an expense of $125,000; but under such conditions it proved worthless."

Mr. MacKenzie said he estimated the loss at between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000 and added that the company carried ample insurance. The goods stored in the warehouses were covered by insurance in the name of the owners.

"Thirteen of the eighteen warehouses are in ruins," said Mr. MacKenzie. "They were all stored full of goods of every description, and included 30,000 tons of raw sugar, this year's crop, and 24,000 bales of tobacco. The sugar was valued at between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 alone.

"The Brazilian steamer Tijuca, 2,500 tons, which recently arrived with a cargo of goods from Lisbon, Spain, was saved, but her cargo was entirely lost, as was also the vessel George E. Wolcott, 1,200 tons, which had just arrived from Cuba with a cargo of mahogany lumber. I was informed of the explosion five minutes after it occurred by the American District Telegraph Company, which furnished a supervisory system over our entire plant."

Mr. MacKenzie, in reply to a question, said the company would undoubtedly rebuild its warehouses just as soon as a settlement of affairs was made. He emphatically denied that the company had stored munitions on its property beyond the usual time allowed, and felt sure that every requirement of the law had been complied with by the company.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED OF MISS MARY COMPTON

Announcement is made today of the engagement of Miss Mary Compton, daughter of the late Halstead C. Compton, of this city, to Rev. Edgar Atherhol, of Philadelphia. The latter was formerly a Methodist minister, but recently has been engaged in special missionary work and he is also chaplain of one of the Philadelphia regiments of the National Guard, in which he is much interested.

Miss Compton and Mr. Atherhol met at Cromanton, Fla., two years ago, the former having a winter home at the latter place. While no date for the wedding has been announced, it is expected that it will take place in the near future. Miss Compton has been a life-long member of the First Baptist church here and active in the Sunday school.

Eleven new members, eight on probation and three by letter, were received by the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson at the morning service of the First M. E. church yesterday.

SMINCK READY TO REPORT ON FLOOD

Has Made Two Trips to Washington Valley for Investigation.

The only manner in which a reoccurence of the flood of last week can be prevented is to provide a larger passage way through this city for the waters of Greenbrook, according to Councilman Charles H. Sminck, who has made a thorough investigation into the cause of the freshet.

More than five inches of rain fell in Washington Valley in two hours last Wednesday, according to the residents there and it was this water that was responsible for the flooded streets in Plainfield. One man, Manager Franklin, of the poultry plant at Bonnie Burn, set a large washtub out during the rain. Five and two-tenths inches of water were caught in it in an hour, and to be conservative Mr. Franklin put the rainfall at five inches, which is a record. Other residents in the valley corroborate the statements of Mr. Franklin, and many of them told Mr. Sminck strange stories of the volume and the strength of the water in Greenbrook. Huge rocks, weighing 200, 300 and even 400 pounds were washed miles by the brook after it rose, and a heavy road machine, weighing 1,600 pounds was carried hundreds of feet. Just before reaching Plainfield the ordinarily peaceful stream was from 200 to 400 yards wide, and several feet deep, and in going under certain streets here it had to pass through passageways not more than four feet wide and four or five feet deep. These acted as dams, and backed the water up over streets and lots.

Mr. Sminck will make a personal report to the Council at the meeting of next Monday night. He has made two visits to Washington Valley, one while the flood was raging and another yesterday, after the waters had gone down.

LABOR DAY PARADE TO BE BIG AFFAIR

All the Trades and Industries Will Be Represented in the Demonstration.

That the Labor Day parade and demonstration of the allied trades of Plainfield will be bigger and better than ever is now assured and practically every trade and industry in this city will be represented. Reports to that effect were received at the meeting of the Allied Trades' Committee Saturday night. A committee was named to receive donations, it being estimated that $1,000 will be needed to make the affair a success.

The various organizations are enthusiastic over the outlook. Among the trades to be represented will be the machinists, moulders, painters, in their natty uniforms, the tinners, who promise surprise, the drop-forgers and die-sinkers from the Spicer plant, the Typographical union, electricians and pattern-makers, building laborers and hod-carriers and the barbers, it being planned to close the shops at 11 o'clock in the morning. Every industry in the city is expected to be represented.

The reports indicated that the public is responding generously to appeals for funds. All the merchants and residents of the city will be asked to decorate for the demonstration. One of the big features of the parade will be the many unique floats, similar to those entered two years ago by J. D. Lozieaux and the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company.

A large committee of thirty has been named to arrange the details and meetings will be held every Tuesday night until Labor Day. Invitations will be sent to the officials of Plainfield and North Plainfield to review the parade, and it is expected that the police and fire departments of both municipalities will take part in the demonstration.

This affair is intended to show the strength of trade unionism in Plainfield and to let the people see the exceptional character of the men comprising it. The officers of the committee comprise the following. Chairman, Richard D. Scott; treasurer, Allen R. M. Anderson; secretary, Ernest A. Rhodes.

ALLEN BEALS SPOKE AT FRESH AIR CAMP SERVICE

Allen Beals, former Boy Scout commissioner in the city and still interested in the work, was in charge of the services at the Fresh Air Camp yesterday afternoon. He made a very interesting and instructive address to 330 youngsters, and music was rendered by a chorus choir in charge of Clifford Braider. Although none of the children are sick, no visitors were allowed at the services because of the wish of the Board of Health to take precautions on account of infantile paralysis.

PARALYSIS CASES HAVE INCREASED

Six Victims in Plainfield and Watchung Reported by Health Authorities.

ALL ARE DOING WELL

Polish Servant Breaks Quarantine to Attend Wedding in Bound Brook, But is Promptly Brought Home.

There are now four cases of infantile paralysis in Plainfield, three having developed since Saturday in different sections of the city. One of the new cases reported is that of Julian Ronsheim, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Ronshein, of New York, who has been visiting Mr. Ronshein's brother-in-law, Herbert Schuldenfrei, of Sandford avenue, for several weeks. The child was taken ill on July 25, since which time he has been in charge of a physician and nurse.

Although strict quarantine regulations have been enforced, it was reported this morning that a Polish servant in the Schuldenker family, slipped away yesterday to attend a wedding at Bound Brook, and had to be brought back by health officials. She had not been in contact with the victim of the case.

Another case is that of Alice Mildred Hahne, 2½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hahne, of 1214 Myrtle avenue, just west of Clinton avenue. She has been ill for three days, the disease affecting the right leg.

The third case is that of Philip Millwater, Jr., the 4½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Millwater, of 735 South avenue. This was at first a suspected case, but since Saturday the disease has been pronounced infantile paralysis.

Three cases were also reported today on Mountain boulevard, Watchung, two being the infant children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vosseler and the other the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles White. Both Mrs. Vosseler and Mrs. White are daughters of Henry Pedeflous, of North Plainfield township.

The Watchung children have been ill for over a week, but it was not until Saturday night that the attending physician determined that it was infantile paralysis. The homes have been placed under quarantine by the North Plainfield township health authorities.

The home of Mrs. Sarah Millwater, on West Front street, has also been placed under quarantine, because Mrs. Stillwater visited the home of her son, Philip Millwater, on South avenue, while the latter's son was ill with paralysis. Heath Officer Randolph Chandler today issues a warning against any one interfering with quarantine notices put up by the Board of Health.

FOURTEEN YEAR OLD COLORED YOUTH HIT BY "PUSHER"

Suffering from lacerations and contusions of the head, arm and legs, besides numerous cuts on the body, Thomas Jones, a 14-year-old colored youth of West Third street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today, after he had been hit by a "pusher" on the railroad tracks near Lafayette place. The boy was trying to cross the tracks to the ice plant near by and did not see the engine approaching.

It was said at the hospital this afternoon that there was an even chance for the boy's recovery.

MAJ. BRYANT SUDDENLY ORDERED BEFORE A MEDICAL BOARD AND PRONOUNCED PHYSICALLY UNFIT

RELIEVED OF COMMAND OF NEW JERSEY CAVALRY TROOPS YESTERDAY—HAD BEEN ILL BUT A WEEK, SAYS REPORT.

ON WAY BACK HOME TO GET RETIREMENT ORDER

Forty-one Years a Member of National Guard in This State—Built up Present Squadron of Cavalry From Infantry Troops—Col. Hine Ordered the Examination.

(By Staff Correspondend.)

Douglas, Arizona, Sunday, July 30.—Major William A. Bryant, commanding the New Jersey cavalry, was today suddenly ordered before a medical examining board, and after a hasty examination, was declared unfit for duty and relieved of his command. He will leave the border at once, and has already surrendered his authority over the men in camp here.

Major William Bryant has been ill a week, according to his friends, but no news of this had reached members of the cavalry troops over which he was in command. They do not yet know of his removal, but the order will probably be posted Monday morning. It is said that the condition of Major Bryant makes it imperative that he leave the border at once, and he will probably start on the long trip back to Trenton tomorrow without even a farewell to his men.

The examination was ordered by Col. Hine, commanding the New Jersey regiment, but no news of it leaked out until the decision of the medical board had been reached. Even now Col. Hine refuses to discuss his order, merely announcing that Major Bryant has been pronounced physically unfit for border duty and has been relieved of his command.

Major Bryant has been forty-one years in the National Guard of the State of New Jersey, and through his efficient work there has become a notable figure in the military life of the country. He is sixty-two years of age. He organized the first cavalry troop from infantry soldiers, and worked the present cavalry to its high efficiency.

Major Bryant, of course, regrets the necessity of his retirement to private life, but because of his ill health recognizes the justice of the examining board decision. As there is no retirement provision in the border service regulations he will appeal to Governor Fielder for retirement when he reaches New Jersey.

GUARDSMEN START CRUSADE TO RID DOUGLAS CAMP OF FLIES

(By H. H. Kroh).

Douglas, Arizona, July 27.—Fearing that the fly pest might prove detrimental to the health of the men here, steps were started today to rid the camp of flies as much as possible. Manure was ordered burned up as rapidly as it accumulated, corrals were ordered kept clean and as sanitary as possible and drainage conditions bettered wherever possible. Lieutenant Ballentyne, of the cavalry outfit, was detailed to superintend the opening of the county gutter along the county road, which forms the south boundary of the camp. Large quantities of crude oil and other germ killing preparations were used in the first day's fight against the millions of black wings that are pestering life throughout the camp.

Lieutenant Ballentyne had a force of fifty men and a number of mules at work cutting the gutter down to permit the drainage of the ditch beside the road. Efforts to have the county attend to the accumulation of surface water proved futile, and as a last resort General Hine ordered the work done by the State troops detailing Lieutenant Ballentyne to superintend the work, his engineering having been considered valuable.

The flies in the last few days have become almost unbearable. The insects are not confined alone to the camp, but have virtually overrun the city itself. Fly traps catch millions every day, but the supply is never exhausted. The only relief from them seems to be darkness and with the first rays of dawn they are up and at work with a will.

The danger of trouble from insects and the bites of reptiles seems to be increasing daily. A few days ago a newspaperman was bitten by something while taking a photograph in the mesquit brush. He hastened to the field hospital where it was dressed. He believes it was a rattlesnake. Today Captain Samuel Bernard, of Battery B of Camden, was operated upon where an insect had bitten him on the knee. The place was lanced and the captain appears none the worse for the new sting.

The men are getting down to the labors of the new drill program, which was issued for the universal use of the infantry organizations in the camp. General Hine issued the order a few days ago, and the men are getting trained into the new routine that it has effected. There is some dissatisfaction over the fact that afternoon drills have been ordered from 1:30 until 3 o'clock, which is almost the hottest part of the days here normally. The men feel that the three and a half hours in the morning is sufficient under the circumstances, but their commanders are in for the work and are encouraging the men to stand in the game until they are used to the heat.

The work of rebuilding the camp after the terrific blow of Saturday night has not been completed. Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Elizabeth, and his staff, were hard at work all day today trying to repair the damage done to their board hall-side canvas homes. They were badly twisted in the gale and they are attempting to make them more substantial.

OPEN AIR SERVICE.

About fifty members of the German Reformed church and their friends attended the open air service held off the Warenville road. Buses conveyed the people to and from the service. After an appropriate sermon by the Rev. Mr. Hauser, luncheon was served by a joint committee. The afternoon was spent in a social way and the return was made about 7 o'clock. An enjoyable time was had by all.

SUNSET TAKEN FOR A FIRE.

The red flare of a New Jersey sunset last night caused excited persons to inquire at this office what powder mills had blown up. The reflection of the sun struck a gray bank of clouds just before 8 o'clock, giving the impression of a distant fire. The heavens were illumined a deep red for at least three-quarters of an hour.

VIOLATED SANITARY CODE.

Ralph Delebrio, a Greek, of Randolph road, was arraigned in city court this morning on complaint of the Board of Health. He was given twenty-four hours to clean his premises or be fined by the court. There were several other cases up for violations of the sanitary code that were postponed.

RELEASED ON PROBATION.

Frank Russo, an eighteen-year-old Italian, was given another chance by City Judge William G. DeMeza when he was arraigned in police court this morning on complaint of his father. The boy, according to the father, had refused to work and was constantly getting into trouble. Last Friday he threatened to shoot members of the family and was caught by the police after a chase. Russo promised to go to work and to report to police headquarters every Saturday.

Bogan, pastor of the church, and was witnessed by Miss Mary Burke and Thomas Burke, also of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Flanagan will continue to make their home here.

DUNELLEN RESIDENTS AROUSED BY EXPLOSION

Many Thought the End of the World Had Come—No Damage Reported.

The residents of this place who were not awakened by the terrific explosion Sunday were few in number, the concussion being heard distinctly here. A number of people say that they were nearly thrown out of their beds. Some thought that the end of the world had come while others were of the opinion that a powder train had been blown up while en route through the borough. One lone person says that he thought the Germans were bombarding New York.

The only known Dunellenite in Jersey City at the time of the explosion was Hervey B. Walters, of Washington avenue, who is employed by the New Jersey Central in its freigh t office. Mr. Walters was working at his desk when the desk literally moved away from him. A general order was given for all employees to vacate the building at once and to lie flat on the ground, and Mr. Walters and the others lost no time in complying with this command.

MINISTERIAL PENSIONS NOW TOTAL $2,500,000 ANNUALLY

Aged preachers and their families have recently received $2,500,000 annually in pensions and relief funds from nine Protestant denominations, according to a statement issued by a committee appointed at a recent meeting of the secretaries of several denominational pension systems. The committee consists of Rev. Drs. William A. Rice, Congregationalist, of New York; Charles J. McClure, Episcopalian, Philadelphia, and Joseph B. Hingeley, Methodist Episcopal, Chicago.

The several denominations are active in an effort to raise $50,000,000 for retired ministers and widows and orphans of ministers. Already $20,000,000 is in hand, it is stated. Pension funds are a necessity, the committee points out, because of the inadequate compensation, for ministers in active service, the expense of preparing for their life work and the advanced age of the men when they begin preaching as compared with the age of men taking up other forms of endeavor.

The denominations engaged in this movement have a combined membership of more than 13,000,000 and include the following churches: Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, Protestant Episcopal, Northern Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Congregational, Presbyterian, Presbyterian South and Lutheran.

NATION'S EXPERTS PLAN DEFENSES

Committee on Preparedness Gets Favorable Legislation.

REPORTS FROM ALL STATES

Chairman Howard E. Coffin Determining How Manufacturing Plants of the Nation Could Aid Government In Time of an Emergency—Everything Needed From Soap to Shells.

Congress has practically completed legislation that will carry out the entire program of the committee on industrial preparedness of the United States naval consulting board to establish a firm and enduring foundation for the nation's defense.

There will also be incorporated into law the committee's carefully worked out plans to teach American manufacturers now in time of peace, through annual educational orders, how to turn out war munitions and all other military and naval supplies when needed. It likewise seems probable that legislation will soon be passed adopting the committee's measure for an industrial reserve, so that in time of war the skilled mechanic shall be kept at home on the job, where his services are most needed to feed the firing line.

This legislation comes during the closing days of the committee's remarkable three months' campaign, made with a volunteer, unpaid organization of business men and engineers. It has been an epoch making work and marks definitely the new era of the engineer in the preservation of national governments.

Although the committee's great industrial inventory had been making excellent progress, national conditions recently became such that Chairman Howard E. Coffin sent urgent telegrams to the chairmen of the committee's state boards directing them to make all possible haste to gather the industrial information so vital to the army and navy of the United States. At the same time Secretary of War Baker detailed five officers of the regular army service, two of them members of the general staff, to the committee's offices in the Engineering Societies building, New York, to assist in rushing the work to the limit and to gain immediate benefit for the government of the large amount of data already obtained.

Many Reports Come In.

As a result of the increased vigor of the work of the great army of engineers and chemists under Chairman Coffin and Supervising Director W. S. Gifford reports are coming in from the field in even greater quantity than before. The engineers and chemists are members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Chemical society. The committee is inventorying scores of thousands of plants to know exactly how each one of them can adapt its equipment to produce the thousands of things, from shells to shaving brushes, necessary for the government's use in an emergency.

There are more than 30,000 manufacturing concerns in the United States doing a business of over $100,000 a year, and all of these are being inventoried, to say nothing of many smaller plants with equipment peculiarly suited to turn out material for the fighting line.

Only a few business men have refused to give the desired information, usually to yield on a fuller explanation of the committee's purpose and the country's need.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

She is now the head of six generations, the Shrake family being the only one in America, it is believed, which can boast of such a record. Her descendants number altogether nearly 180.

Nearly 300 young women soldiers are registered for the camp opening August 1 on Staten Island, N. Y., under the auspices of the American Woman's League for Self-Defense. Aviation lessons, with a weekly aeroplane flight, will be a feature of the general military instruction given the young women.

HOW JERSEY GUARDS CAMP AT DOUGLAS IS LAID OUT

Douglas, Ariz., July 31.—Possibly the people back home would like to know the exact position of the New Jersey brigade, just where their boys are in the big tent city.

At the easterly end of the camp, one-half mile south of the adobe houses of Pirtleville, and about one mile west of the outskirts of Douglas, on the Douglas-Bisbee road, are the headquarters of Brigadier General Edwin W. Hine and his staff. The tents face west, across an open space of about 150 yards, looking down the main street through the brigade.

South of this road, which was built by Jerseymen, are the quarters of the officers, extending all the way down to the last street in the Fourth regiment, more than a mile away.

To the north of this road are the company, troop, or battery streets, the men living in big pyramidal tents, sleeping eight to a tent. There is a company in each block on each side of the company streets. The company tents stretch northward toward Pirtleville, and number from eight to twelve to a company, according to the number of men. On the main brigade road, on the privates' side, are the kitchen flies, with their big stoves and adobe incinerators, and back of them are mess halls, when the outfits are so fortunate as to have halls. Then, north of all, are the picket lines for the horses, miles of lines for hundreds of horses and mules.

Proceeding from General Hine's tent, the first company street is that of Battery A, with the red artillery guidon flying in front of the officers' tents. The next street is that of Battery B of Camden, and then comes Troop D of Plainfield, Troop B of Red Bank, Troop C and Troop A of Newark and the Signal Corps of Jersey City. Then comes a break in the line, with a cluster of bigger tents—the hospital and infirmary of the First Field Hospital of Elizabeth. Although credited to Elizabeth, most of the officers and ninety per cent. of the men of this command are from Newark. Then there is the First Ambulance Company, with the parked ambulances and its stretcher bearers, who always are on duty. The Field Hospital flies the Red Cross flag under Old Glory in the day time and at night carries two green lights high up in the air, so that they can be seen all over the camp.

Beyond this camp is the big drainage ditch of the First regiment, with the company officers on the south side of the brigade street, facing, like the officers of other commands, into the company streets. Back of the officers' tents are the headquarters of Colonel John D. Fraser, Lieutenant Colonel George M. Buttle and the field officers, and back of them are the quartermaster and commissary tents and the regimental postoffice. The Fifth regiment comes next, in the same order, and then the Fourth. Near the Bisbee road, back of each regiment, the big transport wagons are parked, and north tre the pickets for horses, with great mountains of baled hay, which make fine lookouts for the sentries.

THIRD REGIMENT SETS UP CAMP AT SEA GIRT AND BEGINS WORK OF SUMMER MANOEUVRES

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, July 31.—So far as is practical the work of the Third Regiment, which arrived in camp for a week's tour of duty on Saturday afternoon, will follow the program which was used by the Second Regiment last week. In keeping with this plan the men of the command, after having a comparatively easy time of it yesterday were up and at work before 6 o'clock this morning, and before night a battalion will leave for a practice hike that will take them out into the country over night. Two companies are on the rifle range all day, and the others drill all the morning and again this afternoon on the big parade ground.

For a while yesterday morning it looked as if the command was going to see a different kind of work for a few days than was planned. When word of the big explosion at Jersey City reached Governor Fielder, he had a talk with General Sadler, and the latter official made quick arrangements with the railroad officials to move troops to the affected district should they be needed. The Governor left here shortly after 10 o'clock in an automobile, but when he arrived in Jersey City at noon he 'phoned to General Sadler that the police had matters well in hand and the order for the train was cancelled. As a result the usual Sunday program was carried out.

Fair weather made the day the busiest that has been seen here since camp opened. The soldier boys had hundreds of visitors from their home towns, who came here on a special excursion run from Camden. The evening parade was witnessed by a crowd of five or six thousand, and every company street had its quota of visitors until dark. In the morning church service was held on the lawn adjoining the Governor's cottage, the first of the kind that has been held in two years. While Governor Fielder was unable to be present himself on account of going to Jersey City, practically all the officers in camp occupied the porch of the cottage, and Mrs. Fielder had a number of women friends with her. Chaplain Charles Brattan Dubell, and the regimental band were mounted on the knoll near the porch of the cottage, and the clergyman preached a preparedness sermon to about half of the men of the command. Catholic services were held in the mess hall earlier in the morning.

What is probably the final chapter in the effort on the part of the officers of the Fourth and Fifth Regiment to have regular army officers attached to their commands as members of the first staff, was written this morning. As has been told the officers of the Fourth selected Captain Walter A. Reed, who has been detailed in the State as an instructor for two years, as a major to succeed one of the men in that command who was unable to go to the front because of physical incapacity. Similar action was taken by the Fifth Regiment with Lieutenant C. B. Elliott. Confirmation of the election was needed from the Federal War Department, and it is said that General Leonard Wood and others approved of the move, but some one at Washington objected. Every influnce was brought to bear, even to appealing to Secretary Tumulty and high military authorities, the appeals being made by Governor Fielder and General Sadler. The War Department's stand was that the men could not be taken into a National Guard regiment unless they were selected to a rank of lieutenant-colonel or higher. Exceptions were made in six cases in other States, but the department was adamant in the case of New Jersey.

General Sadler therefore, with reluctance, this morning wrote to Colonel Albert A. Van Walraven, of the Fifth, and Colonel George T. Vickers, of the Fourth, authorizing them to hold elections to the positions in their respective commands. State National Guardsmen of course refuse to talk for publication, but privately they express extreme disgust at the red tape and petty injustice of the Washington authorities.

Second Lieutenant Douglas Page, a graduate last month from the United States Military Academy at West Point, and now enjoying his furlough prior to taking up active service, arrived in camp yesterday and joined two other classmates, Delp Styer and Wayne Harkness, who have been here for some weeks. Lieutenant Page has been devoting his time to especial study of cavalry work, and he has volunteered to take the mounted orderly section and other mounted parts of the regiment in hand while here. The young men serve voluntarily, and the State authorities have expressed to them their great pleasure at having their services.

Shortly before the Second Regiment left camp on Saturday, Governor Fielder sent a letter to Colonel John A. Mather in which he commended him on the excellent way in which the boys had tackled the work laid out for them, and said that he felt sure that if they had been called out to the border they would have given fully as creditable account of themselves as has been done by the commands that have gone forward. He expressed regret that they had not been called, as there seemed to be such a desire on the part of the men to go when the mobilization order first came.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

When I stop my engine with the switch I have no trouble in starting it, but when I stall it or "kill" it I have to crank and spin it around a great deal before I can get it started again. What is the trouble with it and what remedy would you prescribe?

Since your car seems to run perfectly except for this difficulty in starting when the engine has been stalled this condition seems to indicate that your carburetor is adjusted correctly and that your engine is working at maximum efficiency. It would be very easy to make your motor less difficult to start when stalled, this requiring simply that the carburetor be adjusted to supply a richer mixture to the cylinders. The reason you have a hard time stopping the engine when stalled is that it is stopped instantly and the cylinders contain only inert dead gas which gives no explosion when the spark is turned on. When the motor is stopped on the switch, on the other hand, it makes several revolutions before coming to rest, thus pumping a fresh charge of live gas into the cylinders. With this live gas under compression in the motor starting is an easy matter.

It would seem best to leave the carburetor as it is, for it is saving you money in gasoline and wear on your motor, as well as preventing accumulation of carbon in the cylinders. You should be more careful in driving to see that the throttle is always open sufficiently to meet the conditions of road and load. An expert driver or one who is familiar with his car rarely stalls his motor, and by giving attention to sufficient throttle opening you should avoid this trouble.

I am overhauling my car and find that the intake valve opens before the exhaust is closed. What is the reason for this? Would it not allow the exhaust gases to back up into the carburetor? Or, if not that, would it not impair the suction of the intake charge?

The point is often brought up as to why the exhaust valves are left open after the inlet has been opened, and also why the exhaust is opened before the end of the power stroke, thus allowing some of the explosive pressure to escape through the valve opening. Examination of the conditions of operation soon dispels any thought that the exhaust should remain closed until the very end of the explosion stroke, at least.

As a matter of fact, the practice is almost universal of leaving the inlet valve open until the piston has not only reached the bottom of its suction stroke, but has actually started back on its compression stroke, ordinarily about one-half inch up. At first thought it would seem that some of the gas drawn in would be forced back again into the inlet passage, but the speed of the engine must be taken into consideration. At a normal rate of running about fifteen cycles would be completed in one minute with a moderate speed engine, and at such a speed the piston has reached the lowest point of its stroke before the gas has all been able to get in, because the gas moves slower. So even when the compression stroke has begun there is still some slight suction tending to draw more fuel in.

In charging a magnet how much and what size magnet wire should I use to secure the best results on a 110 volt direct current? How many lamps will have to be used in series?

There are a number of sizes and shapes of electro magnets that would do your work, but perhaps the most practical and easiest to make is one that has a diameter of about four inches and a height of about seven and one-half inches. The core should be made of a cylindrical piece of soft iron about one inch in diameter, and you can use a disk of fiber material at either end to hold the wire on. Carefully wrap the iron core with a piece of heavy oiled paper and then shellac it. Leaving about twelve inches of length free, wind about ten pounds of insulated copper wire around the core carefully and evenly throughout its length. Wind the two spools in opposite directions so that a north pole of one will be opposite a south pole of the other when you assemble the two wound spools side by side on a wooden base so that they are about one-half inch apart. Connect them in series and then run the end wire from each to the current source through a switch. You would not have to use any lamps.

Which gives the brighter light, a six volt lamp or a seven volt? The battery is a six volt storage, and what is the right candle power to use? Does it harm the battery to use seven volt lamps? Will a seven volt lamp burn out as easily as a six volt?

On a six volt circuit the six volt lamp will give the brighter light, although its life will not be as long as the seven volt. The candle power can be anything you choose, but the greater the candle power the more current will be consumed. Lamps which are up to date burn about one watt per candle power. It does not harm the battery to use seven volt lamps, and a seven volt lamp will not burn out as quickly as a six volt on a six volt circuit.

I have a four cylinder car and for some time it has been missing on No. 1 and No. 4 cylinders, and I am unable to remedy this. The plugs are all right and the compression good. I have put new platinum points in the magneto breaker, have cleaned the carbon from the cylinders, adjusted and readjusted the spark plug points. Have tried new plugs, changed them from 2 and 3 to 1 and 4; have adjusted the carburetor, but still numbers 1 and 4 miss. Sometimes they miss, and then again they do not. This occurs at both low and high speeds, with and without load. Can you tell me what the trouble can be in this case?

The circuit breaker cam in the magneto is probably worn so that the circuits are not broken on cylinders Nos. 1 and 4 or the distributor gaps for these cylinders might be too wide. Leaky valves or manifold connections might also account for the missing cylinders.

What are the requirements of a first class spark plug, porcelain or stone?

That the insulation does not leak, that the shell is not cracked by tightening the spark plug nut and that the plug does not foul or the points rapidly burn away.

Can you tell me the correct method of setting or putting on a magneto, also as regards the brakes in order to get the best results when valves and other conditions are all right?

It is common practice to set the breaker box so that when No. 1 cylinder passes the point of dead center—that is, at the top of the piston stroke—the points for No. 1 cylinder will break, this with the spark lever at full retard.

Approximately how much and what size of fine wire would be used in making a cut-out relay to work on a six volt generator?

The amount of wire and size will vary with the design of the cut-out, but it will approximate in general the ordinary bell buzzer winding designed for that voltage.

Can you tell me how to find the horsepower of automobiles?

Multiply the bore of the motor by itself, then by the number of cylinders and divide by 2½.

What is the relation of valve diameter and width of valve seat to valve spring pressure?

The relation between valve diameter and valve spring tension is simply empirical. There is no definite rule which designers follow in this respect. In general it may be said that the speed of the motor affects the stiffness of the spring more than the points you mention, as at high speeds it is necessary to have a spring which will close the valve sufficiently rapidly to prevent the cam from running away from the follower. It must be remembered that the spring acts with the gas pressure against the cam action, so that in lifting the valve the cam must lift the load of the spring plus the load due to the area of the valve upon which the pressure is acting. In closing the gas pressure is immaterial, as at that time it has generally reached close to atmospheric.

At times when I turn on the lights of my car the engine stops. I have examined all the wiring and can find nothing loose or dirty or short circuited. I had a vacuum gasoline system put on the car and thought perhaps when the engine stopped it was not feeding properly, but on examination found plenty of gasoline. What do you think is the cause of this and how can I remedy it?

This trouble may either be caused by a poor connection on the ignition system or by a swinging ground somewhere on the circuit that causes the circuit breaker to trip. It is suggested that you inspect the system and see if the lights go out when the ignition stops. You can test this by trying it on the battery ignition with the lights on. It is possible that there might be a broken valve spring in the valve leading to the intake manifold on the vacuum system. If this valve spring were broken, occasionally a supply of raw gas would be drawn directly into the intake manifold. This would kill the motor, although the gasoline supply in the carburetor would not be seriously affected by the broken spring.

How is the power divided on the rear wheels of an automobile going around turns at right angles? Is the power equal on both wheels or is there more on one wheel than on the other?

In turning a curve at right angles the power is exerted by the outside wheel while the inside wheel simply acts as a pivot point.

I have 33 by 4 tires on the rear wheels of my car and 32 by 3½ on the front wheels. Does it take away any power when one has oversize tires on rear? Please explain if it does, and how much.

The difference would be so slight as to be almost negligible. The only thing the oversize tires do is to raise the ratio slightly between speed of engine and wheels—that is, it would take slightly less number of revolutions of the crank shaft to travel a given distance where you use tires of larger diameter.

The store's advertisement is the store's daily message to you—and there is not often a day in which there is not something new and interesting in that message.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

MRS. BARTELS DIES AT WATCHUNG HOME

Well Known Resident Passes Away in Her Ninety-first Year.

Mrs. Dorothea Bartels, probably one of the oldest and best known women residents of Watchung, died at her home on Washington Drive, that place, Saturday evening at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Bartels was ninety years of age and for the past two years had been a great sufferer from cancer. The greater part of the life of the deceased had been spent in Watchung. Mrs. Bartels was a devoted member of St. Peter's Lutheran church of North Plainfield, and took an active interest in the various church activities as long as her health permitted.

Two daughters and two sons survive Mrs. Baretls. These are Mrs. Edward T. Canning, of Watchung; Mrs. Margaret Cooper, of Mt. Bethel; Bolke T. Luerssen, of Reading, Pa., and Francis Bartels, of Watchung. The funeral will be held at the late home, Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock and the service will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Alfred Moldenke, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, and Rev. Mebane Ramsay, pastor of the Wilson Memorial church. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

BERT SHERMAN SUCCUMBS AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Bert Sherman, aged 32 years, died this morning at the home of his parents, 1313 Astor place. He had been ill for some time. Mr. Sherman was born in Belmar, N. J., but he moved to Plainfield with his parents twenty-three years ago. He was educated in the public schools here, after which he learned the trade of pattern-maker which he had since followed. For some time he was with the Pond Tool Works, but before his retirement because of ill health was connected with the Saurers. Funeral services will be held from the late residence at 8:15 Wednesday morning, and at St. Mary's church at 8:45, when requiem mass will be said. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery. Besides his mother, Mr. Shermans is survived by a wife, Mrs. Gertrude Sherman, and one brother, Arthur M. Sherman, of Plainfield. He leaves a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

MEN MAKE MERRY AS THEY SUFFER FROM HEAT ON MEXICAN BORDER

Little Stories About National Guardsmen Who Are Facing Inconveniences and Hot Weather of Texas Frontier.

Camp Life Is Gay, but Discipline Is Strict—Making Real Soldiers Out of the Boys From Many States.

HOW long will our boys stay mobilized on the Mexican frontier?

This is a question that can only be answered by the events that the future has in store. They are there now, however, and the whole country is interested in knowing what they are doing. There are thousands and thousands of mothers, sisters, sweethearts and wives who scan the papers for news of their loved ones. So the following little stories, culled from the daily life of the national guardsmen, are interesting:

Fed on 28 Cents a Day.

The appetite of a healthy soldier can be satisfied for 28 cents a day, and this the mess sergeants were told—mess sergeants who, perhaps, never think of spending less than 20 cents for lunch.

"What you save you can put in your troop fund," Sergeant Deming of the regular army service told the Illinois companies.

Corporal Harry Bergerman of Troop K later announced he had a plan to feed the troop on 18 cents a man a day. Housewives desiring the formula, please write.

A Good Wood Carver.

Most of the Mexicans live by making curios or by some similar form of handcraft. However, none has anything on Lieutenant Marriott, adjutant of Major Fisher's Third squadron, Illinois national guard. In the wood pile made by the destruction of the mesquite brush Marriott came upon a piece of ebony. He got a knife and a small hatchet and whittled and chopped all day, making a shillalah. As a woodcarver he was informed he was a better soldier, and not a few suggested that if he continued a place in the home for invalid soldiers at Danville would be awaiting him, but the lieutenant continued to the end, and then, when he disappeared for a few moments, some one kidnaped it. There is a reward sign hanging in front of his tent.

Barber Doing Big Business.

Private Tommy McLaughlin, in the machine gun troop, doesn't care how long the First Illinois cavalry is in service. He is a barber. He brought along his implements, and he does a land office business.

Lieutenant Harry [illegible] of Troop K is an attache of the Chicago juvenile court, and when it comes to humanitarian acts even the smallest creatures find him a quick sympathizer and servant. He was sitting in front of his tent when an unfledged mocking bird fell from its nest in a tree above him. The officer picked up the wee [illegible] assured himself that it was not hurt and then made a precarious climb with it to the nest in the top of the tree to restore it to its mother.

Colored Troops Entertained.

While the members of the signal corps and the field hospital units, District of Columbia national guard, were being entertained in Memphis similar scenes were being enacted at Church's park, where its owner, Robert Church, a millionaire colored banker of Memphis, was providing entertainment for members of the First Separate battalion. Here bathing facilities were afforded the men, and then came a fine big luncheon. A committee of colored citizens was on hand to welcome the members of their race from the eastern section of the country.

There was some sickness on the train with the District's men as the result of the second administration of the typhoid prophylactic, but it was not serious. Captain C. M. Dollman and Captain J. B. Bogan of the field hospital unit took their second shot and spent a day in bed. Headaches and sore arms are the chief complaints, but these will soon pass away, it is stated.

Ride In Pullmans.

B troop of St. Louis, the Second infantry and the ambulance corps, from Kansas City, rode away toward the border in a train of two sections of chair cars and day coaches. This was the first contingent from Camp Clark of Missouri that has not gone in either tourist or standard sleepers.

This course was decided upon rather than to wait in camp for the sleeping equipment, which has been exhausted in extensive troop movements of the last few days.

Practically the entire Ozark region of Missouri was represented in the Second infantry, which entrained to the air of the "Hound Dawg" song, giving the place of honor as the first on board to its recently acquired fleet eared hound. While waiting for the train the company groups gave yells and cheers for their home towns, letting the crowd know where they were from and announcing equally as emphatically that they were "on their way to Mexico."

Boston Paper In El Paso.

With the departure of thousands of New England's sons for the border to serve Uncle Sam in his Mexican crises a Boston paper realized that each and every one of them would be hungry for news from home.

Accordingly it entered into an arrangement with a prominent paper of the border, the El Paso Herald, which circulates extensively in the section occupied by the New England troops, whereby it telegraphs daily to the Herald a condensation of all the home news which editors judge will be of special interest to the New England soldier boys.

This news is printed daily in the El Paso Herald, thus keeping the boys at the front informed of all that's going on back home.

Fort Worth Girls Dance.

The monotony of the long journey which 1,000 Pennsylvania troopers took to the border was broken in Fort Worth when they were entertained with a dance. The band of the Second Pennsylvania regiment furnished the music, and the waiting room of the station was turned into a ballroom, where the troopers danced with the young women of the town several hours. In the night 150 Connecticut cavalrymen also passed through.

Corporal Iverson a Father.

The happiest man at Camp Wilson, where Illinois troops are stationed, is a young corporal. He has just been promoted, not to a mere generalship, but to the high estate of fatherhood. Corporal Ernest Iverson of K company was notified that he is the father of a seven pound baby boy and that the mother is well at their home in Chicago.

An order requiring officers and men to send all civilian clothing back to Chicago was issued and cuts the last link between the guardsmen and civil life. A number of recruits who have been working and drilling in "nobby spring suitings" fell for the new khaki outfits with whoops of joy.

Warned Against Tarantulas.

"How to Beat the 'Tusked Tarantula' and the 'Skeery Scorpion'" was the subject of a list of warnings issued by Major Rogers, surgeon of the Seventh Illinois infantry. Among the rules laid down are:

"Mark a circle around your tent with kerosene, then burn the grass. Shake out your shoes and all clothing on arising in the morning. This means shake, not groping with your fingers. Do not roll off your cot at night. Do not let the ends of your blanket trail on the ground while sleeping. Keep your tent scrupulously clean at all times."

Pies Carefully Guarded.

A "pie guard" is the latest functionary appointed in Camp Wilson. Private Thomas Blake was placed on guard with a rifle and bayonet over fifty fresh pies baked for the members of Company M, Second infantry, by M. Lee, their cook. Fearing a raid by other companies, Sergeant Charles Jones took this precaution to protect the store of juicy gooseberry, prune and peach pies.

The young bride of Captain Richard Dunne, commissary of the Seventh infantry, son of the governor of Illinois, has arrived in San Antonio. She visits her husband at camp for an hour or so each day. The young commissary is now one of the hardest working officers in the Seventh, and he is making good in his staff position, according to brother officers.

Camp Cotton a Real Home.

A wonderful transformation has taken place in Camp Cotton in the days that have elapsed since the first of the Massachusetts troops began to arrive there.

It now has all the accessories of a perfectly appointed base camp, and should any of the men be sent out from it for a tour of duty at small places along the border they will come back to it with a feeling that it is their military home. Colonel Stover of the Fifth stated that if any friend of the regiment at home wants to make it a gift a small car would meet one of its pressing needs, as the character of the work in prospect makes motor transportation for its headquarters necessary. Such a car could be bought in Texas.

Discipline In Camp.

Discipline is tightening in the command at Camp Cotton, where Massachusetts troops are stationed. "A.," who responded to retreat call with sleeves rolled up, was sentenced to clean camp for the entire squadron throughout a day. Sergeant Harcourt Amory, Jr., of B troop has received as a gift a set of war maps of Mexico from his father, Harcourt Amory of Boston.

Captain Charles A. Lovering of B troop has received a delivery car, purchased by friends of the squadron in Boston, through Richard Lovering, the captain's brother.

The men were engaged two days in building their new camp, which is on ground assigned to the new cavalry brigade north of Camp Pershing. Men unqualified at shooting are being drilled at the rifle range, and green men are being drilled to ride.

"Gringo" Means "Gibberish."

Educated Mexicans near the camps declare emphatically that the word "gringo," now applied almost entirely to Americans, does not come from the song "Green Grows the Grass," which the United States soldiers are said to have sung on the march in the Mexican war. They point out that the Spanish language contains the perfectly good and proper word, "gringo," meaning "gibberish," which was in Spanish dictionaries long before the Mexican war. Old Spanish dictionaries give the word as being of Greek origin. They say that any foreigner who came to Mexico and talked a foreign language was said to be talking "gringo," and as there were more Americans than any others of foreign race in Mexico they gradually became known as gringos.

Wants Boy Sent Home.

Charles G. Fisher is a private in an Illinois company. He is the smallest man in the regiment. Captain Octigan got a message from Fisher's father pleading the boy be sent home because "his mother is very ill and I am lonesome. We need his help."

Colonel Moriarty called the boy of twenty to his tent and asked him if he wanted to go home.

"I do not," emphatically replied Fisher. "My parents are well fixed, and I know they are afraid physical harm may come to me. I have no yellow in me, and I will stick to you, Colonel Moriarty, to the last."

The colonel immediately made him his orderly.

Mrs. John Ryan of 3648 Union avenue, Chicago, wrote that her son John had been missing ever since the bands began to play inspiring tunes. She knew, she said, if John had joined he is in Colonel Moriarty's regiment.

"But," she added, "I am not reproaching him for that. If he wants to stay there let him. He is only sixteen, but tell him he must write his mother, who hopes he will be a brave soldier."

O. Klesker is sixteen years old and a private in the Seventh regiment. Shortly after the regiment arrived Captain Octigan received a telegram from a man who said he was the boy's father.

"My son is a cripple," the wire read, according to the captain. "You should not keep him. Send him right home."

Physicians examined the boy, Captain Octigan said, and found not a flaw.

Missouri Men Inspected.

An inspection of ordnance of the Missouri regiments including arms, canteens, bayonets, belts and carrier packs, was most satisfactory. All unserviceable equipment was condemned and new supplies issued.

More than thirty sacks of mail and parcel post packages were received at the postoffice department of the camp at Laredo. Every imaginable article, from tooth paste to boots, has been sent the Missouri men.

The men of the machine gun company, commanded by Captain Norman Comfort, have employed a novel way to get relief from the heat. "Answering call to quarters" at 10 o'clock each evening the men, stripped, line up in company front formation while the noncommissioned officers spray them with a garden hose.

Natural gas is being piped into the camp of A battery of St. Louis, a local gas company making an offer to Captain Frank M. Rumbold to supply the commissary department of the battery without charge. The pipe probably will be extended through the First regiment camps later.

The signal corps of Kansas City installed a complete wireless outfit, with a fifty-seven foot aerial. The instrument has a range of about fifty miles.

She Kissed 971 Men.

Miss Mary Hainesey, Clearfield, Pa., the girl who kissed 971 members of the Eighth Pennsylvania infantry, missing only sixty, before breakfast one morning, found herself so famous in that neighborhood, unaccustomed as it is to osculatory escapades, that she spent several days hiding from inquisitive newspaper men and friends.

Her real name is Elma Hughes, and she lives with her two sisters. She is pretty and modest. She gave several of the soldiers slips of paper with a name and address, but the names were various and the addresses all those of empty lots.

"Maybe it was my fault that I kissed the first man," she said, "but, really, the other boys just would not let me go. They would kiss me and bring up their friends, and, you see, I had to be fair.

"Some folks gave the boys good things to eat and others gave them tobacco. I wanted to give them something, and I had nothing but kisses to give, and, now it's all over, I don't believe there is a man in the Eighth Pennsylvania who will ever forget Clearfield."

A Sad Farewell.

Company M, Pennsylvania national guard, sent this farewell as they left for the border:

We fear not to live,
We fear not to die,
To leave our loved ones at home
To fight for our country's sake.

My wife is just twenty-three,
She is three years younger than me;
I leave her behind with children to mind,
And the house in good order to be.

When I get back from Mexico
Right to Philadelphia I will go;
I'll buy a little table, buy a little chair,
Move in some nice little house
In some nice little square.

Don't forget the cradle
To rock the baby in,
So mother can sit beside it
And sing that famous song
"I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier."

The Review of Reviews, of Plainfield and Its Business

The "Loyal" Plainfielder takes pride in the city's progress.

"Where do you live?" is frequently asked of travelers, and those travelers take pride, if they're loyal, in naming the city or town from which they came.

Plainfield "is" progressive; she's reached a period of decided progressiveness, preparedness.

The government of our city is doing wonders, the marks of progressiveness of our Council stand out in bold relief. As a mark of efficiency, national attention is attracted here to our automobile manufacturing, machine shops and printing press works, and other great plants.

And they're not over-night promotions, either, these industries, but, they're substantial institutions that have been tried and found true, by many long years of successes, through good, bad and indifferent times, and again, results, Plainfield stands on the brink of a still greater prosperity, so prosperous that not a hint of its inefficiency in any direction can be pointed to by the most jealous rival of our city's progress.

Our city has been most fortunate in avoiding ever, serious labor troubles, serious business failures, serious calamities of any kind that have been noted so frequently in many directions throughout the land —well, all things to Plainfield, "Plainfield Right or Wrong," but, Plainfield's right.

Our Plainfield retail mercantile establishments, what of them? Barring a very few, they have been successful to an extent made possible by a combination of the conservative and the progressive; both must go hand in hand to bring about successful results, and so Plainfield can point with pride to her retail mercantile establishments.

May we especially point out the stores of the members of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield. Stores that have had un[illegible] for as long as the oldest [illegible] remember. But, in all t[illegible] has equaled that of the [illegible] dently, nothing has equaled that of the present spring season.

TROOP D NOTES

(Special to Daily Press)

The boys of Troop D are the envy of all the others at Douglas because they have a motor truck, presented to them by Plainfield friends. It relieves the boys of a lot of work, and every day it brings back a load of mail from the camp postoffce.

Major Harold Corbusier, of Plainfield, in command of the First Field Hospital Corps, established a special ward last week to be used in case any of the men in his command are taken sick. The corps has on an average of fifteen cases a day due to prostration, minor acidents and the like.

The larger part of the Troop D boys went to church at Douglas a week ago yesterday and listened to a sermon by the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, who is chaplain of the Fourth Regiment. When they all sang "There is a Spot I Love Far, Far Away" all the boys had moistened eyes.

Flowers and Leaves.

Flowers are produced by the sacrifice of stems and leaves, which subordinate their own functions to the making of seed to carry on the species. In the late summer time, when plants have flowered and set their seed, the leaf spirit seems again to assert itself and in many instances becomes so strong that the miracle of its self sacrifice is revealed. One often sees roses, after producing perfect blossoms, producing some which push out a small bunch of green leaves from the heart, or perhaps the axis of the aborted stem grows right out from the middle and bears a small secondary rosebud. This secondary rose is generally smothered in a calyx more like a conglomeration of leaves than any ordinary calyx, the calyx showing a strong tendency to revert to the leaf form.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Stupendous Surnames.

The bearers of some of the surnames which appear in medieval documents must have been glad of an excuse to change them. Apparently this was done, for the more grotesque have either vanished or have been modified out of recognition. Among the former are such names as Alice Thepundersstepdoghtre, Mazelina Stabwourchman, Frethesancçia Del Countynghouse, Godisman Attestretesende and Thomas Wrangwisshe, which certainly have no claimants nowadays.

Many surnames derived from trade or service have been contracted, such as Le Lindraper into Draper, Le Couhirde into Coward, Le Chapelayn into Chaplin and Le Grenenour (gros veneur) into Grosvenor.—London Opinion.

Vacations Wanted

If you could rescue one little child or one overworked mother from the city's hot, glaring walls and pavements and stuffy rooms, and give them an outing at the beach with bountiful food, rest, coolness, fresh air, a daily dip in the surf, shady porches and sandy beaches, would you not regard such a gift as well worth giving?

Such a gift is entirely within your power. Ten thousand of these mothers and children are waiting for invitations to our Sea Breeze Summer Home. You can send as many as you will for a day, a week or a fortnight.

Allow 50 cents a day or $3 a week for each person, and direct your gift to George Blagden, Treasurer.

MR. STOKES WITHDRAWS.

The withdrawal of former Governor E. C. Stokes from the race for the Republican nomination for United States Senator leaves the field to Franklin Murphy and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen. Mr. Stokes stepped down in the interests of party harmony, he said, in a formal statement. There are many who openly charge that he seeks to force the nomination of Mr. Murphy, but Frelinghuysen supporters insist that with him out of the race their man will be the winner. So far Mr. Stokes has been chiefly benefited by his withdrawal. The Newark News satirically questions his motives and the Elizabeth Times accuses him of getting out to save his own skin when he saw a Democratic landslide coming, but there is no doubt but that he will stand higher in the estimation of the rank and file of the voters. He confesses his personal ambition to represent New Jersey in the United States Senate, and he is nearer a realization of this for what he has just done.

MEXICO THE REAL ISSUE.

National platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties differ materially, campaign orators will argue the old issues of tariff, European relations and home reforms, but the real issue between Wilson and Hughes is to be Mexico. This is now admitted by those in charge of the Hughes campaign, and the giving to the public of official correspondence between this country and the Southern neighbor by Henry Lane Wilson, former Mexican Ambassador, is the first big gun in the effort to elect Hughes. Ambassador Wilson sets aside precedent when he digs into the confidential files of the United States government for material to be used in a political compaign, but not long ago President Wilson used some of the same correspondence to defend his policy of "watchful waiting," and the dishonor must be equally shared. From now until November the American voter is going to be a student of Mexico, its wrongs and abuses.

While New York newspapers are devoting entire columns of valuable editorial page space to denouncing the brutality of the Germans in executing the commander of an English ship who attempted to ram a submarine, a more contemptible crime is being committed hourly in the shadows of the editorial rooms and it excites them not. We can think of no wretch more inhuman than he who preys upon the unfortunate poor. The general sale of fake cures for infantile paralysis in New York is but further proof of the fact that there are always those who seek to make money out of a great plague or tragedy. Even manufacturers have participated in the profits, but for the most part the cures were sold by fake solicitors, who often took the last dollar of a heart-broken father or mother for a package of worthless medicine. Powerful New York did nothing, and it was necessary for the government to issue a warning. One good service that the metropolitan journals could render is to tell the people that medical science knows no cure for the disease that is raging in New York, and thus protect the innocent.

Other militiamen on the border may have cause for complaint, but not those who went from this city. In all the messages that have come back, most of them personal letters, not a single note of dissatisfaction has been found. There are many who would like to be home, no doubt, but if wild stories of unsanitary camps, ill-prepared food or other mistreatment were true some word of it would get to Plainfield.

Yesterday's explosion at Jersey City is another of America's contribution of innocents to the European War. Our casualty list in the making of munitions for England and Germany now exceeds by far that in our own trouble with Mexico, but no one is grumbling, because we are making money out of it.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Oh, R. E. Morse.
I placed five bones upon
A piebald nag;
I got a straight tip from
A ticker wag.
It turned out that my friend
Had guessed it right;
My gallant steed put up
A wondrous fight;
I pocketed my coin
With keen delight.

Next day my friend came to Me once again;
The tip he handed me
Was very plain.
It looked e'en better than
The one before.
He was a learned man
In racing lore.
I bet my winnings and
Ten dollars more.
I haven't seen my learned
Friend since then.
I lost my winnings and
My extra ten.
With spirit humbled and
A mind contrite,
And pride laid low by
R. E. Morse's bite
I borrowed five cents to Ride home that night.

Happy on Bread and Butter.

"What would we not give," says one of our first settlers, "for the appetite of youth! Here am I, tired of chicken and sick of roast beef, but my son comes in from school in the afternoon and asks for bread and butter. He goes from the kitchen to the dining room, eating one slice and carrying three more, which he arranges in front of him on the dining room table at equal distances apart, one back of the other in columns, by companies, a whole battalion of joys! As he eats, he moves up on the reserves and is happy—happy on bread and butter. O happy youth."—Portland Review.

Folks always look at me askance,
As though they would not take a chance

And then said promises took wings.
They do not seem to know that I
To keep my word do ever try.
Oh, pity my condition,
I am a politician.

SWIFT AND CO. TO PENSION EMPLOYES

Announcement Made Today of Fund of $2,000,000 for This Purpose.

Two million dollars was the gift made by Swift and Company to their employes today. Announcement of the accumulation of this sum during the past six years in the form of a pension fund was made to workers in the plants and branch houses in all cities simultaneously. It is estimated that more than 30,000 men and women are eligible, in time, to come under the provisions of the fund, which becomes active August 1.

One of the striking features of the plan as outlined is that the employes do not contribute to the fund, the company furnishing absolutely all money needed to pay pensions. In this connection it is expected that Swift & Company will be called upon to pay $400,000 a year in addition to the income from the fund, in order to meet the demands.

The pension board as organized will consist of five members who are officers or employes of Swift & Company. They are to be appointed annually by the board of directors to serve one year or until a successor is named. The board will elect a chairman and secretary. The treasurer of the company is ex-officio treasurer of the fund.

"Swift & Company have had a pension plan under consideration for over six years and during that time have accumulated for the purpose a fund of two million dollars," said Louis F. Swift, president of the company, today. "In that time we have studied dozens of pension plans in effect in other organizations, both contributory and non-contributory and we believe that we have selected the best points of these and have added a number of good features that are distinctive. We have made it possible for every man and woman in our employ to provide for his or her old age simply by giving efficient work and continuous service. It has been the aim of Swift & Company to tie its employes to itself in many ways. We have worked to that end for years because we believe that our employes become more valuable to us with every year of their continued service. The pension plan is our scheme for rewarding this faithful service."

OLD SOL TAKING HIS SUMMER TOLL

- Proctor's Theatre -

At Proctor's Wednesday.

Gertrude Hornidge, the talented vocalist who has won many friends and admirers by her pleasing rendition of the most popular and latest film song hits, has been retained by the management of Proctors for the other week and beginning today will offer a new repertoire of song successes.

Today the headline photoplay attraction is a Vitagraph production entitled "The Ordeal of Elizabeth," starring Lillian Walker. The management received so many requests from patrons for the presentation of this feature that they have expended a great deal of energy and expense to secure it for presentation today. The elements of a thoroughly good picture have been assembled in this and it is strong in love interest, suspense and mystery. Fortunate in its featured principals—Lillian Walker and Evart Overton—and in the supporting cast, it is also possessed of typically excellent Vitagraph staging and intelligent direction by Wilfred North. Miss Walker is given opportunity for some splendid emotional work, which she handles in a skillful manner. By contrast, the early action presents here as a carefree young girl in the country, whose hasty marriage to a young artist gives rise to her ordeal, which is not ended until she has been tried for his murder. Evart Overton, as the hero, gives the best performance we have seen him offer, while Denton Vane is a splendid villain. There are also L. Rogers Lytton, in an excellent characterization of a district attorney; Ollie Walker, Kate Price, Mrs. M. Storey, Templer Saxe, R. M. S. Putnam and Walter McGrail. In additon to several comedy features today the 13th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" is also shown.

Tomorrow Triangle presents the inimitable comedy star, DeWolf Hopper in a picturization of his greatest success, "Casey at the Bat." In the cast of this production Frank Bennett, of Watchung, appears, a talented young man whose ability is appreciated among his many friends and admirers in this vicinity, and who is entrusted with an important part in support of Mr. Hopper. Tomorrow also a roaring Keystone comedy is shown, and the eighth chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine."

AMERICA LEADS IN INDUSTRY.

Atlantic City, July 31.—America's virtually complete mastery of the glass bottle marts of the world, is the reason set up by the bottle blowers' union for a demand of a 20 per cent. advance in wages for the coming year. The officials of the bottle blowers' organization declare that America has displaced Germany, Belgium and Austria in the glass markets of South American and elsewhere.

"Hail, Columbia."

"Hail, Columbia," was written in 1789 and "The Star Spangled Banner" in 1814. "Hail, Columbia," was first called "General Washington's March," the music having been composed by an orchestra leader in New York and the words written to be sung when Washington went to New York to be inaugurated president April 30, 1789. Later it was called "The President's March" and finally "Hail, Columbia."

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

My attention has been called to an advertisement of P. Ballantine & Sons in the recent issue of the Courier News. Permit me to say that the inferences to be drawn from his adv. are misleading, and the statement of the Ballantine people as to the action taken by the Central Body of Elizabeth is not only misleading but at variance, in some particulars, with the real facts.

The Ballantine Company, a year ago signed a statement that after May 1 this year they would hire union machinists and sign our contract. They have failed to do this.

The issue is not of jurisdictional dispute. It hinges solely upon the refusal of several brewers to sign our contract, which embodies concessions granted the Machinists' Union by the American Federation of Labor, years ago.

The Machinists' Union did not, as stated in the Ballantine letter, agree to refer the dispute in the Elizabeth breweries to the Central Body of that city for settlement, and they have ordered their members who were misled by the action of the Central Body to return to work, to immediately cease working under penalty of having their union cards revoked for scabbing. It is apparent that the Ballantine people have referred to this action of the Central Body of Elizabeth in order to create the inference that the trade union movement of that city is opposed to the stand of the machinists. For the information of the public it might be well to say that when the action of the Central Body on the question was taken, there were about 25 delegates of various trades eligible to vote in attendance. Of this number, just four voted on the question, so it would seem that the action of the Central Body was not the overwhelming endorsement that the Ballantine people would have you believe.

It is wholly within the province of the Ballantine brewery to settle this matter by signing the contract which we have offered and which other employing brewers have signed, and until such time as they do, their product, in the eyes of the trade union world, must necessarily be known as unfair. Every Central Body throughout the State which we have approached has endorsed our stand in this matter with the exception of the Elizabeth Council.

The action of these bodies could not have been otherwise, because of the well known stand of the American Federation of Labor on the question of trade autonomy, as well as their oft repeated slogan that "An injury to one is the concern of all."

The action of Ballantine & Sons in attempting to justify their course in hiding behind an open letter of their allies, the Brewery Workmen, Steam Engineers and Firemen, was to be expected, and will in no way influence the trade union public because of the known acts of these trades in not only furnishing strike breakers to take the places of the strikers, but by working alongside of them as well.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul live in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, sallow-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do —Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Pewit Doesn't Want to Be Burgomaster.

"Take your swim first!" they cried.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

DADDY began the bedtime story with: "Once some neighbors tried to drown an old man, Pewit, but before they threw the tub he was fastened in down on to the bottom of a lake they stopped at an alehouse to get a drink. But they tied the tub Pewit was in fast to a tree first.

"Soon as he was alone Pewit began to plan how he might free himself. He heard 'Ba, ba!' from a flock of sheep and lambs and knew a shepherd must be passing.

"'I won't be burgomaster! I won't be burgomaster!' he shouted.

"'What's all this noise about?' asked the shepherd.

"'Oh, my neighbors want to make me burgomaster against my will. When I refused they shut me in this tub and now are going to throw me into the lake!'

"'If I were you I'd like to be burgomaster!' cried the shepherd.

"'Then let me out of the tub and get in yourself!' shouted Pewit.

"In a flash Pewit was out and the shepherd in. As there was nobody to take care of the flock Pewit drove it merrily off home.

"When the neighbors came out of the alehouse they heard a shouting. 'I will be burgomaster now!' 'Take your swim first!' they cried. And they shoved the tub into the lake and went off home merrily, leaving the shepherd.

"As they turned into their street they met Pewit driving a beautiful flock of sheep into his yard. When they asked him how he got there he answered: 'I sunk deep till I struck the bottom of the lake. Then I kicked the bottom out of the tub and when I arose found myself in a beautiful meadow full of grazing sheep. So I chose what I wanted, and here I am.'

"'Can't we have some, too?' they cried.

"'Thousands of them left,' said Pewit. 'All you have to do is to jump in and fetch them out of the lake.'

"So the greedy neighbors all wanted to dive for sheep. The judge first, then his clerk, the constables and all of the parish one after the other went to the lakeside to dive. The sky was all covered with little white clouds, like flocks of sheep, and all were reflected in the clear water. 'There they are!' the people shouted, and, fearing the judge would get the sheep first, they all jumped in at once. But Pewit jogged home, happy with the sheep he had, leaving his neighbors to find what flocks they could in the bottom of the lake."

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mrs. Morton Adds to Ethel's Suspicion That She Is Not Being Missed.

As Ethel walked slowly back to Mrs. Tellson's she felt herself seriously shaken in her self-contentment for the first time in her life. Here was a person to whom she appeared selfish and trivial. The words burned themselves into the memory. Ralph had found fault with her and she had resented it because she thought it one of the usual disagreeable habits of husbands, but she had never dreamed that anyone else could have a similar opinion.

"What do I care for what a frumpy old woman thinks of me?" she thought angrily to herself; but she did care. She knew that Mrs. Morton was highly respected. Mrs. Tellson said when she asked about her neighbor:

"Mrs. Morton is peculiar in that she always says what she thinks if she believes it will do any good. Other people flatter in order to be liked or to serve some selfish purpose."

"Saying what one thinks is often more than taking a liberty," replied Ethel, but she kept going over the conversation in her mind. "Who ever heard of selfish hands? That is a new kind of palmistry." She spread the hands out to look at them. They were good to look at, certainly.

"Have I been a doll? She said I had never thought, and if I would think I would have a different life." When Ethel finally fell asleep she dreamed that Ralph was standing looking at her picture, saying, "I have lost my doll. Never mind, it was a worthless toy."

For days she brooded over the subject in the enforced solitude of the farmhouse. Finally, she decided to go over to Mrs. Morton; tell her about her running away from home and all the dreary history of their married life. "She will tell me what I ought to do," she thought as she remembered with a wince the adjectives Mrs. Morton had used to express her opinion of herself.

Her heart sank when she thought of facing the stern old woman, but she nerved herself for the interview and set out for the neighboring farm one sunny afternoon in November. A blue haze swept over all the bare brown trees and yellow corn stubble. A solitary crow was winging its way over the barren fields, and his rancous caw alone broke the drowsy stillness.

"I have come to you for help," she said simply as she met Mrs. Morton at the door. There was a kindly gleam in the sharp old eyes as she drew up a rocking chair for her guest.

"Did you know that I had run away from home? My husband does not know where I am." Ethel felt it would be easier after the first plunge.

"I guessed as much," was the laconic answer. "Did you not know that problems are not solved by running away from them?"

"I wrote a note to my husband saying that I would go away because he did not love me any more," continued Ethel.

"What did you intend to do?" Ethel felt the sharp eyes fixed upon her.

"I wanted to make him sorry he had been cross to me. I wanted to make him miss me and want me back." Ethel dropped her eyes.

"What have you done for him that he could miss?" Ethel did not look up. She did not want to meet Mrs. Morton's eyes. "When you have learned to be of some use in the world you can have the satisfaction of being missed. That is one of the privileges of service."

MORNING TUB FROCKS FOR MID-SUMMER.

These Fashioned in Dainty Figured Fabrics Trimmed with Contrasting Bands.

By Mary Glynn.

The morning tub frock is an indispensable item during the very warm weeks, and for this reason the average woman deems it sensible to own at least two or three. Indeed! There is no reason why she shouldn't, because it is a fact that these may be had at astonishingly low sums. Very dainty affairs are shown in figured cotton crepes or voile in one or two tones. These frocks may well be adapted for informal morning wear, and some of the more elaborate styles can be donned for garden-party occasions. Most important in outfits of this type is the matter of selecting them. Such items as the hat, parasol and shoes will do much to make or mar the outfit. The very attractive high-button kid boots are particularly appropriate with these garments, and especially so because they may be obtained in so many of the light shades. The broad-brimmed garden hat with flower and velvet ribbon trimming are invariably attractive and appropriate with this type of garment. Very dainty and attractive sets are often worn with these frocks, in which case parasol, hat and sash are featured in one material. These lend an especially attractive finishing touch to the outfit.

EXCELLENT LINES IN THIS NET BLOUSE.

Here is a blouse that should be selected by the stout woman as her chosen style, though the slender woman can wear it even more successfully—as a slender sister can wear everything. The long lines at the front, formed by the narrow vest and flanking trimming of chiffon and lace, are particularly graceful; the sleeves with their shaped frills are worthy of imitation, so charming is their grace. This blouse is made of fine black net over flesh pink chiffon; there are two layers of the net, one forming the tucked and lace-trimmed outer blouse, the second, a "shadow" blouse underneath, with rolled back edge to outline the flesh chiffon vest.

STYLE TIPS ABOUT TOWN.

Dark hats grow in favor as midsummer advances, as is usually the case. There is always a reversal in favor of dark millinery after the gay colors of spring. Nothing is smarter just now than the wide-brimmed sailor of supple black straw, trimmed with a broad band and tailored bow of black velvet ribbon. A white silk net veil thrown carelessly over such a hat makes it even more chic. Many of these black sport hats have crowns of black velvet, and the soft artist tan is much fancied by women who have faces pretty enough to stand the rather trying style.

Hats made of pontine, the new reversible fabric, which is setting the fashionable world agog, are being shown in exclusive shops. Pontine is a very supple fabric, on one side like fine, glazed leather; the reverse, satin, silk, or almost any other stuff one prefers. A striking mid-summer hat sailor-shaped, is of white pontine with a black velvet reverse. The crown and upper brim show the kid-like white surface, the under-brim the black velvet side. Around the crown is a band of the material black velvet side out, with appliqued flowers and leaves showing the white kid side in striking relief.

Old pink, or ashes of roses, as it is called this summer, and Nattier blue are two charming shades that are charmingly combined in a summer afternoon frock. The skirt is of taffeta in the ashes of roses shade, with a gathered tunic in a sharply vandyked line, the edge of the flounce falling in vandykes also, each point touching the edge of the foundation skirt (of the same material). There are two narrow frills of the silk, one following the vandyked line where the flounce is attached, the other, also in vandyked line, at the hip. The bodice of Nattier taffeta falls over the waistline. The effect is a bit fantastic, but altogether captivating for a youthful figure.

BOARDMAN IN ACCORD WITH CO. CHAIRMAN

G. O. P. Aspirant for Congressional Honors Agrees With Attitude of Newcorn.

Richard Boardman, of this city, candidate for the Congressional nomination on the Republican ticket, has replied to the letter of William Newcorn, chairman of the Union County Republican committee, in which he says that he is in accord with his previous statement as to the attitude of the committee towards candidates. Mr. Boardman's letter follows:

"I have your letter of July 26. I am in hearty accord with practically everything you say. I certainly have no reasons to suppose that there is or will be any concerted action by the Union county organization in any way hostile to me—far from it. I have seen no sign of any such spirit and can imagine no possible cause for any organized hostility from that source.

"Sometimes, I have thought that perhaps my candidacy, should I obtain the nomination, would prove less of a burden to the organization than would Mr. Capstick's candidacy, should he obtain the nomination. But of that, of course, I am in no position to judge.

"The point of my earlier letter was a mild protest against any concerted action looking to the forced withdrawal of Mr. Capstick from the field. I shall attempt so to conduct my campaign that no word or act of mine shall leave any sting in the feelings, either of Mr. Capstick or of any of his friends."

NETHERWOODS DETERMINE TO WIN FLAG ALTHOUGH DEFEAT WAS SATURDAY'S LOT

Hopes vs. Baptists.
T. A. B. S. vs. Netherwood.
Farmers vs. Dunellen.

City League contests on Saturday were full of surprises and they were not all pleasant surprises, either. While the Netherwoods were defeated by the Hopes, the Tabs performed miserably in their game with the Baptists, practically presenting the flag to Netherwood. There is now only one chance in a thousand of the Abstainers annexing the flag. Netherwood is the "champ" in the opinion of many. Of course, statistics show that there is a little matter of a game or so for the Netherwoods to overcome before a formal announcement of the successful journey to Pennantville is made. Netherwood meets the Tabs next Saturday. If the East Enders trim the Tabs and the Baptists trim the Hopes—a stunt that is not in the least improbable—all will be over. Even if the Hopes would win, in view of a Netherwood victory, the Chapel clan could not very well be considered in the running. The real league battle is for second place honors, with the Tabs and Hopes right in the midst of the "mix-up." Dunellen is by no means out of it, either.

The game between the Tabs and the Baptists was a farce. The Abstainers played as poor a brand of baseball in the fateful fifth inning as any team we have seen in "centuries." There was not enough stamina in the club to keep a ball arolling. The vast amount of exercise indulged in was accomplished by the Baptists. The Hopes trimmed the Netherwoods in fancy style, although the game was not "awe inspiring." Of course, Dunellen defeated the Farmers. They all do. Still, the league "cellarettes" put up a nice game.

Several decisions by one or two of the "umps" did not meet with the approval of "all" the fans. But, it must be remembered that one cannot please every one at all times.

HOPE CHAPEL DEFEATS NETHERWOOD OUTFIT

East End Team Makes a Plucky Fight, But Loses Out.

The Netherwood team, minus the services of Russ Stewart, was defeated on Parker Field in the second section of a double bill Saturday, the score of the match being 10 to 8. The Hopes bunched their numerous hits and made every opportunity count. Not one of the East End pitchers was a puzzle to the Chapel lads, who greeted the band of twirlers with a shower of bingles.

Jimmy Montross occupied the mound for the Hopes after Schott retired in the third inning. Jimmy was not very effective, allowing ten hits in five innings. Still, he kept these hits divided.

Eddie Coughlan with five hits out of five trips to the plate was the batting star of the day. Britt Martin registered a home run during the course of the argument.

JOHN DIXON HURLS AND FARMERS LOSE

Dunellen Pitcher Puzzles Farmer Batters Allowing But Three Hits.

The strengthened Farmer A. C. succumbed to the masterly pitching of Johnny Dixon at Dunellen Saturday afternoon, losing 3 to 0. Dixon, who occupied the box for the Apgarites in place of Warry McLaughlin, twirled one of the best games of his career, allowing his opponents only three safe hits and not walking a man.

The only inning in which he was in any trouble was in the first, when the Farmers made two of their three hits. In this inning the tailenders had men on first and second with only one down, but Dixon succeded in extricating himself by fanning the next two batsmen. Only thirty men faced Dixon during the game. Nine of these were "strike-out" victims.

Dunellen scored all of its runs in the second innin. Contributing factors were a muff by Creedon of Dixon's fly; a base on balls to Wilson; a hit by W. Randolph, the ex-Farmer A. C. player, and a two-bagger by Gunzelman.

The game was replete with double plays, three being made by the Farmers and one by the Dunellens. Other features of the game were the hitting of Gunzelman, the base running of Trust, Brown and Dixon; of Randolph's solid drive and a great catch by Friele, who relieved Kachelries at short for the Farmer A. C., in the ninth. Friele jumped off the ground and speared the ball with one hand and easily doubled Bergen at first.

BAPTISTS MASSACRE PENNANT PROSPECTS

Tabs Put up Weak Defense and Lose in Disgraceful Fashion.

Playing the brand of baseball that is keeping the Athletics in last place, the Tab City League outfit met a disgraceful defeat at the hands of the Baptists on Saturday, the score of the game being 13 to 9. The Teetotalers set a record for local league circles. They permitted eleven run in the fifth inning. These runs resulted from nine hits, two errors and two or three cases of "nervousness"—perhaps, it was "exhaustion."

The Tabs started off well. Clarke singled, stole second and third, remaining there just long enough to take a breath. He hustled home on Smith's single. Wahl pushed out a "one-timer," Smith scoring. Wahl scored on Frankie Lee's single. The total of runs ran up to three, four hits having been made off Freddie Mills who, by the way, pitched a fairly good brand of ball, although he was never particularly puzzling to the Tabs. After this first frame, the Tabs did nothing for a while. The Baptists followed along in the same way until the beginning of the fifth. Then they got to Jack Denny to such an extent that one fan remarked that, perhaps the European war had "broken out over here." This is how the massacre began and ended—for it did, eventually end, destined not to be continued.

When Townley singled Patterson was safe on Clarke's poor throw to first. Garretson rapped out a single, Townley scoring. Terry's single made it possible for both Patterson and Garretson to dent the pan. Terry was out stealing second, Mehaffe gained a life on a fielder's choice that never amounted to anything. Banks singled, but Carlton Dunham fanned. Mills' one-base "bang" sent both Mehaffe and Banks over the pan. Gauler was allowed to walk to first unmolested and Wren Townley, up for the second time, was safe on Wahl's error. Dunc Patterson tripled, clearing the sacks. Jack Garretson followed with another triple, "clearing" Patterson. Jack scored on Terry's single, but Smith's throw to first caught a runner napping and the big inning was over. Business of remarking "it was rather hot out there on the diamond." Chorus of Baptist cheers greeted Mills as he ascended the mound. The Tabs did a little greeting, too.

Frankie Lee, with a single, a triple and a home run, had a big day with the stick. Jack Garretson singled, doubled and tripled during the fray.

ROYAL GIANTS TRIM JIM SCOTT'S TABS

"Senor" Maiden, in Debut, Holds Abstainers to Three Bingles.

With "Senor" Maiden pitching in "Stringbean" Williams' fashion and with the Tabs hitting "a la Milwaukee," the Royal Giants of this city, had no trouble defeating the Abstainers on Avon Oval yesterday. The score of the contest was 7 to 2.

Despite persistent rumors that he was going to employ a well known metropolitan moundsman, Pete Simmons, the Royal leader, announced to the unusually large crowd assembled to witness the battle that "Senor" Maiden, of West Tihrd street, was to be the pitcher. And "Senor" showed up unusually well.

Mickey McFadden adorned the mound for the Tabs and, after the fateful first frame in which he was reached for four runs, the Bound Brook twirler was not hit hard. In fact, he became much stronger as the game progressed and fanned the best Royal batters with apparent ease. However, the four runs scored in the first inning, coupled with three other counters scored at intervals, were enough to insure the Royals victory.

The only Tab tally was registered in the ninth frame, with one out. With Tone Denny and Wall perched on second and third respectively, Johnny Dixon doubled, scoring the two. Had it not been for Dixon's clout, "Rapid-fire" Maiden would have recorded a shutout victory. His exhibition of hurling ability surprised even the most sanguine of his followers—but three hits, one of them of the scratch variety—were made off his delivery.

Eddie Ford and Sidney Butler share honors for the Royals, while Hannon and Wall were the Tab leaders in this department.

KNIGHTS OF ST. PETER CONQUER "IRONSIDES"

But It Took New Brunswick Players Eleven Innings to Turn Trick.

The baseball game between the Knights of St. Peter, of New Brunswick and the Netherwoods, of this city, was one of the best attractions staged in the Middlesex city in some time. Although the Netherwoods lost 4 to 3, it took eleven innings for mound for the locals and permitted

Warry McLaughlin occupied the mound for the locals and permitted only two hits until the eleventh frame when he was reached for two bingles. Hayes, another southpaw, was on the hillock for the winners and, while he was not as invincible as Warry, still he was effective in the pinches.

Netherwood scored one run in the first inning in the following manner: Haberman walked; Brandt singled; Johnson filed out; Eddie Coughlan did likewise; but Matty Voughlin pushed over a "one-timer," Haberman scoring. Brandt was called out at the plate. The locals scored twice in the fourth, when Frederickson's single scored two men. PLAINFIELD CHECKS

Many New York business men have formed the habit of using New York checks. There was a good reason for this when checks on Plainfield banks were subject to an exchange charge in that city, but this is no longer the case.

Checks on The Plainfield Trust Company are now collectible through the New York Clearing House and commuters are beginning to realize that it is to their advantage to keep their accounts with us and receive

WHY BURDEN A FRIEND?

SERVICE
Capital, $100,000

The average individual is no more fitted to handle an estate than he is to conduct a law suit or cure a disease. You hire a lawyer to do the one and a doctor to do the other.

Then why burden a friend, a business associate or a member of your family, with the responsibility of being your executor and trustee? Few men are familiar with the duties of trusteeship or with the investment of trust funds.

Name this responsible trust company instead; it is organized for the purpose; equipped to meet every emergency; to transact any business which may arise in connection with trust service; and it is permanent; unaffected by the hazards of human life.
